Shuler Charges Fitts "Sold Out" In San Francisco

CLAIMS HE HAS INSIDE INFORMATION

PROBE TO BE ASKED

Declares He Is Sure That At Least 25,000 Votes Were Cast in 'Frisco

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29.—(UP)—District Attorney Buron Fitts was "sold out" in San Francisco and the Republican gubernatorial nomination "was stolen from him there," the Rev. R. P. "Fighting Bob" Shuler charged here today.

Shuler, for long a political figure in Los Angeles and a staunch supporter of the Fitts for governor move, said his information came from a person "who has inside knowledge of the situation in the north."

"I talked yesterday with a prominent citizen who is a city official," Shuler said in a formal statement, "both told me that it was openly said in San Francisco that there was something strange about the election there.

"It seems certain that Fitts votes were turned to Rolph and that there was some manipulation of the machines.

"I am convinced that Fitts was sold out and the election stolen."

The pastor stated that he was certain that Fitts received 25,000 votes in San Francisco although the election tally showed nowhere near that number.

"On the very face of it, it is absurd that Fitts should have received less than 7,000 votes in San Francisco. He has more American Legion support than that in the city.

"I do not doubt but that more than 25,000 votes were cast for Fitts in San Francisco.

"That corruption was practiced in the tabulation of returns as well as in the election itself is denoted on the very face of the returns.

"Whether or not an investigation can be made that will bring out the facts is a question, but I am convinced and I think 90 per cent of the people are convinced that Fitts was sold out in San Francisco and the election stolen to boot."

Farms Close Down During Torrid Days

King and Queen of England in Midst of Big Storm in Scotland Castle

LONDON, Aug. 29.—England, with a heat wave death toll of 36 in three days, faced increasingly high temperatures again today.

The thermometer registered two degrees higher than yesterday at corresponding hours, while swimming pools and ice cream venders did a big business.

Since stock brokers appeared in shirt sleeves and high hats because of the burning sun, conventionally clad business men and women have become a rarity. Even London dock workers went directly from pools to their desks, wearing light clothes over bathing suits.

The Peterboro brick factory ceased work and farming in various districts was suspended.

Two greyhounds, competing at the White City track last night, died and several others collapsed.

KING AND QUEEN IN SEVERE STORM

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Aug. 29.—(UP)—King George, Queen Mary and the Duke of York, were in the midst of a severe electrical storm today at Balmoral castle. The storm terrorized the population for a wide area around Balmoral.

The Duke of York was unable for some time to get news from Glamis castle, where their second daughter was born to the duchess last week. A telephone connection had been set up between Balmoral and Glamis but the storm damaged communication lines over the country side.

Many head of cattle were killed and property damaged considerably.

WM. J. MORRISON

Beloved veteran mail carrier, William J. "Jeff" Morrison, who closed 25 years of service as a postal employe today.

W. J. MORRISON ENDS 25 YEARS AS LETTERMAN

HONORING A VETERAN in Santa Ana's postal service, who made his last trips today over his route on Bush and Spurgeon streets in the residential district prior to retirement on reaching the age limit for postal service, clerks, carriers and officials of the Santa Ana postoffice assembled in the work room at 8 o'clock this morning, expressed their regret at his retirement, told of their appreciation of his friendship and loyalty and presented him with a Brazilian marble fountain pen set.

The retiring carrier, who today closed 25 years of faithful and efficient service for the postal department, is William J. Morrison, more familiarly known as "Jeff." He started on his last two trips among the many friends he has made in that part of the city today with words of sincere appreciation and friendship from Postmaster T. E. Stephenson and his

TEXTBOOK FOR CANDIDATE IS GIVEN PUBLIC

Long Promised Hoover Manual Made Public By G. O. P. Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(UP)—The long promised Hoover manual citing the accomplishments of the administration during its first 18 months was made public by the Republican national committee today in the midst of the interparty publicity war here.

Intended as a textbook for the congressional campaign, the manual seeks to show that the president has acted to fulfill 34 of the 35 platform promises of the convention which nominated him at Kansas City in 1928.

The single exception is plank 34 headed "The Negro" in which the party renewed its recommendation that congress enact at the earliest possible time a federal anti-lynching law.

In parallel columns, the book carries the platform planks adopted at Kansas City and the things Mr. Hoover and the Republican congress have done to fulfill their pledges. Opposite "The Negro" plank is a blank space.

The book sets forth the following major accomplishments:

Maintenance of economy at the Coolidge figure.

Accumulation of a first year surplus of $184,000,000.

Reduction of $1,160,000,000 in the public debt.

Reduction of income taxes by $160,000,000.

Enactment of the tariff and farm relief legislation.

Ratification of the French debt settlement.

Negotiation of the London naval treaty.

New policies toward Haiti and Nicaragua.

An enlarged program for inland waterways.

Better enforcement through the transfer of prohibition bureau to justice department.

"At no time in history has the personnel of the administration been of so high an average order as it is today."

The manual is intended for use by Republican campaign orators this fall. Government publicity bureaus have been working for weeks gathering the material for it.

TO DISCUSS CAMPAIGN TO BEAT ROLPH

C. C. Chapman of Fullerton Mentioned As Possibility As a Candidate

M'ADOO IS OUT OF IT

Second Meeting of Anti-wet Organizations May Be Called Next Tuesday

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29.—(UP)—With smoke cleared away from the gubernatorial battlefield, political interest in Southern California shifted today to a meeting here tomorrow of representatives from ten dry organizations, at which plans for entering a "bone dry" independent candidate in the November race will be discussed.

If the proposal to put a dry independent into competition with Mayor James Rolph jr., of San Francisco, Republican nominee by about 24,000 plurality, is found feasible, another meeting of the anti-wet contingent will be held next Tuesday.

At this session, it was said, plans would be laid for an all-state convention of dry forces and for an active campaign.

Tomorow's conclave was called by Mrs. Eva C. Wheeler, president of the state W. C. T. U., in her capacity as chairman of the "clearing house committee" composed of executives of various dry bodies.

While prohibition leaders in the south have refused to discuss possibilities for their proposed independent, William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the U. S. treasury, is regarded as under consideration.

McAdoo, now practicing law in Los Angeles, has declared, however, that he is "out of politics for good."

Other outstanding drys who were said to be possibilities included C. C. Chapman, of Fullerton; Judge Harlan G. Palmer, of Hollywood, and Judge Benjamin Bledsoe.

Because of the difficulties involved in placing an independent's name on the November ballot, some dry leaders were said to favor supporting Milton K. Young, Democratic nominee, at the polls this fall.

It was reported a committee would be appointed from the prohibition bodies to discuss with Young his views upon the liquor issue.

The plane "On To Oregon," was refueled at 6 a. m. at an altitude of 600 feet, which even then only provided poor visibility.

Notes dropped by the fliers said the ship was working well.

Calvin Coolidge Says

By CALVIN COOLIDGE
Former President of the United States

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 29.—The allegations in the recent criticism of one of the English naval reactionaries that the limitation treaty leaves their navy in a distinctly second place, after being compared with the similar statements by some of our own reactionaries regarding the resulting inferiority of our own navy, may well be eliminated from further consideration. The chief motive for the treaty was to prevent competition in building. The secondary considerations were the saving of expense and the extension of the policy of parity to all ships. Because the needs of the British were felt to differ from the needs of the United States as to types of ships and calibre of guns, parity could only be approximate. Experts differ about it. But the main object of preventing present competition was fully secured.

Further discussion of parity is not only vain but is almost an exhibition of an unfriendly attitude. Representatives of three great and peaceful naval powers have reached a temporary agreement mutually advantageous. It will be best for all concerned to adopt it and abide by it. No good purpose will be served by constant discussion of the relative strength of the different navies.

FIVE YEAR OLD CHILD DIES OF HIS INJURIES

CHARLES J. BEISER, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Beiser, of 917 South Garney street, died at the Santa Ana Valley hospital early this morning of injuries received when he was knocked down by an Owl taxicab, driven by Art Williams, in front of his home at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

Death was due to a fractured skull, although the child also received severe internal injuries and a broken leg in two places.

The accident occurred while Charles and a number of other little boys were playing. Charles suddenly ran into the street to get away from another boy and ran directly into the taxicab, according to a report made at the police station.

The body of the boy was removed to the Harrell and Brown funeral parlors here and Coroner Charles D. Brown announced this morning that he would conduct an inquest at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Harrell and Brown funeral parlors.

The infant was christened at a church ceremony late yesterday attended by her parents and her godfather, Lionel Barrymore. She was named for her aunt, Ethel Barrymore, her deceased grandmother, Mrs. Maurice Costella, and her mother.

MCADOO REFUSES TO DISCUSS POLITICS

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 29.—(UP)—William Gibbs McAdoo is not "talking politics" he said here today when asked by the United Press about reports that he might become an independent "dry" candidate for governor of California.

"You may tell everybody," McAdoo said, "that I am on a little vacation with my friend, H. B. R. Briggs, that I am out of politics, and that I am not discussing politics. We are on our way to the Pendleton roundup, and that thought is uppermost in my mind at present."

PLANE FALL KILLS TWO GIRLS, PILOT

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Two girls and the pilot with whom they were riding received fatal injuries in an airplane crash here yesterday.

The dead were: Rose Zajac, 20, Pearl Jabczynska, 18, and Arthur Devlin, 33.

It was the first time the girls had ever flown. Devlin, member of the 106th Flying club, strapped them both in the passenger cockpit of one of the club's planes and started off early in the evening.

He banked steeply when circling the field to land after a short flight and the plane went into a tail spin at an altitude of about 500 feet.

Miss Zajac died within an hour after the accident. The other two victims lived for several hours, dying late last night.

INVESTIGATION OF TRAIN CRASH BEGUN

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif., Aug. 29.—(UP)—An investigation into the collision of two Southern Pacific limited trains, in which 21 passengers and a trainman were injured, was begun today by state and railway officials.

The rear-end crash early yesterday between the northbound Lark and Padre trains allegedly was caused when the Lark ran through signals set against it. The Padre, running ahead, had stopped here for repairs to a leaky steam hose coupling.

T. H. Williams, assistant general manager of the Southern Pacific, headed the board of inquiry, which also included representatives of the state railroad commission and citizens of San Luis Obispo. Aiding them was President Paul Shoup of the Southern Pacific, who was on the Padre at the time of the accident.

STUNT AVIATOR TO FLY OLD AIRPLANE

CURTISS WRIGHT AIRPORT, Chicago, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Al Wilson, movie stunt aviator, will fly his antique 1911 Pusher plane from Chicago to Los Angeles, he told the United Press today.

"I'm going to fly that old plane to the west coast just to prove that the old style pusher planes are practicable," said Wilson, one of the most famous of American stunt pilots.

"I'll probably be landing in corn fields and barn lots and all sorts of places and there's no telling how long it may take, but I'll get there. I'll follow the southern route, of course."

SINGER MUST PAY WIFE $250 WEEKLY

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29.—(UP) The protests of Cliff Edwards, otherwise "Ukelele Ike," as to his lack of ready cash, had availed him little today in his fight against temporary alimoney to his estranged wife, Mrs. Irene Edwards.

Superior Judge Myron Westover, deciding a claim of Mrs. Edwards for funds pending a divorce hearing, ordered the stage and screen performer to pay her $250 a week. Mrs. Edwards had testified she needed this sum to "maintain her social standing as the wife of Cliff Edwards."

"Social standing is something I don't claim," Edwards told the judge. "I'm just a plain singer and pretty 'broke' right now, and anyway I gave her a $150,000 settlement when we separated."

and a group of navy officers were stationed around it as a guard.

The two men, carrying sandwiches and chocolate, expect to reach Tacoma in 50 hours, arriving at some time around 12 noon Sunday (P. S. T.) They plan to carry a gas supply of 1020 gallons estimated sufficient for between 55 and 60 hours of continuous flight.

A banquet for the American flyer and his pilot Harold Gatty was arranged for tonight by aviation enthusiasts. Bromley announced that he and Gatty would return to the flying field after the party to sleep.

The west-east flight, which was decided upon after an unsuccessful attempt to make a non-stop flight from Washington here, at first aroused objections from Japanese aviation authorities who declared the venture too dangerous. They finally consented to grant a license but warned the flyer that he could not expect aid from them if he was forced down after passing Iwate prefecture on his proposed journey. He was also forbidden to carry in his plane either explosives or a camera and to fly over Tokio.

Bromley declared his plane was in good condition. He was confident of a successful termination to the hazardous flight.

NEW YORK BONDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(UP—Severe breaks in Argentina securities, on fears of political disturbances in that country, unsettled the foreign list and gave the bond market a ragged appearance around noon today.

Nine Argentina issues lost a total of 14 points, heaviest recessions taking place in the 6½s of 1959, 6s B, 6s of September 1960 and 6s of Ostober 1959, which ranged from two to nearly three points. Brazil 6½s were under pressure selling off more than a point, while a slightly smaller loss was recorded in Chile 6s, Sao Paulo 6½s sold off 1½ points. International Railway of Central America 6s broke 4⅛ points.

The exception to the trend in foreign obligations were Mexican Bonds, which continued their advance of yesterday, scoring gains ranging from ¾ to 1½ points. U. S. government loans were firm and fairly active.

Leading railroads drew support after an irregulr opening, and gains were recorded by such issues as Missouri Pacific 5½s, Pere Marquette 4½s, Southern Pacific 4½s and Chicago Milwaukee St. Paul and Pacific 5s. Seaboard 6s eased ½ point.

Utilities and leading indutrial bonds were comparatively quiet, generally moving fractionally higher. A few oil bonds drew attention, while Warner Brothers convertible 6s gained ½ point to feature activity in the amusement group.

Conductor Kills Former Employer, Takes Own Life

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—(UP)—Grief over the loss of his job after 23 years of service was believed today to have been the cause of John Donlin, conductor, killing his past employer, Byron Gunn, superintendent of the Market street railway, and then committing suicide.

Donlin had been discharged recently by Gun after repeated warnings that he was drinking too much.

Yesterday, Donlin, with a grim set jaw, entered the car barn, and ignoring the salutations of his former comrades, proceeded to Gunn's office.

On Gunn's refusal to give him back his job, Donlin whipped out a revolver and sent a bullet crashing into the superintendent's head. Without a word the former conductor walked out into the hall, calmly refilled the .38 caliber gun and shot himself in the head.

DAREDEVIL DYING FROM PLANE FALL

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Ted Steelman, Baltimore daredevil, was believed dying today from injuries he received when he plunged 2000 feet into the ocean from a plane in his "human cannonball" stunt. A parachute he wore failed to open until too late.

Only his presence of mind saved him from instant death. He assumed a position that broke some of the force of his fall.

Steelman took the place of Harvey Powers, who originated the stunt for the benefit of sightseers on a steel pier. Powers was killed August 1 in a similar accident. He was shot from a cannon on a plane, and plunged down when his parachute failed to open.

fellow workers ringing in his ears. His retirement follows orders from the postal authorities at Washington, as he has passed the age limit. He observed his 70th birthday anniversary last June.

The veteran, who has spent his entire span of a quarter of a century of postal service through the Santa Ana office, is widely known in the city, and served for many years as secretary of the Odd Fellows lodge. The presentation of the gift of the clerks and officials of the postoffice was made to "Jeff" by Postmaster Stephenson, following an appreciation of his work by Sam Vogt, president of the postal clerk's association. Vogt declared that Morrison had made an unusual record and expressed the good wishes of his fellow workers.

In the presentation speech the postmaster expressed his appreciation of the integrity and faithful service of the veteran carrier, referred to the thousands of miles he had traveled in postal service, mentioned the world of friends that the man had made through his service and character, declared that he represented the finest and best in the postal service, and assured him of the affection of all postal employes. Stephenson also pointed out that this was the first time that a member of the postal service in Santa Ana had reached the retirement age while in active service. The postmaster also spoke of how well Morrison was liked by his patrons and friends on the route he had traveled.

Stephenson announced today that Lloyd Tucker would be transferred to Morrison's old route, the advancement of M. W. Guynn for senior substitute carrier and special delivery carrier to appointment as a regular carrier, the transfer of Dawson B. Young from the substitute clerk list to the substitute carrier list to fill the vacancy there, and the appointment of Harry A. Polk, of Los Angeles, and Cecil E. Hamilton, of San Bernardino, as substitute clerks. Polk and Hamilton are moving with their families to Santa Ana.

There are now 26 carriers and 21 clerks working in the Santa Ana office, with six substitutes in each division. C. C. Langley is foreman of the postal carriers.

GOOD TASTE IN CLOTHES

—a service that costs you nothing here

Getting the cost down is the keynote of most businesses this year—both wholesale and retail.

Hart Schaffner & Marx, always aggressive leaders, are giving us more at wholesale, and we are straining every effort to pass on to you even more than the wholesale saving.

FOR EXAMPLE—Hart, Schaffner & Marx have created a new suit value at $27.50; with 2 trousers $35. They've put more tailoring, richer linings, refinements in Gordian Worsteds.

All through the line you find these evidences of more for your dollar. Buy your clothes now and save.

But neither we nor the makers will sacrifice good taste in style, in workmanship, in pattern, simply to meet a price. We insist on good taste in the selection and in the selling of everything in our store and we lower the costs, too.

DEATHS

A WORD OF COMFORT

No one can become better than he is unless and until he recognizes his need to be made better. No one who nurses the feeling of outrage against God and of resentment regarding what he has to endure is capable of receiving help from his Father or from his brethren.

You must make the venture of believing that God loves you and that He is ready and eager to give you power to go bravely on, and then seek strength and courage in communion with Him, if you hope to struggle up from the slough of despond and to realize your splendid manhood.

MODERN MUSIC IS PLAYED FOR SERVICE CLUBS

BY RUTH ANDREWS

The customary throng of several thousand appreciative music lovers was in attendance last evening at Santa Ana Municipal band's regular weekly concert program in Birch park, directed by D. C. Cianfoni, and dedicated on this occasion to members of local service clubs. Selections from modern composers were featured with special emphasis being given to works popular in nature.

Well defined military rhythms of Chambers' "Chicago Tribune" march prefaced a pleasing rendition of the Suppe overture, "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna," expressive throughout of the vitality and fondness for motion outstandingly characteristic of the famous Belgian composer. Premiere local rendition of this interesting work was much enjoyed.

Delicate clarinet predominated in the opening theme, symbolic of dawn, read with restraint and contrasted by a more animated interchange of instrumentation in the succeeding movements, its staccato finale effectively drawn in presto tempo.

Luigini's melodious "Ballet Egyptien" with its five contrasting movements was much enjoyed. Characteristically accented Oriental dance rhythms and harmonic modulations allured with ever shifting eastern cotor, instrumentation throughout echoing the typical Oriental note, with its emphasis of native oboe, woodwinds, clashing cymbal, tambourine and tinkling triangle.

James Sewell, local baritone, took solo honors of the evening in a well contrasted song group, including "Rolling Down to Rio" (German), the favorite "Pale Moon" by Logan, with its hint of Indian romance. As encore, Sewell chose McGill's familiar "Duna," clarity of tone and diction outstanding in all his work. He was effectively accompanied by Miss Ruth Armstrong.

Announcement was made by Harry Hanson, president and manager of the band, in regard to the two remaining concerts of the summer series. Next week's concert will feature "Church Night," with a symphonic program, together with the appearance of the First Methodist church chorus choir and Mrs. F. W. Slabaugh, contralto soloist. The final concert of the series, scheduled for September 11, will be designated as "Santa Ana" night, with an all request program.

A succession of lilting themes from the graceful modern light opera "Maytime" by Sigmund Rombert was much liked, also the familiar old Tobani reverie, "Hearts and Flowers," long favored by band audiences because of its alluring melody.

The interesting descriptive fantasie, "A Vision of Salome," by J. Bodewalt Lampe was heard locally for the first time last night. This work, quite modern in treatment and of programmatic nature, opened with a characteristically Oriental dance form, rapidly succeeded by varying moods, and quite impressionistic throughout.

With definitely military note, Waldteufel's "Valse Militaire" made a vigorous finale, interwoven rifle shots startling, realistic and interestingly utilized in connection with the basic waltz theme.

CONTINUE HEARING ON FINE APPEALS

Hearings on the appeal of Robert W. Phillips and two other men from fines levied in justice courts for violation of provisions of the motor vehicle act, which were scheduled today before Judge James L. Allen, were continued for a period of four weeks when the matter was called in superior court today.

The cases are being appealed by the legal department of the Southern California Auto club on the grounds that arresting officers were not using cars painted white as provided in the act, at the time arrests were made which resulted in the fines. The Phillips case was appealed from the justice court of Charles Kinsler at Brea.

Mexican Sleeps Nine Days Under Deserted House

After he is asserted to have lain underneath a deserted old house at Stanton for the past nine days, Vicente Corona, 42, Stanton Mexican, was pulled out in a drunken stupor by Deputy Sheriff A. L. Stewart early this morning and taken to the county hospital in a critical condition.

Hospital attendants said that the man was suffering from a severe case of alcoholism.

Relatives of the man had been searching for him for the past week, it was reported. He was found this morning, and the sheriff's office was notified.

Hospital records show that an ambulance took Corona to the hospital on July 14 in much the same condition, after he had been found in a hole in the ground where he had slept for several days. The records also show that on June 23, he was brought to the hospital in a serious condition from alcohol, by members of his family.

A charge of drunkenness was lodged against Corona by Steward.

BARNHILL RESIGNS FROM STATE SQUAD

Vernon Barnhill, one of the oldest in point of service, of all motorcops in Orange county, has resigned from the Orange county state squad, because he is unable to ride a motorcycle any longer, it was made known today.

Barnhill, candidate for constable of the Santa Ana township, and one of the three high men in the run off in November, said today that his inability to continue riding a motor and the state's demand that all motorcops ride their iron steeds, caused him to tender his resignation, which has been accepted.

Captain Henry Meehan, state traffic officers' captain here said today that no plans have been made yet in appointing a new man to take Barnhill's place on the squad.

Barnhill said he would do nothing for the present, except campaign for the coming elections.

Report Paralysis Cases On Decline

No new cases of infantile paralysis have developed in Orange county since August 17, it was learned today from the office of County Health Officer K. H. Sutherland.

There are now two cases under quarantine at the homes of the patients. Margaret Reinhaus, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Reinhaus, of Santa Ana, who was the last victim of the malady, is to be released from quarantine September 7. The other victim, Stanley Betz, of Anaheim, is to be released from quarantine on September 2. There have been 35 cases of the disease reported in the county since the epidemic started in April.

Court Notes

Trial of the damage case of Caleb Rash against George A. Edgar, et al., which started yesterday before Judge James L. Allen, was continued when court recessed yesterday until September 12. Rash is asking judgment for $41,194.35 as a result of injuries he sustained last November when he was struck by a heavy cable used in moving a house after the cable had been struck by a car driven by an employe of Edgar, according to the complaint. Motions for non-suit, which were made by the defendants at the close of the plaintiff's case, were denied by Judge Allen.

Rafael Lopez, who had been charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder and who was given a jury trial which resulted in a disagreement and setting of the case for re-trial, appeared before Judge G. K. Scovel yesterday and changed his plea from not guilty as charged, to guilty of simple assault. The time for the pronouncement of judgment was set for September 2. He was tried for an alleged attack on Ignacio Savala.

Charging desertion, Loren M. Crane yesterday filed suit for divorce from Margarett B. Crane. They were married at Fairfield, Me., in 1925 and, according to the complaint, the desertion took place on Feb. 1, 1929.

George S. Dickson has brought suit against L. L. Mennes in superior court asking judgment for $2221.25 on an open book account for service rendered.

A note, which it is alleged is due and unpaid, is the basis of a suit which has been filed in superior court by Hollis Showalter against I. R. Shull. The amount of the note is $500.

Acting on alleged failure to make payments as due on two notes which were part of a series given for the purchase of a tire shop in Fullerton, Dick Keller filed suit yesterday against C. H. Selbrede, et al., asking judgment for $945.48. The plaintiff also asks for attorney fees in the amount of $200.

A decree of quiet title to property at Crestline is sought in a complaint filed in superior court by Carl T. Haish, et al., against Turner L. Melton as guardian of an estate.

The inventory and appraisement of the estate of Agnes E. Carroll, which was filed today with County Clerk J. M. Backs, shows a value of $82,154.28. The estate consists principally of real estate in Los Angeles, Santa Ana and Hollywood.

Charging cruel and inhuman treatment, Ione M. Johnston instituted divorce proceedings yesterday against Alvin B. Johnston. They were married in Placentia in 1914 and separated April 4, 1929. Mrs. Johnston asks alimony of $300 per month, $500 for attorney fees and custody of the four minor children.

Carl Settle, Huntington Beach man, charged with a statutory offense, was held to answer to the superior court from Justice Kenneth Morrison's court at the conclusion of his preliminary examination this morning. Bail of $3,000 was demanded.

Goitre Is Caused By Germ Claimed

PARIS, Aug. 29. — (INS)—An American doctor, Dr. E. O. Houba, of Washington, D. C., caused scientists from all over the old world to sit up and take notice when he recently declared before the Microbiological Congress now in session at the Pasteur Institute, that goitre is caused by a germ.

Dr. Houba explained how he had discovered this fact purely by accident, having left a piece of goitre tissue lying on a culture medium and going away to forget it. When, a few days later, he was about to throw it away, he noticed white blotches on the medium and found that he had bacteriological culture. With this he was able to inoculate animals and isolated the germ, thus assuring himself that goitre is not caused by a shortage of iodine in drinking water, as is generally believed.

The American doctor affirmed that he is confident that goitre, if taken in its early stages, can be cured by vaccine treatment.

VOTE CANVASS IS STILL UNDER WAY

The board of supervisors is continuing the canvass of returns from the primary election which was held last Tuesday and is anticipating completion of the arduous task by seven or eight o'clock tonight. Tally sheets are being checked against the reports made by the election boards to County Clerk J. M. Backs as soon as the count had been completed.

Some errors are being uncovered, it was reported by Supervisor Charles Chapman today, but he stated that it was not believed that the totals would be changed materially. The official count of the ballots by the board started at 1 p. m. yesterday. County Clerk Joe Backs and Deputy County Clerk B. J. Smith are assisting in the work.

Totals will not be available until next week, Backs announced today, as considerable time will be required to compute the total vote cast for the large number of candidates whose names appeared on the ballots.

FIRE AT CITY DUMP CAUSES SMOKE SCREEN

Even the city dump must have its share of publicity now and then.

Not satisfied with the meager "news breaks" accorded to it in the past, the depository of trash took the situation into its own control yesterday and threw a real scare into residents of this city by sending a cloud of smoke over the entire community.

Dozens of telephone calls reached The Register, asking where the forest fire was. The smoke was visible from the lookout station on Saddleback and the whole city appeared enveloped in haze from that point. The station called the Santa Ana fire department to learn if there was a fire in the valley.

Investigation by the fire department revealed the fact that the fire in the city dump, located to the southwest of the city near Buaro road, had been burning through material which probably was oil soaked and that a great volume of smoke had resulted from a very small blaze. No damage was done.

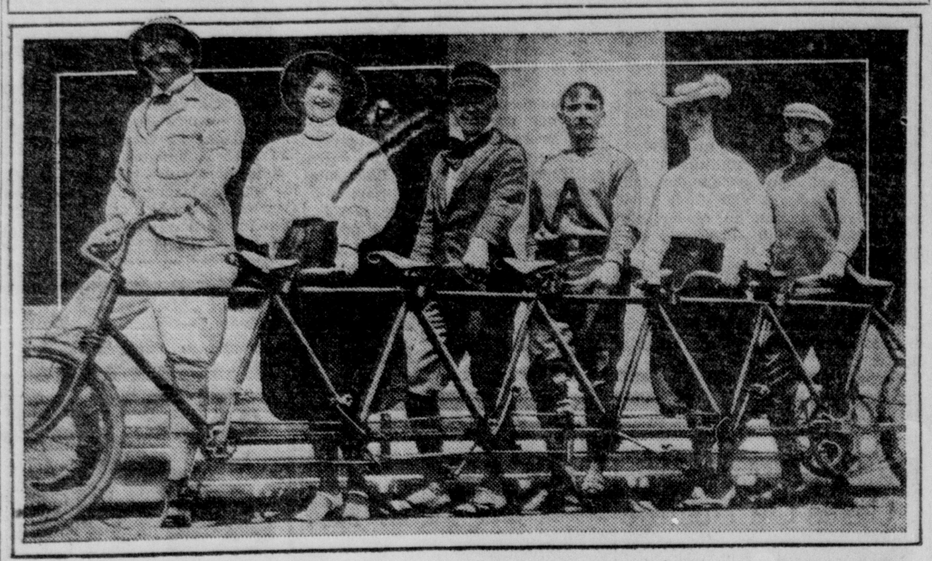

After its half hour of smoky glory the city dump lapsed back to its normal state.

A HEAVY BILL

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 29.—W. T. Scott, of Texarkana, bought a radio set here for $118. The dealer had the set packed for shipment to Scott's home and sent along a bill. Scott came into the store one day, apparently with a limp. The store keeper, thinking that Scott had come to pay his bill, got out a pen to receipt it. To his surprise, Scott dumped 11,800 pennies on the counter—$118 worth. They weighed 84 pounds.

HOW THEY ROLLED ALONG IN 1880

The group standing behind the bars in the picture below is not, as you might suppose, the Florodora sextet in disguise, but six smart guests at a fashionable Del Monte, Calif., hotel, who donned old-time togs to celebrate the hotel's 50th anniversary. Besides this six-place tandem there was lots of fun with parchesi, lotto and croquet as the calendar was turned back half a century. Left to right, the riders are: Robert Cooke Smith, Miss Mary Green, Gordon Nelson, Winsor Josselyn, Miss Harriett Snider and Talbert Josselyn.

FOX AUDIENCE SEES PREVIEW OF 'LILLION'

BY REVIEWER

"Lillion," latest all talking picture by Fox, from the famous stage play by the same name, was previewed by a Santa Ana audience at the Fox Broadway theater Wednesday night, and from expressions heard the latest Frank Borgaze directed feature is destined to be one of the most pleasing picture entertainments that has been produced this year.

The preview was brought here by Norman Sprowl, Fox theater manager in Santa Ana, after Fox executives had been convinced that Santa Ana was not "preview worn" and from the response given, it was indicated that other big previews would be forthcoming in a short time.

"Lillion" is a story that makes an audience think. It is a story with a moral—the moral being that even should we be allowed to live again, we would not correct our faults in this life. The picture brings this out strongly and in such a manner that it can not be missed.

Charles Farrell has the lead in the film. He plays Lillion, a master of women who cares nothing for them. Eventually he falls in love with a girl and is married. They have a child. Then Lillion dies and he goes to heaven. The scenes showing his trip to heaven, to hell and to purgatory are rather unreal, in that he makes the trip by train, and is out of line with the rest of the picture, but the audience gets the idea anyway. Just the same, the train scenes are rather absurd in the film.

After 10 years, Lillion gets a chance to come back to earth on the same train, and he goes about slapping women as he did before. He promptly is jerked back to hell and the story is ended.

Whether an audience likes "Lillion" or not, it is the kind of a picture that will be remembered and talked about a great deal.

GOLF LINKS AT PARK WILL BE OPENED TODAY

Six o'clock today has been set as the hour for the opening of the Oaks miniature golf course at the entrance to Irvine park. The presentation of a grand prize for men and an equally desirable prize for the woman making low scores will be one of the highlights of the evening.

The course has many unusual features, double curves, single curves, the figure fours, the clover leaf, a shot through a cannon, a difficult play through four wells, an intriguing shot under a fountain and a long sand shot are to be found on the links, where the hazards are all natural formations on the links.

The course is on a hillside and during the day is shaded by lovely old live oaks. A few great sycamores are to be found at the entrance and the grounds are attractively landscaped with fountains, pools and shrubbery. The links were planned by Ed Dickinson, of Balboa.

There is no time restriction as to hours of playing and the time until which the links will be kept open, will be announced later. The course will be brilliantly lighted and Senator Nels Edwards of Orange, will make the initial shot.

The Oaks is owned by J. E. Bermann and J. A. King, with Bermann as the manager.

Petition Seeks Reorganization Of Farm Center

A business meeting of the Fullerton-Placentia Farm center was held at 7:30 p.m. yesterday in Placentia, where the proposed breaking up of the combined groups and forming them into separate centers was discussed.

Definite action was taken by the Placentia group when they circulated a petition among the members which will be presented to the directors of the Orange County Farm bureau at their meeting Thursday. This petition asks the Farm bureau to reorganize them as separate Farm centers.

There will be a temporary organization meeting next week, it was announced.

EXTENSION CLASSES OPEN IN SEPTEMBER

The extension division of the University of California will open four extension classes in Santa Ana during the week of September 14. The classes will include one in music appreciation for teachers of elementary schools, to be in charge of Mrs. Frances H. Beeson; one on the modern novel, in charge of Mrs. Eleanor H. Northcross; and a class in elementary short story writing, and another in magazine writing, the two classes to be directed by Eric Howard. The classes will meet in the Santa Ana Junior college and in the Julia Lathrop school, at 1120 South Main street.

To the Voters of Orange County:

I want to thank you and the host of loyal friends who supported and worked for my re-election last Tuesday.

WESTMINSTER

A long letter telling of the old home in England details of his trip over the interesting news of relatives, has been received from Thomas Trenery, who recently sailed from New York for Cornwall, England, which the Trenery brothers left many years ago.

Mr. Trenery is the first of the family to return and he mentions the fact that there are so many changes he can hardly find his way about to old landmarks. He notices especially the present practice of building bungalows of the same type as those popular here and which were unknown in their day in England. Many carnivals are held in the little seaport town near Truro, which was the family home and this is a decided change as it has grown to be a seaside resort, where previously it was a fishing village. Mr. Trenery has not been at all well since his arrival in England, suffering greatly from rheumatism which was unknown to him here. He is visiting with is two sisters and a number of nieces who live in the vicinity of the old home.

The first automobile constructed by Cugnot, in 1769, is still on view in the Paris Museum.

STILL OWNERS. GET PROBATION. JAIL SENTENCE

Jesus Galban and Panfilo Diaz, who recently were found guilty of a charge of owning and operating a still after a jury trial, were granted probation today by Judge James L. Allen after a hearing on their application for probation. The court set the probationary period at two years and made as a condition of probation a sentence of two years in the county jail. The court also ordered that the prisoners work at the county park during the term of their incarceration. Judge Allen, after determining that the men were both natives of Mexico, instructed the district attorney's office to ascertain if the men could be deported and ordered their deportation if this could be arranged with immigration authorities.

Arthur L. Vitale, who appeared before the court on a probation hearing in connection with his previous plea of guilty to a charge of burglary, was granted probation for a period of four years on condition that he serve a six months term in the Orange county jail. Vitale is also to work at the county park during his term. He told the judge that he took $38 and a revolver from the living quarters of the caretaker at the old country club on Newport bay, in order to get funds to get back to his home in San Francisco.

Vera Gillette, who was scheduled to appear before the court on a probation hearing following her plea of guilty to a charge of and who had been released on her uttering a forged check for $25, and who had been released on her own recognizance, failed to appear, and her attorney, Tom McFadden, informed the court he had been unable to get in touch with her since last Thursday. A bench warrant for her arrest was issued.

J. C. FRANKLIN, PIONEER HERE, DIES IN HOME

Jesse C. Franklin, 92, wealthy retired Santa Ana property owner, and one of the oldest residents of the county, died at his home at 716 North Main street last night.

A resident of Santa Ana for the past 49 years, he came to California in 1881, from Reno, Nev., where he had resided for 16 years, following his trade as a harness maker. He left his home in Indiana to come west during the Civil war.

An early property owner in Santa Ana, he had held property from a time when it was worth little until it developed into prominent down town business property and it had made him extremely wealthy.

The family is well known in Santa Ana. The family came here from Santa Rosa, California, and Mr. Franklin had lived in the state for 74 years.

He is survived by his widow, Ella D. Franklin. Three children, born of the union, have died here in years past.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow from the Smith and Tuthill funeral parlors.

Ortiz To Await Hearing In Jail

Jesus Ortiz, Placentia Mexican, who is charged with murdering Emma Chavez, 21, his paramour in a Placentia apartment, early on the morning of June 19, by cutting her throat from ear to ear with a razor and firing a shot into her body, was removed from the county hospital to the county jail late yesterday, where he will await trial.

Ortiz will face a jury with the story that the death of the woman was a suicide pact and that he did not murder her, it is understood.

Police in Boston are equipped with new type vision glasses enabling them to see both before and behind.

CONTINUE INN OPERATIONS TO LAST OF YEAR

Operation of St. Ann's Inn after its pending sale to Orange county, which is scheduled to take place Sept. 30, will be continued until some time in December, R. L. Bisby, manager of that well known hostelry, announced today. Possession of the building and grounds is to be given the county on January 1, he stated, and the present plan is to continue operation of the hotel as long as possible before that time.

Willard Smith, chairman of the board of supervisors, stated today that no plans had been made with reference to what offices would be moved into the new property or how the change would be effected, but he declared that the building would be remodeled for office purposes.

The Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce, which maintains offices in the south wing of the structure, expects to retain use of its quarters under the lease it now holds, for the next five years.

A statement issued by the board of directors of the St. Ann's Inn corporation, explained that the hotel, which had been built by funds secured through popular subscription after the close of the World war, had been a financial burden on its backers and that no satisfactory solution had been provided in the past. Consequently when the opportunity to sell the building and grounds to the county was presented, the board of directors agreed to sell, retaining, however, the furniture and fixtures, which are to be sold separately.

The statement expressed appreciation of the loyalty of a group of six service clubs and stockholders who have supported the hotel by their patronage, and also expressed sincere appreciation of the loyalty and efficient service of Bisby, who has managed the institution for the past six years.

BUILDING PERMITS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Building permits for this month showed an increase of $189,701 over those of August last year, it was revealed today by Building Inspector Sam Preble. There were 79 permits granted for a total valuation of $351,936, as against 85 permits valued at $162,235 in August of 1929.

The building work here this month showed a marked gain over July of 1930, when 61 permits valued at $239,877 were granted by the city building department.

Figures show that 556 permits, repesenting buildings worth $1,483,276, have been issued in Santa Ana since the first of the year, as against 585 permits and $1,180,379.50 for the same period last year.

The majority of the permits issued this month were for residences and alterations.

BROCK GIVES TALK ON PEST CONTROL

Members of the Santa Ana Realty board were interested listeners this noon, when A. A. Brock, Orange county horticultural commissioner, delivered a talk on post control.

Brock stated that the amount of money lost every year by the ravages of the different pests very nearly equalled the amount of money spent on insect control. He said $1,400,000 was spent on pest control last year.

A list of figures was read by the horticultural commissioner which represented the trend of citrus tree planting in the county, and the increase of acreage. One thousand to 3,000 acres of Valencia oranges have been planted every year for the past eight years the speaker said.

Carl Mock is to be program chairman for the next meeting, it was announced, and has secured for the members Harry Lewis, who has recently made a trip through South America and will give a talk on the economical and agricultural conditions of that country.

Convicts To Wear Pajamas, Slippers

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 29.—(UP)—There will be no steel bars, high walls or fences to confine inmates of an intermediate prison reformatory near here when it is completed, but the prisoners will be forced to wear pajamas and house slippers.

Only when the young convicts work in a factory or on the farm of the prison reservation will they have other raiment and this will be taken from them and substituted for the pajama uniforms when they return to the barracks. The plan is expected to deter escapes.

CONTINUE CASE OF GOODWIN TO SEPTEMBER 12

Due to the absence of Lester Slaback, member of the staff of official court reporters, who handled the record during the second trial of Philip A. Goodwin, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder, a motion to vacate and set aside the judgment in the case, which was to be heard today, was continued until September 12.

Goodwin's attorney, Ruel Wood, stated today that if the motion was granted it would automatically mean the granting of a new trial to the prisoner, who is now serving his sentence in Folsom prison and that he would seek a change of venue to get the case out of Orange county. He also asserted that if the motion was not granted he would appeal the matter to the fourth district appellate court.

Goodwin was sentenced to life imprisonment more than two years ago on a second trial, the first in 1926, resulting in a death verdict, which was successfully appealed. He was charged with the murder of a Los Angeles bond broker.

PROBATIO ASKED BY MRS. CAROTHERS

Mrs. Tressa Carothers, former assistant secretary of the Orange Building and Loan association, whose alleged peculations with accounts of that company resulted in a charge of grand theft being filed against her by the office of District Attorney Z. B. West, entered a plea of guilty to the charge when she was arraigned before Judge James L. Allen in superior court today.

The information on which she was arraigned charges theft of $255 on January 15, but an audit of accounts at the loan company which is being made indicates that the loss will reach $11,000 or $12,000, Chief Trial Deputy District Attorney W. F. Menton stated today.

After entering the plea of guilty the young woman entered oral application for probation through her attorney, Franklin B. West, and the court set September 12 as the time for hearing on the application. She is at liberty under $2500 bail.

LIBERTY LOAN POSTER STAYS IN ORANGE SHOP

ORANGE, Aug. 29.—Bringing back memories of the fight for funds to carry on the World war, a large Liberty loan poster displayed during the war now hangs on the wall of Meadows Print shop at 122 South Orange street.

Thousands of these posters were distributed over the country to carry the name of Clyde Forsythe, former Orange resident, the man who drew the picture. Forsythe has been gone from Orange about 30 years but attended school here in his youth. Mrs. Alice Armor of 363 South Orange street, was one of his teachers in the elementary school.

The poster is very striking, showing a typical doughboy returning from the battle line with his rifle on his shoulder and three German helmets in his hands. In the background are the ruins of war while a terse caption says, "And they thought we couldn't fight!" Many colors are used in the picture.

Charles Meadows, proprietor of the shop, received the poster during the drive for Victory Liberty loans and after the drive was over, left it in the shop. Several years ago, he procured a large frame for the poster and hung it on his wall. It measures 40 by 28 inches. Forsythe is now a prominent artist and painter and is nationally known.

Besides this poster, Meadows has many other pictures and signs which have been in the shop a long time. When he came to Orange 14 years ao, he hung up several pictures which still remain. The head and hat of a girl in the shape of an artist's pallette hangs over his desk while a wind whipped American flag hangs on another wall. This flag was in front of the shop for many years but was taken in some time ago.

A large photograph of Calvin Coolidge remains just as it was hung in the fall campaign of 1923 and another large picture of Herbert Hoover is beside it.

The banquet hall was beautifully decorated with dahlias, zinnias and China asters. After the meeting, refreshments of ice cream, cake and coffee were served. The tables, instead of being placed end to end as usual, were arranged individually making angles across the room.

Mrs. Louise Bradshaw, past matron, was assisted by Mrs. L. W. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Murphy, J. F. Rowley and Mrs. Meta Ellis. The next meeting of the chapter will be held September 11. During the summer, only one meeting has been held each month because so many families are away on vacations. Starting with the next meeting, the regular schedule will be resumed, which calls for one every two weeks.

OFFICER FAILS TO SOLVE SHOE PUZZLE

INGLEWOOD, Aug. 29.—The officer thought Lady Godiva was doing her stuff again.

Strolling down the avenue here, the guardian of the law saw a pair of women's shoes reposing on a hydrant. He stopped short and started searching for other garments. None was apparent. Neither was the occupant of the shoes.

So the officer sighed regretfully, stuck the shoes under his uniform and turned them in at the station.

HIGH MELON PRICE

PRINCETON, Ind., (UP)—A high price was paid by Leonard Harper, Elberfeld, Carlyle Greenlee and Claude Mcreary, both of Mackey, Ind., when they received a $10 fine and a 60-day sentence to the penal farm each. The three had stolen 23 melons and planned to take them to a picnic at Elberfeld. All 23 of the melons they picked were green.

NEW FIXTURES INSTALLED ON STREET LIGHTS

ORANGE, Aug. 29.—Residents and business men on West Chapman and Cypress streets were gazing this afternoon on a new set of globes for the street lights following the installation of the new fixtures by the Orange Electric company under the supervision of C. C. Bonebrake, city engineer.

Work on the street standards started yesterday morning and was expected to be completed this afternoon. The new fixtures are rather long and were formerly around the plaza but when the plaza was relighted with new fixtures, the old ones were stored. At the last meeting of the city council, Bonebrake was given permission to exchange the stored lights for the round ones on West Chapman avenue.

When Bonebrake investigated, he found 15 fixtures, so the lights could only be exchanged as far as Cypress avenue. The round globes formerly on the lights will be used for replacement purposes throughout the city, especially in the eastern section, Bonebrake stated. The new globes are very similar to the General Electric fixtures now in use on North Orange street and are said to combine the latest ideas in scientific lighting with beauty.

NATIONAL AVIATION WEEK TO BE STAGED

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(INS)—Plans for a National Aviation week are underway here according to an announcement by the American Society for Promotion of Aviation.

The approval of President Hoover will be asked for this Aviation week, which it is hoped will be held yearly.

One of the features of the week will be a new airplane ride price of one dollar per person. Children will be carried for fifty cents. It is hoped that by making the price of a ride so cheap that everyone will avail themselves of the world's fastest means of travel.

Aviation authorities have found that after a person has taken his first airplane ride he becomes an enthusiastic booster of the new sport.

KEEP BICYCLES OFF HIGHWAYS. AIM IN STATE

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Bicycles must be barred from California highways.

With this slogan, persons interested in bettering motoring conditions in this state are preparing a bill for submission to the next legislature which will clear state roads of this menace.

In its semi-annual report the division of motor vehicles reported a growing number of accidents caused directly by bicycles on highways.

"Innumerable crashes can be attributed to motorists endeavoring to avoid hitting careless bicycle riders," said one official of the division.

"We would welcome a law removing these menaces from state highways. In these days of fast moving traffic the bicycle is an anachronism. It is a relic of the past century and has no place in modern traffic."

It is understood the law would not include horse-drawn vehicles. Inclusion of this item might render the whole act unconstitutional, it was said. These vehicles are probably as much of a menace to safe driving as bicycles, but they still constitute a legitimate means of transportation, backers of the bill said. Any attempt to legislate them off highways would probably be declared unconstitutional by the courts.

The attorney general's office unofficially declared that bicycles could be forbidden on state highways by law, although impossibility of extension of the act to horse-drawn vehicles was concurred in.

Active support of insurance companies and automobile associations was anticipated by proponents of the act.

The last legislature enacted a law providing that pedestrians on highways must proceed so that they face oncoming traffic, as a means of preventing injury to themselves and possible accidents to motorists. The proposed law, according to state officials, would be acceptable as a further step toward making automobile travel as safe as humanly possible.

ALLSTATE
Time and again the ALLSTATE tire has by test been proved superior to other "first line" tires . . . Early in the season Sears-Roebuck established the ALLSTATE price at an average of one-fourth lower. Today, one out of every ten tires bought for replacement is an ALLSTATE. This success prompts competing producers to advertise tires at the "same low price" you pay for the ALLSTATE. But—they neglect to tell you that those tires are "second-line" brands. Also—they fail to mention that the ALLSTATE . . . a "first line" tire built to specifications which provide unrivalled service and satisfaction . . . still sells one-fourth below comparable brands.

EXPLAIN WATER DISTRICT PLAN FOR SOUTHLAND

ANAHEIM, Aug. 29.—Emphasizing the need of co-operation of communities of Southern California in the problems facing this section in the future, officials concerned with the Metropolitan water district urged cities not now members of the district to become acquainted with the organization and the methods for bringing water to this section in the future, at a meeting of the Orange County Engineers' club and the Orange County League of Municipalities at the Elks club in Anaheim last night.

Legal and engineering phases of the project were brought to the attention of the representatives of the cities by George H. Hutton, one of the directors of the Metropolitan Water district who is one of the legal advisors, and Franklin Thomas of the California Institute of Technology and vice chairman of the board of directors of the district.

Thomas, who told of engineering problems with regard to the district, declared that the question before cities not members of the district is why they should join the district.

The speaker told of the history of the water situation in California, stating that the abundance of underground water in the past had made possible great development here in spite of the scarcity of rainfall. He pointed out that in the past there have been periods of dry weather followed successively by seasons of abundance of rain, and although there has been no major drouth within the past 30 years, a basis for predicting future problems cannot be made on this fact as past history has shown, he said. He compared conditions with those of other districts where although there are no underground channels of water, the abundance of rainfall annually and the great above ground reservoirs makes possible a large supply of water for all city uses.

The rapid development in the past two or three decades has been using up with great rapidity the water supply here with but one result possible, either the water will be used up or the level will become so low that salt water will pollute the present pure water, Thomas declared. He further pointed out that if the salt water does mix with the fresh water, it will take an enormous amount of pure water and many years to again purify the polluted water, with the result that the cities will suffer and the assessed valuation of the cities will be materially decreased. Assuming that the assessed valuation of the combined area in the Metropolitan was seven billion dollars and that through excessive shortage of water the assessed valuation was decreased by five per cent, Thomas declared that this loss would be much more than enough to carry out the Metropolitan water plan as now proposed. He declared that it would be poor business to run the risk of the great loss through a shortage of water when the plan that would meet all future needs could be built at less cost than this loss would be.

The matter of directors representing the various cities was discussed by Hutton, who declared that the city of Los Angeles, which contains approximately 82 per cent of the total assessed valuation of the district, will have 50 per cent of the voting power and never more than this amount. He pointed out that in this way the city of Los Angeles could never control the district, thus assuring the smaller cities a part in the management. He pointed out that the ratio is one vote for every ten million dollars of assessed valuation.

Necessity of eliminating any feeling of distrust between districts in Southern California and substituting a co-operative spirit was emphasized by S. C. Evans, Riverside, of the Boulder Dam association.

COMMISSION'S ARCHITECT TO SEE PARK SITE

SAN CLEMENTE, Aug. 29.—H. W. Shephard, landscape architect of the California state park commission, will be here Saturday to inspect the property offered to the state and county for a state park site. H. H. Cotton, a member of the syndicate headed by Ole Hanson which controls the property, was informed of Shepard's visit by letter fro mthe state offices of the commission.

Cotton made the offer to the state park body of 260 acres of land, one mile of ocean front, a nine-hole golf course with nine other holes ready for seeding for the sum of $500,000, half to be paid by the county, half by the state and San Clemente to spend $100,000 of this sum in preparing the other nine holes of the course for play.

ANAHEIM ADOPTS WATER MEASURE

ANAHEIM, Aug. 29.—An important feature of the meeting of the Anaheim city council Wednesday night was the passing of a resolution relative to the requirements of the Metropolitan Water District act, levying a tax upon taxable property within the district including taxable property lying within Anaheim

Of the money to be derived from this district, Anaheim's proportion is estimated at $2502.62.

Ordinance No. 543 was passed amending sub-section 7 of section 10, an ordinance providing for the licensing of business, professions, shows, exhibitions and games conducted or carried on in the city of Anaheim, fixing the rate of license thereof, and fixing penalties for the violation thereof.

The amendment reduces the rate from $200 to $100 per year for selling at auction goods, wares and merchandise from a fixed place of business in the city.

Demands were drawn on the treasury to the amount of $9699.36 of which $9464.76 comes from the general fund, $205.35 from improvement and $29.25 from the redemption fund.

Carl A. Lemeke was appointed by Chief of Police James Boudin as deputy patrolman to serve without pay.

SLOWEST BOAT MAY WIN RACE OFF NEWPORT

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 29.—Whether practice works out like theory will be tested in one of the events of the speedboat races scheduled here Sunday and Monday, Labor Day.

Theoretically, all boats in the "bang-and-go-back" race each day ought to finish in a dead heat. Here's how:

The boats will start from the Balboa ocean pier, racing toward the Newport pier. At a certain point, of which none of the racers will be apprised until a signal is given, each boat will start back for the point of beginning.

One of the rules is that the same speed must be kept up after the "go-back" signal as before, and an observer will be in each boat in this race to see that this rule is adhered to.

This means that the slowest boat going out will have the shortest distance to return, and boatmen declare that the winner should be the one that can turn around the fastest. Theoretically, all should get back at the same instant.

There will be three other events each day. At 10 a. m. there will be an event for boats 16 feet and under in length, at 10:30 one for boats between 16 and 33 feet in length, the bang and go back race will start at 11 each day and at 11:30 there will be a free-for-all.

Cups will be awarded for first, second and third in each of the four events, by the Newport Harbor Chamber of Commerce, provided there are five entries or more in each, the winners to be decided on the average showing for the two days.

The races will be plainly visible from the two piers and from all points between them, a distance of nearly two miles. Entry blanks may be obtained at the Chamber of Commerce office.

8 TROUBADOURS GIVE PROGRAM ON THURSDAY

ANAHEIM, Aug. 29.—Closing a series of eight colorful weekly concerts at the amphitheater in the city park through the courtesy of the city of Anaheim, a program of entirely Spanish music was presented last night to the largest crowd of the season. The amphitheater was filled to overflowing and a large crowd stood for the program.

Eight Spanish troubadours, headed by Raymundo Gonzalez, filled the air of the typical summer night with gay melodies of the Spanish countries, while Maria del Castillo, sparkling Argentine soprano, sang Especially brilliant were the dances by De Lara and Lolita, which added a touch of flashing color to the program. One change was made in the program in that instead of Louis Alverez, tenor, was Bernito Salinas, tenor, who won the approval of the large assemblage.

According to Dr. W. L. Bigham, program chairman, the summer series of free concerts is one of the most popular activities of the city and the response is very strong for a continuation next summer. Practically no criticism has been voiced in connection with the program, Dr. Bigham states, and it is likely that another year will bring a series of even better programs than those of the past two summers.

SEPARATE FARM CENTERS PLANNED

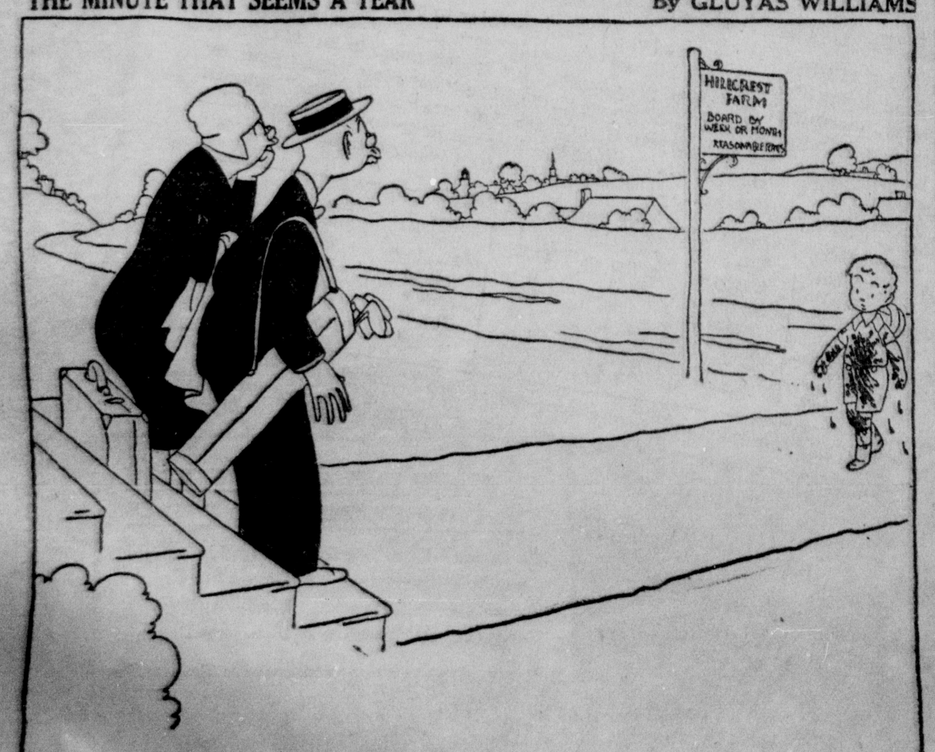

PLACENTIA, Aug. 29. — Directors of the Placentia-Fullerton Farm Center voted to dissolve that organization at a meeting held in the chambor of commerce hall, Placentia, last night, in order that the two communities might form separate centers.

The accumulated funds of the hyphenated center amount to nearly $300 and the money is to be turned over to the farm bureau with instructions that it is to be divided equally between the two centers if they are formed. Jack Prizer, chairman of the meeting, stated that Fullerton members felt they had been given a square deal and that the only satisfactory course was to divide the amount equally instead of on a membership basis.

Ralph McFadden introduced a plan to the effect that T. E. Pickerill, secretary of the chamber of commerce, be made secretary of the new farm center, and that a ground floor office be secured, the two organizations dividing the expense of the office between them. It was agreed that in an agricultural community this procedure works out well.

Mr. Lathrop will occupy the house at the corner of Hansen and Clair roads. The 40-acre ranch was formerly owned by Mrs. Steinbauer, of Pasadena, a sister of Mr. Lathrop. Mr. Stewart managed and subdivided it for a few years.

Mrs. Carl Karstens, living southwest of town near the Hensen road, has purchased a new coupe. She had it insured by Alfred Hansen, who has insured 25 cars in the past two weeks.

RAILWAY CLERK RECALLS RIDING IN FIRST AUTO

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—A 70-year-old man who made a record for the first phonograph, rode in the first automobile, and hired the first vaudeville actor for a traveling circus, now is taking his first long vacation, a permanent retirement from government service.

He is Charles W. Ford, former railway mail clerk, who was placed on the retirement list on his 70th birthday. And now that his working days are over, Ford finds plenty of time in which to reminisce.

He recalls years ago when he was a page in the United States Senate. An obscure inventor had left a strange device in the Senate patent committee rooms pending granting of a patent. Young Charley Ford sneaked in there one day and delivered an old-fashioned "spell-binder" into the mouthpiece.

Ford had made a recording for the first phonograph and years later, Thomas A. Edison—not quite so obscure an inventor—presented him with the cylinder recording of his voice.

When the young page's father—who had been a Kentucky senator—left the political world and moved to Baraboo, Wis., Charley Ford joined the government mail service on the Chicago & Winona Railway postoffice division. It was here that he met the Ringling brothers before the day of mammoth circuses, and he persuaded the brothers to hire their first professional actor for a road show.

Later Ford became a reporter for the old Chicago Times. The fascination of railway mail work struck the young man again, and he re-entered government service. During the World's Fair of 1893 he was detailed to take part in the government exhibition, and to work in the temporary postoffice on the fair grounds.

"One day I was working on the special mail car we had at the fair," Ford recalled, "when a gentleman handed me a card and said he had a horseless carriage he wanted me to ride in. Well, I took the ride, but it was not until after I had returned to the mail car that I found out that I had been riding with Elwood Haynes, inventor of the first motor car."

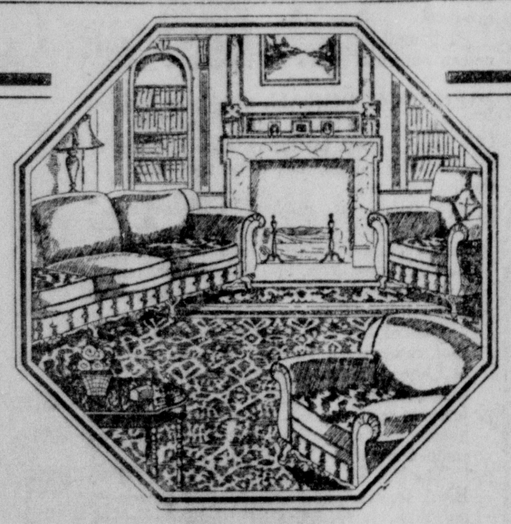

Ford took his first extended vacation, not because he wanted to stop working, but because there are such things as government rules. Ten years ago when he had completed 34 years of government service, he was eligible for a pension, but his interest in mail work caused him to get extensions of time until this year.

Amusing stories of very famous men who have quaked with fear when made to stand before a microphone and broadcast to unseen audiences

This minister . . . representative of a nation noted for its stolid calm . . . held an elaborate sheaf of notes . . . but his hand trembled so nervously that he could not read his own words.

Prince Albert de Ligne of Belgium . . . had an enthusiastic listener in the form of a little daughter. . . . She wanted him to speak to her over the radio. . . . He did, told her to go to bed.

Will Rogers, audience-broke, was mediocre on the air . . . until they gave him an audience in the studio. . . . Then he became himself again.

STAGE FRIGHT is an old malady. And everyone has heard of folks who were camera shy. Complexes and phobias have become as common as measles with the popularity of the newer psychology.

But to date no name has been invented for the strange behavior to be observed in the big radio broadcasting rooms. It might be termed "microphone panic," or possibly just "mike madness."

And the bigger they are the harder they have often fallen.

World figures — diplomats, foreign celebrities, national statesmen and even professonal performers of the stage and screen have been known to behave most singularly once they were barricaded in the little broadcasting room with only a microphone and an announcer between them and "that great unseen public" that you hear so much about.

"That great unseen public" has many a laugh coming at the expense of men who are world figures.

For the average man, whatever his station in the world of affairs or of public entertainment, is still quite unused to "doing his stuff" in a theoretical vacuum. The reactions are widely varied. Men who have faced vast audiences and swayed them with a fiery phrase tremble like stage amateurs upon their first appearance. Others, accustomed to facing crowds, forget time and place while prancing about as though on a platform, ignoring the fact that the microphone must receive first consideration.

Thus, anyone who has ever watched Rudy Vallee perform, for instance, will have noticed that he seems to be caressing the little instrument of sound conveyance, with his head nestled against it as though relaxing on a comfortable pillow.

ON the other hand, I have it from the "inside history" of the Columbia station that one of the ranking foreign ambassadors, whose name is deleted because of the confidential nature of the occurrence, was called upon to speak at a Sunday afternoon "Conclave of Nations" program broadcast from Washington.

A number of other features preceded his appearance before the "mike" and, having been advised to arrive early, he had been sitting around for some 10 or 15 minutes waiting his turn. As the minutes went by he appeared to grow more and more restless, perching on the edge of his chair and glimpsing frequently at his notes.

A few moments before he was to begin, a studio assistant came to him and whispered that he would go on at a given signal. Suddenly the mike was shoved before his very nose and the first words the "unseen audience" heard from this world famous figure were "Well, is it my turn to talk now?"

So embarrassed was he at discovering that this had gone out to the listeners that he stuttered and stammered for several moments before swinging into his talk.

Will Rogers, with years and years behind him as a public performer and national clown, presents an interesting case of "audience psychology." When Rogers was first being broadcast, a station arrangement was hooked up in his western home because business affairs kept him there. And the story goes that the two maiden efforts, while fair enough, were not in the true Rogers style. They were so-so, and that was about all.

Not so many weeks ago he was brought on to New York. Some smart studio psychologist figured out that Rogers was accustomed to having an audience laughing with and at him while performing and that this greatly added to his inventive ability as well as to his method of delivery.

An invited audience of some 600 persons packed the broadcasting room to the doors. Many of his old cronies from the days when he appeared in Ziegfeld shows were brought around for a reunion.

Rogers went on in high good humor. When he spun his funny lines, the 600 laughed and frequently applauded. Within a couple of seconds the "trouper" that is in all good theatrical folk had made its appearance. It was one of Rogers' most successful broadcasting performances, and he has been at ease ever since.

Prince Alfonso of Spain . . . wanted to shout over the "mike" . . . when told that the hook-up was nation-wide.

Senator Hiram Johnson . . . puts on a great show at the "mike" . . . gesturing violently as though before a huge audience.

THE Prince Alfonso of Spain, the first cousin of the king, it will be recalled, was a passenger on the recent Graf Zeppelin flight. Arrangement had been made for a broadcast from the Spanish embassy.

Just before he went before the "mike," Harry Butcher of the Columbia forces took him aside.

"You realize, of course," explained Butcher to the royal novice, "that we have the entire country linked. When you make your address it will carry over the entire nation. It will be carried 3000 miles out to the Pacific Coast."

The prince tried for a moment to grasp the extraordinary distance covered.

"In that case," remarked the prince, "I presume I shall have to shout, shall I not?"

During the winter, a minister from one of the more stolid countries whose reputation for calm unexcitability is considerable was called in on the Conclave of Nations series. He arrived with an elaborate sheaf of notes in his hand. But when he stood up to read them, his hand was trembling so nervously that he could not read his own words. He filled in time for a moment with trivialities and sat down on the trembling hand, transferring his speech to the other. Soon this hand was shaking as badly as the first.

In his perplexity the speaker looked wildly about for a second. Then he laid the papers flat upon a desk before him and sat on both his hands.

Naturally, the office staff had to keep a straight face while he presented this ludicrous picture of sitting there before the "mike," both of his hands tucked solidly under his legs so that they could no longer shake. He finished, almost prostrate from nervousness and embarrassment.

And, until this moment, no one in his "great unseen audience" knew the difference.

President Hoover . . . had to be broken of finger-tapping . . . which sounded like hoof-beats over the "mike."

CHARMINGLY human little moments often creep into broadcasts of famous people and the novelty of the "voice on the air" has its home as well as its public connotations. A wife or father or sister may be so accustomed to having a husband, son or brother appear in the public eye that it gets to be a monotonous commonplace. Having heard speeches time and again, they might not turn out to listen were a talk given in a public hall or theater. But they all tune in to hear "how he sounds on the air."

And this is the story of something that happened the first time that Prince Albert de Ligne, ambassador of Belgium, talked to that "great unseen public."

Before he left his ambassadorial quarters to make his bow to the American public, he left his wife and little daughter at the embassy. Like most children, his own little girl is quite a radio fan.

"Daddy, say something to me," she pleaded.

And so he promised that somewhere in his speech she would get a message.

Half an hour later a celebrated foreigner was making a typically dignified address. Suddenly just before he closed he made a brief apology to the public.

"Now," said he, "I hope you will all pardon a personal word. I made a promise to my little daughter who is listening in on her daddy over at the embassy. I said I would have a message for her and here it is, 'It's time for you to go to bed now.'"

Admiral Byrd, who faced the terrors of the Polar region with a smile and a slap on the back to his fellows, grows most serious-visaged and self-conscious in the face of so harmless an instrument as the "mike."

Anyone who observed him speaking into it in the introductory scenes of the remarkable film record of his exploits must have noticed how he dodged from looking into the camera lens and how uncomfortable he frequently appeared, often rocking up and down on the balls of his feet, though presumably at the wheel of a ship. News reels also caught something of this in scenes from his public broadcasting on the occasion of his welcome.

The young men who have control of the National Radio Forum at Washington will tell you, on the side, that Senator Hiram Johnson of California puts on a most amusing show when faced with a "mike."

Senator Johnson, as most of the nation knows, has more than a passing reputation for table thumping and fist slapping. In the heat of a controversial argument he will swing wildly in the air and shake a menacing finger by way of emphasis.

GETTING warmed up to his subject, the gesturings began to appear. Quite oblivious of the fact that a very senstive instrument was in front of him, he began to shake his finger at the "mike." Once or twice he tapped it—a slight matter which might possibly sound like an approaching hurricane.

But when he doubled up his fist and began to swing wildly, there was more than slight anxiety about the place. Suppose he should, by accident, hit it and knock it over! But fortunately all the swings were misses, and a sigh of relief passed across the room. The senator mopped his perspiring brow and left the room, quite unaware of what had almost happened.

Well, it so happened that the senator went on the air with a speech concerning the London treaty and why America should reject it. He warmed up with about 180 words a minute, as against the normal rate of about 100 or 120.

Alister MacDonald . . . had to walk up 12 flights before broadcasting. . . . He deprecated skyscrapers in his talk.

A favorite story of "amateur broadcasting":

SENATOR BORAH, though he initiated the National Radio Forums and has a profound respect for the radio as a means of reaching the public, has a hearty dislike for the microphone.

The senator is another "audience man." The "mike" provides him with little inspiration. While admittedly one of the better radio speechmakers, his dislike in speaking to a funny-looking piece of metal has been shown in more than one speech.

One of the broadcasting surprises of the year came when James J. Davis, secretary of Labor, suddenly burst into song during a talk and showed the country that he had a first-rate tenor voice. It was the first time in history that a cabinet officer had gone into competition with the songsters of the air.

The late team of Moran and Mack, "Two Black Crows," had a method of broadcasting that always attracted studio attention. Having a "team act," with their lines typewritten before them, they kept thinking up devices for being comfortable and at the same time close together.

Finally they perfected a plush-covered stand with two large grooves. Each stood in a groove, with the typewritten lines in front of them. And most comical they appeared.

Alister MacDonald, son of the British premier, caused more than a little comment when he made his initial broadcast. Those who tuned in on the visiting celebrity may have wondered at his antagonistic commentaries on skyscrapers and metropolitan life.

But just behind the scenes one could find an explanation. It so happened that young MacDonald was scheduled to talk on a Sunday. The elevators, for one reason or another, happened not to be running. So he had to climb some 12 stories to get to the broadcasting room. He arrived out of breath and in ill humor. All of which he reflected in his speech.

President Herbert Hoover had to be cured of a habit of tapping his fingers on a desk while he made his speeches. Reading from a script in front of him, the president did not realize that the sensitive "mike" magnified this tapping to the sound of hoof beats on a race track.

The Other Bullet

By Nancy Barr Mavity

"I don't know much, really," Aline said slowly. "That seems queer, doesn't it? It sounds silly to talk about a man's charm, but I don't know how else to express it. It made you forget all about commonplace tangible facts. He lived so avidly in the present, as if he were snatching at it. And then some shadow would seem to come over him and he'd rush off, as if he were running away from something he was trying to forget, and had been forced to remember."

"This is bound to be pretty painful for you—like a dentist's drill," Peter said whimsically, to cover his genuine pity. "But you'll have to recall everything you can. I don't suppose he sat down and told you the history of his life, but there must have been plenty of little things to indicate who he was and where he came from. By the way, it's funny that with all this publicity, none of his relatives turned up."

"He never spoke of having any. And no, it isn't painful to look back. It's something that happened a long time ago. When—when Marjorie told me what she did, it was like being caught in an explosion. There are things you just can't endure—the humiliation and the shock of it. But I don't feel that way any more. I don't even hate him.

"As for what went before, it's simply—vanished, like a light that's gone out. I've found out that you can do terrible things because you can't help it. If all that Marjorie said was true, then I suppose he couldn't help it, any more than I could when I ran down the path with Max's pistol. And being humiliated just doesn't seem frightfully important any more. Perhaps it's lucky that I haven't any feeling left. It ought to help me to think clearly—to see him as he was. Only there's so little that seems to explain anything."

"You never can tell," Peter said encouragingly. "To begin with, he was an unusual type to be a ranch manager. Where did he come from?"

"He showed Max references from Australia, where he'd spent some years on a sheep station. He really knew a great deal about sheep—he had plans for weeding out the culls and breeding the sheep here for quality, the way they've done there. And yet this really expert knowledge of sheep seemed just one of the things he'd picked up along the way. He didn't care about it, the way Max cares about engineering, for example."

"And he never mentioned his people—his home?"

"He mentioned lots of places, casually; but I don't think there was a place in all the world that he recognized as home. He used all sorts of odd slang—Cockney, and pigeon English, and South African Dutch, and Malay. But it always gave the impression of being in quotation marks, as if he'd picked it up for fun. He'd read everything under the sun. But—why, I never thought of that before!"

"Of what?" Peter prodded as she lapsed into thoughtful silence.

"I was about to say that he was highly educated. But it suddenly occurred to me that he must have educated himself through his own reading, rather than by going to college or having much ordinary formal instruction. There were the queerest gaps in his knowledge—things that any high school graduate would know. For instance I said once that something was 'an unknown quantity—like X,' and he said, 'What do you mean by that?'

"'Why, in algebra, you know,' I said, surprised that he needed to have it explained.

"'I never studied algebra,' he said in the queerest voice. And that was one of the things that set him off."

"Set him off?" Peter reiterated the words with a sudden accession of interest.

"Yes, with all that sense he gave of hurling himself into the present moment, he would have fits of melancholy, when he went off by himself and sometimes walked about all night long."

"'Hexing' Schnitzler's fields," Peter suggested.

"What?" Aline turned sharply in her seat, as if she feared that he had suddenly taken leave of his senses.

"Oh, there's an old man that thinks Mortison dealt in witchcraft," Peter explained absently. "But go on. What else would 'set him off?'"

"I don't remember—they were such queer, inconsequential things. Once it was about hit-and-run drivers. There'd been a case like that on the highway—just a tramp. The man who did it was never found—I don't suppose they looked for him very hard. But I couldn't help wondering what it would be like to know that you had struck a man, and then had gone on and left him. Don didn't seem specially interested—but he went up into the hill pastures and didn't come back for three days. I don't know why that came into my head just now—it's such a silly thing to remember. He'd have those periods of melancholy, and then he'd throw them off as if by main force of will, and plunge into the maddest sort of high spirits. I think that was part of his compelling charm—his shift of mood, always one extreme or the other. And the touch of mystery added to it."

"Well, it may have added to his charm, but it certainly adds to our difficulties," Peter said cynically. "It's all very well for a man to be bumped off when you know all about him and the only unknown factor is the murderer. But when anybody takes pains to conceal his past while he's alive, it certainly adds to the problem of discovering who killed him. He's helped to cover the murderer's tracks in advance. The mystery of his life complicates the mystery of his death. It adds infinitely to the possibilities of injecting a lot of perfectly unknown quantities. We may not have to look back of Mortison's arrival in Hangtown to explain his murder. And then again we may—that's the devil of it!"

Peter whirled around the steep edge of an overhanging cliff in silence. Then he added with a sigh: "All we can do is to begin with what we've got. Who do you suppose would want to take those letters? And why by all that's holy did you write them in the first place, and not see that they were destroyed in the second?"

"I don't know who took them—that's the worst of it! And you don't need to tell me that I was a fool to write them, only of course you never think of those things beforehand. I wasn't being sensible. I was completely swept off my feet. They were really just notes that I tucked under the door for him to find when he came back from the farther pastures. He used to go up to see for himself the effect of different sorts of feed, and examine the sheep with the idea of scientific grading. Somehow one never thinks of one's letters causing trouble. That seems to belong to other people, whom one never knows but just reads about in the newspapers."

"Those other people probably felt the same way about it—till it happened," Peter grunted. "And you didn't even have the sense to warn him to destroy them?" His tone was one of indignant disgust.

"I tell you, I didn't think! I was in love with him! I knew, somewhere outside myself, that it wouldn't last, but while it lasted I couldn't look beyond it. In fact, he told me once that he was saving them—to recall these days to him, he said, sometime long afterwards when he would be far away. All the time I seemed to know that he would go away. Perhaps that was why I let myself go—until there was no stopping."

"Yes," Peter mused, "he did have a way of keeping things—an odd habit, for a man who moved about so much. It's lucky for us he did; that is, it may be lucky, if we can find out what his collection of symbols meant. I can't for the life of me figure out what became of your letters, though. I guess we'll just have to drop that for the time being, and turn to something else. We may get a line on the letters later. By the way, did you ever see this?"

Peter maneuvered Bossy to the edge of the road, and stopped. He drew the Florentine picture frame from his pocket and passed it to Aline. She took it wonderingly, bending low to examine it by the tiny bulb on the dash-board light.

"No," she said slowly, "I've never seen it before."

"Then that's a washout and I was counting on it quite a lot." Peter's voice revealed the depth of his discouragement. "Every time we start, we run up against a blank wall," he said gloomily.

But Aline was still gazing intently at the dim and faded face of the photograph.

"There's something very like Don in this," she said. "The shape of the mouth—and across the eyes—From the dress, it must have been taken about thirty years ago." Her fingers trembled with eagerness as she closed the case and held the cover close to her eyes, straining to distinguish the intricate lines of the half obliterated design in its center.

"I think," she said solemnly as she returned the case to Peter, "that the woman in that protograph is Don's mother."

"But why are the other faces cut out?"

"I haven't the ghost of an idea. But at the time that picture was taken, Don would have been just about the age of one of those little boys."

"Are you sure? We can't afford to get side tracked on a wild goose chase. The picture's so dim—mightn't it be just a chance resemblance, strengthened in your mind because you're looking for it? Things like that do happen, you know."

Aline shook her head.

"It isn't reasonable that a man would carry a picture about with him for thirty years unless it meant something," she said. "Don had deliberately cut himself off from his past—that's clear. But he couldn't quite let it go completely, for all that. I suppose nobody can, unless they're too stupid to care. It would be like destroying one's own identity; and somehow we do cling to ourselves, even when we don't want any one else to know. There's an 'I' that we can't quite will to lose altogether."

"I suppose you're right—but it doesn't help much. Suppose the woman in the picture is Don's mother. We still don't know who she is, nor who he is, either." Like all mercurial temperaments, Peter sank to depths of discouragement commensurate with his heights of enthusiasm.

Aline turned on him furiously. He caught her outstretched arm just in time, as she lifted it to fling the photograph over the edge of the car into the canyon below.

"Oh!" she exclaimed tempestuously. "If you're going to act that way about it, I won't tell you any more. Of course it's only a little thing, but it's something. If you treat your first bit of luck like that, you don't deserve to have any more."

In the darkness, Peter's face was slit by its widest grin.

"I won't act that way again," he said with exaggerated meekness. "It isn't much of a clue, but it's the onl yone we've got, so we'll treat it with respect. Of course, we may not be any forwarder, even if we can trace the picture, and God only knows how that can be done."

"I'm sure I don't know how to go about it, but you've got to find out. That's what you're here for." There was invincible determination in Aline's voice. She was no longer the broken woman of the courtroom, clinging for self-protection to the shreds of her defiance.

Peter chortled aloud at this version of his reason for existence. But Aline disregarded his levity.

"Of course the picture may not lead us to Don's murderer," she admitted. "But the first step is to find out who he really was, even if it leads us back where we were at the beginning. It's the only way we can sort out the possibilities, although we may have to eliminate them afterwards."

There was a puzzled look in Peter's eyes, but he thrust aside the question that obtruded on his rising spirits. He had tested the calibre of his ally, and was ready to trust his luck. He had guessed that Aline had intelligence and now he found that she had persistence as well. With that combination on his side, he might get somewhere!

"That 'first step' is a pretty long one—but we'll see how far we can go," he said cautiously. "You threatened not to tell me anything more. There is a 'more,' then?"

"There's this." Aline closed the leather cover of the photograph case and held it towards him. "Did you look closely at the design on the back?"

"Yes," Peter said, "but I couldn't make it out. It's too full of curlicues, and it is almost rubbed out anyway."

"I know," Aline admitted. "But I know what it is. I've seen it before, or at least the same design. I saw it on the day I saw the Chinese box!"

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Tilden says he probably will continue to play tennis for years, "dropping out a round or two earlier each year."..Boston fans say Big Ed Morris isn't taking the job of pitching for the Red Sox seriously enough to suit them..Horace Lisenbee is like "Rube" Walberg in that he has nerves..he lacks self-confidence..walks batters in the pinches.."Rabbit" Maranville is a great hand to steady a pitcher..when a moundsman starts to falter, "Rabbit" starts swearing at him..calling his ancestors peculiar names and all that..instead of the college yell which most players hand the pitcher when he starts going haywire—"Rabbit" says a few harsh words that perk the lads right up and they start throwing strikes all over the place.

HERE'S THE DOPE

Gallant Fox lost a race the other day to a 100 to 1 shot. It was the first time the Fox tasted defeat as a 3-year-old. After the battle of the mud, the experts dragged out the mud-pot and started flinging a bit themselves. It seems Gallant Fox had been slipped some knockout drops with his mash.

Mr. Woodward, owner of the champion and Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, trainer, laughed at the rumors that the Fox's feed had been tampered with. To begin with, there was not a chance to dope the Fox. Six men watch the horse constantly, and they are men Fitz can depend upon. Not only these men, but a half-savage dog keeps strangers away from the Fox's boudoir. You couldn't get in there with a search warrant.

Where these "dope" stories originate it is sometimes hard to determine. Unless the creators of the fiction are experts, taking an easy way to keep their forecasts unsullied, the people who start such tales are anonymous.

OTHER TIMES

This isn't the first story of that nature. We can remember as far back as 20 years, reading a tale of the same sort after Jim Jeffries was beaten at Reno by Jack Johnson. It was whispered that Jeff had been given something with his oats, too. The truth was that age and nerves beat Jeff. All night before that July Fourth debacle, Jeff had been sleepless.

The advance stories from Jeff's training camp had painted him as in perfect physical condition. There were glowing reports about his stamina and power. It was discovered when he fought Johnson that he was merely a "shell" of his former self. The experts had been fooled, and the drug story was broadcast and given credence in a number of places. You still hear it occasionally.

Dempsey was given something in Philadelphia. Some churl had slipped something into his cheesecakes. He didn't seem to be the man that damp night there under the lights that he had been expected to be. It was hard to realize that the Dempsey of Toledo had become the Dempsey of Philadelphia. But it was true. Tunney's punches were the only dope handed the Mauler.

It was heard recently again, a new version of the same old tale, when Sammy Mandell lost to Al Singer. Some Borgia had put snuff in Sammy's soup. We hate to suspect the "experts" of petty chicanery such as this. But if not the scribes, then who?

CANNY CONNIE

The boys are saying the Athletics are "in." But that isn't what's worrying Connie Mack, the man who is generally known as "the lean, kindly leader of the A's." The 1930 American league pennant seems to be cinched for the team, but Connie Mack isn't holding any celebration over that just yet.

"We may have a great club," said Mr. Mack the other day, "I don't know. We can't be rated as a great club on what we did last year. No

EIGHT CLUBS TO PARTICIPATE IN PENNANT CHASE

Sunday baseball, once the district's most popular sport, is due for an immediate rejuvenation with all athletic centers in Orange county co-operating.

Plans were well under way today toward the organization of an Orange County league, operating along much the same lines as the old Harbor league that developed a number of fine players.

Representatives of seven teams started the ball rolling at a meeting here last night at the Victor Walker sporting goods store, 219 West Fourth street.

They were Santa Ana, Huntington Beach, Laguna Beach, Seal Beach, Cypress, Anaheim and Brea-Olinda. The other franchiseholder probably will be Anapauma Rancho. D. Eyman Huff, sponsor of the Anapauma club, was in Sacramento and unable to attend the session.

Final plans and preparations will be taken next Thursday night when team managers gather again to adopt a schedule, set a date for the opening of the race and arrange other business details.

Sponsors present were Ben Smith of Santa Ana, Jim W. Culver of Huntington Beach, E. W. Elliott of Laguna Beach, Clark Williams of Seal Beach, Steve Luther of Cypress, George ("Rube") Hall of Anaheim and Walt Cullen of Brea-Olinda. All these cities have parks except Santa Ana and Seal Beach which plan to play as traveling teams.

Manager Smith expects to recruit a well balanced aggregation of Santa Ana players by signing a number of the members of the Santa Ana Stars, crack night baseball team.

Each team will pay an entry of $25 of which $10 will be returned if its schedule is completed. The other $15 will go into a fund which will be divided by the one-two-three teams at the finish of the race.

The season will be a split one and the clubs will play three or four times around, depending on the size of the membership.

Home teams will receive 75 per cent of the gate receipts, the traveling club receiving the rest.

EXPULSIONS FOLLOW CAMPBELL TRAGEDY

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—(INS)—As the aftermath of the death of Frankie Campbell, San Francisco heavyweight, the state athletic commission today had dealt out wholesale suspensions.

The licenses of the following were ordered suspended:

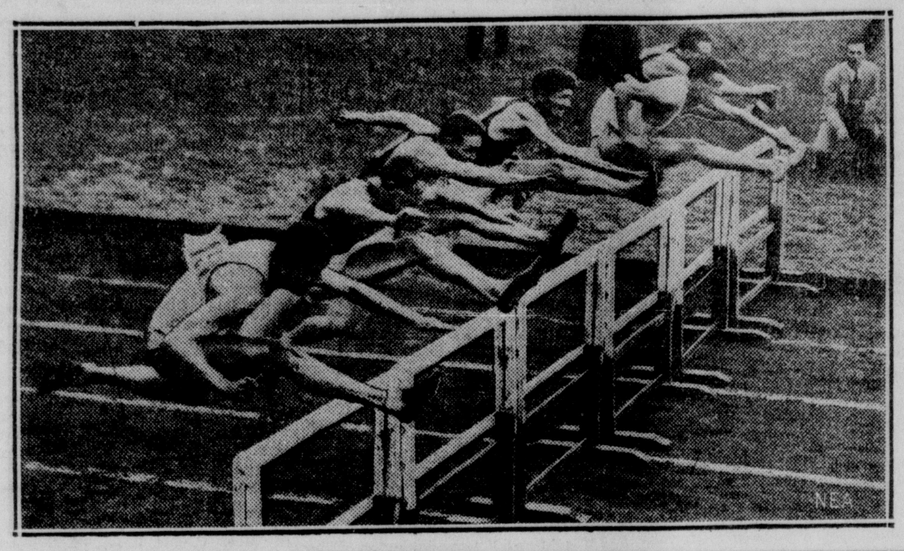

Max Baer, Campbell's opponent; Toby Irwin, referee of the bout; J. Hamilton Lorimer, Baer's manager; C. E. Working, Campbell's manager; and the seconds of both Baer and Campbell.

Meanwhile, Baer, who was arrested on a manslaughter charge, is at liberty under $10,000 bond.

Campbell was buried yesterday.

EVEN STEPHEN—BUT STEPHEN WAS FIRST

HEAVYWEIGHTS BORE FANS AT RING PROGRAM

There must be something to this mind-over-matter stuff.

The "beeg, strong fellers" of boxing have been reading up on what happened to poor Frankie Campbell, and you realized it today if you chanced to be one of the unfortunate few out at the Orange County Athletic club here last night.

Promoter Henry T. Foust tried his best to bolster a feeble lineup of heavyweights by an extra length card, one totaling 34 rounds, but quantity was a poor substitute for quality and increased bulk only accentuated the weakness, of the program.

The card was full of heavies and near-heavies, and there is nothing quite as awful as big men who won't—or can't—fight. Numerous substitutions also detracted from the appeal. All in all it was the poorest show the fans have seen at Delhi since the good "Doctor" Foust took charge of fistic operations on the southside.

Haywood Beats Rudzinski

Jack Haywood, colored, and Frank Rudzinski, the latter shoved up from the scheduled semi-wind-up, met in the main event, Haywood winning as he pleased. The bout went the six-round limit but Haywood could have stopped the big Russian on a moment's notice.

Referee Bob White kept urging Haywood to bring up his heavy artillery, but the big black boy was thinking about Campbell and Baer and was content to earn a decision. He won every round. Rudzinski came in with a pan that looked like he had just had a quarrel with an electric fan.

The main spot was positively terrible, and most of the fans were on their way home before it came to a close.

Leroy Haynes, another black giant, was not quite as timid as Haywood. He knocked out Glen Thompson in five rounds. Haynes weighed 190, but Thompson didn't look to scale more than 165. Thompson was plenty game and fought back the best he could. Promoter Foust is seldom guilty of mismatching but the jovial promoter slipped up when he yoked these two.

Smith Easy For Cadena

The special event between "Red Feather" Cadena and Bert Smith was an easy mark for the Indian who won every frame. It was too one sided to be interesting.

"Wild Man" O'Hannigan, clown fighter of the "Society Red" Millet type, beat Benny Stinson, La Habra youngster, three of four rounds but White gave him a draw. O'Hannigan throws gloves from all angles, laughs, makes faces, jumps on the ropes and all that sort of thing. He is a pretty fair boxer, too.

The only real fight of the whole show was between Jack Dunseith and "Bud" Coogan, another sub. White called it a draw and everyone was satisfied. Coogan swings wildly and takes 'em on the chin to land 'em in the pantry, but he is a willing mixer.

Vic McNeal, colored, kayoed Max Hernandez in the third round. McNeal had his own way in this spot.

Eddie Reinhart, formerly known as O'Day, won all the way from Getsell Hood in the opener.

Urban Hernandez and Jimmy Fox head next Thursday's card.

DOEG, LOTT OPPOSE ALLISON, VAN RYN FOR DOUBLES CROWN

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 29.—(INS)—It will be Johnny Doeg and George Lott, the defending champions, against Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, the Wimbledon title-holders, in the final round of the national men's doubles tennis champions, tomorrow at the Longwood Cricket club.

Doeg and Lott came through after a blistering five-set match with "Big Bill" Tilden and Frank Hunter in the semi-final round winning 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 9-11, 6-2.

Allison and Van Ryn defeated Berkeley Bell and George Mangin, 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

Joe Ochoa, Anaheim's "big shot" hurler, had a tough time winning his first game in the Santa Ana City league last night, but finally slipped through to a 5-4 victory over the slipping Pacific Telephone company, and succeeded in pitching the Eastern Oil company into first place.

"Bomo" Koral used to be the team's ace flinger but when he was declared ineligible last week the Oilers obtained the services of Ochoa.

The fast-ball moundsman was touched up rather freely in the early innings but was blazing them past the Pole-Climbers toward the end. Jerry Heard, Garden Grove first sacker for the season just closed, was on the initial hassock for the 'Phonemen so they will have a tough time protesting the presence of Ochoa in the Oilers' lineup.

Max Castro gave the league-leaders all the trouble they wanted, allowing only seven hits himself. Successive bingles by Miller and Wooster broke up the game for him in the last of the seventh. The score:

CARNERA READY FOR HIS FINAL 'SOFT TOUCH'

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Down in Atlantic City tomorrow night, they again are going to slip the log chains off Primo Carnera, the beeg caribou, and let him ramp and stamp and champ in the good, old medicine show routine — perhaps for the last time before he breaks in with the championship flight, perhaps for the last time anywhere.

He will dally with an experimental guinea pig called Riccardo Bertazolla, who is doubtless no better than his name implies, and what Carnera may do and how he does it will be of considerable import. The man either is very good or very bad; therefore, his next time out may always be his last or the beginning of a very useful life.

Some Compromise

The department of immigration itself was a bit nonplussed by this matter not more than a few weeks ago. It even went so far as to order the fellow to leave the country but a compromise was effected whereby he promised to stay almost indefinitely. It was all very simple. The department told Primo to go but he said he would be glad to stay, so everything was fixed up nicely.

However, even though he finds it inconvenient to leave the country just now, he wants to do the right thing by the government and will begin tomorrow night by leaving Atlantic City. It is only a coincidence that about $100,000 is liable to leave with him. They tell me this fight can't miss.

Soft For Primo

The arena, according to estimates, will seat 40,000 and, with a million people at the resort over the holidays, it ought to be like selling tickets at a subway station.

This Bertazolla has nothing but size and a resolute chin. He has never been knocked out, they say, but neither have I, so that's all even. The answer means about the same in both cases, namely, it isn't always the chin that counts but the fist that hits it.

Considering that Bertazolla himself can't hit hard enough to knock your hat well back on your ears, the foregoing would seem to place all of the proof on Primo's hitting. Assuming that the other chump will be in there trying, then it ought to narrow down to a question of which will succumb first, Primo's hands or the chump's face.

WESTMINSTER AND ONTARIO IN GAME

Westminster, champion of the Orange County "B" league, and Ontario, winner of the American "B" league, tonight begin their two-out-of three game series for the Southern California minor league title.

Tonight's game will be played at Ontario.

Daley Leads Stars; Reds Raise Tariff

Leavitt Daley and "Rosy" Merrill are still battling for the honor of leading the Santa Ana Stars with the willow for the entire season. Daley topped the roster for league games, but dropped a few points to the Rose in the recent series with Whittier.

Bill Cole is second, Randolph Bell third and Wayne Nelson fourth. They are all over .300.

The averages follow:

	AB	R	H	2B	3B	HR	Avg.
Daley	133	33	57	9	3	2	.429
Merrill	142	35	58	8	3	2	.408

Games in Santa Ana will cost 35 and 25 cents, but Colton will collect a tariff of 50 cents.. Officials here are trying to keep night ball out of the "big money" racket.

Here's a red hot tip. If you are planning to see the second game of the series at Colton Tuesday get your reserved seat tickets tomorrow. Remember that Monday, Labor day, is a holiday. The ducats may be purchased at Baker's bakery or the El Corral service station. Santa Ana's allotment is about 600.

Cornelius tonight goes after his twenty-fourth victory since joining the Stars. He has won nine straight games.

Win, lose or draw, the Stars will turn in their monkey-suits at the termination of the Colton series. They have played 41 games since the season opened April 1, winning 32 and losing 9. They have scored 272 runs as against 121 by their opponents.

Santa Ana is no newcomer to the Southern California championship series. The Stars got their first taste of it in 1927 in a three-cornered playoff with Arlington and Long Beach. The Acorns won. Santa Ana beat Riverside and Long Beach for the flag in another three-way playoff in 1928.

The umpires will be "Shorty" Smith of Fullerton, W. B. Wents of Garden Grove, Fred Smith of Riverside and "Biff" Wilson of Redlands. "Smorty" Smith and Wentz are from the National league, Fred Smith and Wilson from the American.

While Santa Ana was playing Whittier for the National league bunting, Colton kept in trim for the Southern California series by engaging in several exhibition games. The Reds suffered defeat at Riverside, Wednesday, 4-3. Botts was knocked out of the box in three innings.

When Santa Ana won the Whittier series in three successive games it proved the honesty of night baseball. The Stars would like to take Colton four straight but this is hardly probable. A long, hard series is in prospect.

To show the home crew their heart is in the right place, Vieira and Wilson, barbers at 108 East Fourth street, have hung up a number of prizes for the Stars to shoot at during the series. The first Santa Anan to score a run will get a haircut and a shave. Every Star who hits a home run receives a haircut, shave and shampoo. The "capital prize" will be $5 worth of barber work for the player voted as the most valuable to his team during the series. The players themselves will vote to decide this.

Approximately 250 or the 660 tickets sent to Colton and Riverside were returned here today. These will be put on sale early this evening at the Bowl.

HUNTERS WARNED TO KEEP OFF BIG RANCH

With the opening of dove season scheduled Monday, and the opening of deer season due September 16, Bob Reed, deputy sheriff in charge of patroling the vast Irvine ranch, today again called the attention of hunters that the Irvine acreage is positively closed to all because of the fire hazard and that all trespassers would be prosecuted vigorously.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS BEGIN TITLE SERIES; ADD SEATS TO HANDLE RECORD CROWD

Saving the best for the last and the last for the best, Santa Ana's Stars and Colton's Reds meet here tonight in the first game of night baseball's "little world series," crowning event of Southern California's summer sports phenomena.

With every reserved seat sold two days in advance and hundreds of fans still clamoring for seating space in the unreserved areas, the greatest crowd in the history of short diamond baseball is more than possible. It is certain.

To accommodate the throng that will push its way into the Bowl, 500 additional "circus seats" were ordered into the Sixth and Olive street park today.

This will give the Bowl accommodations for approximately 3500 persons, and every vantage point will be taken. In addition it would not be surprising to find the enclosure overrun with folk satisfied with mere standing room. Fandom is all "hot and bothered" about this series.

As for the teams themselves, they were proclaimed in tip top shape today by Manager Herb Salveson of Santa Ana and Hubert Finlay of Colton.

Cripples Return To Lineup

Each side has a cripple, but cripples have a habit of getting well miraculously just before game-time. It is safe to say that both Wayne Nelson, the Santa Ana hospital representative, and Hank Hanegan, Colton's injured ace, will be in the starting lineup.

Nelson, center fielder, has been on the "fritz" since Sunday when he threw out his trick shoulder. Hanegan, a shortstop, suffered a severely sprained thumb in a practice scrimmage with Riverside Wednesday night, a game incidentally that Colton lost, 4-3.

The starting pitchers will be Joe Cornelius for Santa Ana and Venn Botts for Colton. The catchers will be "Eeny" Wilcox for the Stars and Bob Stone for the Reds.

Manager Finlay may pull a Connie Mack on the boys and come on with Rudy Montgomery, a temperamental right hander who has pitched almost as well as Botts in certain spots this semester. This strategy is not probable, however. This is an important series, and the managers are more likely to do their experimenting later in the four-out-of-seven series. There is a lot of satisfaction in drawing first blood. Then a manager can AFFORD to gamble.

Although some pretty wise baseball men think Colton has a superior pitching staff, and therefore an edge in the series, the consensus is that Santa Ana has a bit the better of the dope.

The Stars are more experienced. This "little world series" stuff is nothing new to Wilcox, Bill Cole, "Memphy" Hill, Bill Hunter, Nelson, Randolph Bell and Darwin Scott—all of whom were on the Santa Ana squad that won the Southern California streamer in 1928. They are not likely to lose their equilibrium in a money series.

The Stars have been "through the mill" this year, too. They have not played for nothing 36 games against such competition as the National Night league offered this

by DENNY SHUTE

Golf teachers and critics are almost unanimous in declaring that the pivot is the whole secret in golf.

It is not a swinging around of the shoulders by a twisting movement at the waist, nor getting up on the big toe of the left foot in the backswing and upon the big toe of the right foot in the downswing, nor dipping low with first one shoulder and then the other. You can't say that one certain part of the body is responsible for the pivot.

In a full swing, pivoting is a coordinated twisting of the body in which the ankles, knees, hips and shoulders respond to the swing of the arms. For short shots where little effort is required (chip shots and putts), the swing of the arms may not be sufficient to cause the body to twist.

There is but one way to obtain the smooth functioning of all these parts in a pivot. It cannot be accomplished by giving thought to the ankles, knees, hips and shoulders. Concentrate on your swing; permit the body to respond freely to the swing of your arms. And the result is the correct pivot.

Why Pure Athletes Turn Pro

Martha Norelius, airing the grievances of the amateurs against the A. A. U., gives you this inside view of some petty squabbling that keeps unpaid sports stars in constant trouble

Ray Barbuti . . . drew a suspension from the A. A. U. . . . after his triumphant return from the Olympic games, where he was America's only flat-race winner.

Just playing . . . but it meant disqualification . . . Helen Meany, Olympic diving star . . . is shown here frolicking with Professional Johnny Weismuller in the Roman Pool at Miami Beach, Fla. . . . For this innocent sport, Miss Meany and Miss Norelius were suspended from amateur competition.

By MARTHA NORELIUS

AMATEUR athletics today are not as lily-white as some of its officials would have you believe, nor as slushy or slimy as some of its barred contestants paint it.

What corruption exists is natural and will always remain because of the unbalanced rules and regulations prevailing. Until the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States revises some of its present laws and, likewise, changes some of its decisions of the past, professionalism, to some extent, will prevail.

I'll grant you, that, while an amateur, I saw many of my competitors accept pecuniary rewards in one way or another. Such a thing is being done every day in the year, but I don't blame the athletes for it one bit.

Under present conditions an athlete can spend three or four years of his life competing, without receiving a dime in remuneration, at the same time filling the pockets of promoters, only to be barred from further competition by these same high officials when a technicality arises. Men and women vie for medals because they enjoy the competition of their own particular sport, but it annoys them to see a member of their clan thrown out on one of the many foolish rulings, with the majority feeling that they, too, may meet with the same fate some day. And for this reason more and more amateur athletes are beginning to realize that it pays to take what you can, when you can, instead of waiting, lest the fame fade.

PLENTY of clubs and individuals are only too glad to pay well-known amateurs to enter their athletic meets. The value of a "big name" as a box-office drawing power or as a means of giving an organization a social standing is universally recognized. Therefore, it can be readily seen that quite a bit of money can be made, if one wants to take the chance.

How payments are made to so-called simon-pures for their services is interesting. Of course, a committeeman on a meet never makes an announcement that after the race he is going to give the star performer a $50 bill, or whatever the sum might be. It usually is given to him privately in the guise of "expense money," although sometimes promoters, ironically enough, fold the bill neatly under the cardboard in the box containing the medal. Too, athletes oftentimes receive money in the form of sweaters or other wearing apparel, supposedly presented to them as a gift, but which is soon converted into money at the nearest sporting goods store. The same thing is done with tickets for the event, which the athlete is given to sell at a certain commission. Friends of the promoter graciously buy enough from the athlete to pay him for competing.

After the 1928 Olympics, the swimming team representing this country, of which I was a member, made a tour of the continent. As is customary, the men traveled alone, while the women were required to have chaperons. Consequently, I can swear that none of the ladies accepted any money throughout the entire trip, but I am just as emphatic in claiming that some of the others did receive monetary considerations.

In fact, I overheard a very well-known swimmer, among the men, talk by long distance phone to the chairman of a meet we were going to enter the following week. Though the expenses to the races amounted only to $50, this athlete demanded that $200 "expense money" be sent him before he would leave for the competition. His name was such that the money was promptly forwarded.

While you can easily understand why I don't care to divulge this swimmer's name, it is only fair for me to add that it wasn't George Kojac. To my mind, he, above everybody else, is a true amateur athlete.

I HAVE cited this case, not to get any athlete into trouble, but simply to illustrate the results of some of the present amateur statutes. Yes, there's sort of a revolution brewing amidst the amateurs.

On the whole, amateur rules today are fair enough, but there are the idiotic conflicting ones, scattered here and there, which should be erased quickly before they jeopardize the standing of any more athletes and, in turn, intensify the antagonism in the ranks. For instance, take the clause which permits amateurs to give instructions, providing they are not getting paid for it, and compare it with the clause which absolutely forbids amateurs from writing instructions, even if they're not receiving any compensation for it.

Puzzling indeed are these laws, but even more mystifying is the reason an amateur legislator will give you for the stand the A. A. U. takes on the writing of instructions. It is the association's opinion that, if an athlete writes for a paper or magazine, the readers wouldn't believe that he or she is not getting paid for it. I suppose they figure that anyone, who may witness an amateur giving instructions, has a different mental capacity and will not entertain such evil thoughts as to suspect that that athlete is accepting money.

Incidentally, amateurs are not forbidden to write articles, but the features mustn't be of an instructional nature, and—tie this—they mustn't bring the author more than regular space rates. Now, why do you suppose a line is drawn between instructional and other types of articles? I have yet to learn.

Considering that these are but a few of the rules existing at present, do you wonder why amateur athletes oppose the suspension of other athletes on alleged infringement of these laws? And do you wonder why they are forced to disobey the more sensible decrees, feeling that they might be declared ineligible anyway on some foolish charge?

To top these instances, the association has recently registered many decisions which have had the tendency to further harass amateurs. Those that concerned Olympic champions, such as Ray Barbuti, the runner, Helen Meany, the diver, and myself, broke into daily print, with the press taking sides against the A. A. U., and thus strengthening the athletes' enmity against certain rules with public sentiment.

THE case of Helen Meany and myself, which you may recall, is a perfect example of what I mean. Helen and I were suspended in January of 1929 for supposedly giving an exhibition with professional swimmers.

What really happened was that, while spending the winter in Miami, Fla., we dropped into the Roman Pool for a swim one day, paying the regular admission price, mind you, and met Johnny Weismuller and his swimming partner, Stubby Kruger, both of whom were making their living by giving instructions and appearances there. As was only natural, being old friends, we swam around together, but no announcement was made of any kind, which would make our actions appear as an exhibition. In some way, however, possibly through the ingenuity of a press agent, who wanted to exploit his client, the Miami papers got the impression that we had given an exhibition and reported so in their sporting columns. It wasn't long before the A. A. U. heard about the incident and suspended us without a hearing or opportunity to tell our side of the affair.

In the meantime, the Women's Swimming Association of New York, for whom Helen and I were competing at the time, asked the A. A. U. for evidence of the charges made against us, but was refused. The indoor national swimming championships were to be held in Chicago the following month and through the work of Leib Dayo, chairman of the swimming committee, the ban was raised temporarily and I was allowed to swim in the title meet.

Immediately after the championships, I was asked to go to Bermuda with Helen to pose for educational motion pictures, which we did with the consent of Mrs. Johnson, manager of the W. S. A. team, who accompanied us. All arrangements were made by Mrs. Johnson and she handled the expense money given by the movie people. No other payments were made. But the A. A. U. charged us once again with a violation of the eligibility rules and we were declared definitely disqualified from further amateur competition.

Now, witness the grounds upon which we were thrown out of the association we had helped to build. Officials admit that they believe we had not received any money.

BUT it seems that what we did was unconventional and, consequently, we must suffer the consequences.

First, by appearing in the same pool with professional swimmers, we allegedly had broken the amateur code. It didn't matter whether we paid to get into the pool and that no announcement was made—we had swum in the same body of water with professionals and that was against the rules. It's a wonder the A. A. U. didn't ban me years before it did, for I confess that I swam at Long Beach and that on the same day some professional athlete was also swimming in the Atlantic Ocean, off Lisbon, Spain. 'Twas in the same body of water, you know.

Then, by posing for the motion pictures we were supposed to have registered another breach of the law, which cooked our goose. It made no difference that the W. S. A. had on a previous occasion consulted William Prout, who held the presidency of the National Amateur Athletic Union when the question of educational motion pictures first cropped up, and that the club was told that the A. A. U. had absolutely no jurisdiction over such matters, provided the athlete received no remuneration, and that other club members, as a result, often appeared in the movies without the slightest interruptions—we had posed for pictures for a private organization, and that was an infringement of the rulings.

On this basis, why isn't every amateur who poses for the news reels ineligible, for our pictures were taken by a news reel company, only it was released as a feature instead of a news happening?

Unsound justice had been displayed before by the A. A. U., but I can think of no occasion on which two athletes were ostracized on such feeble charges.

GRAFT, I am glad to say, as a rule doesn't shadow amateur activities. I am convinced that the majority of the association's officials are honest. However, there was one man, high up in metropolitan amateur circles, who used to make a practice of wielding his power unlimitedly. Fortunately, he has since been dethroned.

It is known that this man hated the Women's Swimming Association, mainly because of its supremacy. When Helen and I were first brought up, he saw his opportunity to keep us out of the indoor championships and, when that failed, he used every means to bar us for the motion picture posing, which proved successful. But he still wasn't content, for the W. S. A. had won the team trophy at the indoors, so he went on and had all my victories revoked, giving the second place club the cup on disqualification charges.

Of course, you can imagine how the other members of the W. S. A. team felt and what their reactions would be later, if they were ever given the chance to make a little money on the side. However, Miss Charlotte Epstein and other heads of the club fought to uphold their rights, but they knew they were beaten and would continue to be beaten as long as this man reigned, and so they turned their efforts to defeat him in the next election, which they did.

I have nothing against those in command of the A. A. U. at present. Often I wonder whether Avery Brundage, its president, and Daniel Ferris, its secretary, really have the power the majority of us think they have. To be sure, they receive plenty of criticism, but in answer to it they seem to stand with hands tied. Who is really the ruler of the organization?

WHOEVER he is, it might interest him to know that, while the association spends so much time squabbling over alleged infractions of minor regulations, its more sensible ones are being violated left and right, and nothing is being done about it. Plentifully so is this going on in swimming circles. I repeat that it is not my intention to be, in the parlance of the underworld, "a stool pigeon," but I think by disclosing the practice, without mentioning names, the A. A. U. might get onto themselves and revise things to the benefit of all concerned.

Because of the Canadian Marathon, which will be contested this year August 22 and 27 at Toronto under auspices of the Canadian National Exhibition, and the large purse it offered as the Wrigley Marathon, more amateur swimmers have been turning professional each year. Of course, hardly any of them ever finish the long, tiresome grinds. Those who do, aside from the prizes, make additional money giving appearances and thus firmly establish themselves in pro ranks. Those who don't, however, have nothing else to do except to wait and try again in the big swim the following year. But the lust for competition soon gets them. They have to keep in trim, so they get out their amateur card, which still hasn't expired, and re-enter amateur races, usually without anybody being the wiser.

ORANGE COUNTY HOSPITAL AIDS MANY MOTHERS

By ELWOOD SQUIRES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Special to The Register)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 29.—California's county hospitals have become a haven for "poor middle class" mothers of the state.

Last year Orange county reported 130 births in its county hospital, with the state total showing 6,467 births in these hospitals.

Hailing the increased popularity of county hospitals for maternity cases as the first definite step in halting the alarming maternal mortality rate in the United States, the state department of welfare pointed out that those formerly "too rich" or "not poor" enough to enter county hospitals have at last found a place for themselves.

"It is an encouraging thing to see county hospitals offering their services to the general community, instead of only those who are too poor to pay for service," said Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, director of the social welfare department.

"County hospitals have an important place in the field of maternal hygiene. The United States has the largest percentage of deaths of mothers in child birth of any civilized nation in the world.

"How to reduce the toll of deaths is one of our foremost medical problems. The well-baby clinics have been the chief factor in reducing infant mortality in the past 20 years.

"Adequate hospital care would undoubtedly greatly help to meet the problem of the death of mothers. Some of our county hospitals have already gone a long way in this direction and their experience should be made available to all communities."

Great variation exists in the service rendered by county hospitals in California, according to Mrs. Saylor. Sacramento and San Joaquin counties show the largest percentage of births taking place at county hospitals. Fresno, Kern, Kings, Madera, Merced and Stanislaus counties all show more than ten per cent of all births taking place in their county hospitals.

A number of the smaller mountain counties offer no maternal service at all.

Laguna Beach

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Burbank, who have just completed and moved into their new home on Terry road, coming here from Sierra Madre, were visited Sunday by their former townsfolk, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Corlett. Mr. Burbank is a retired publisher of educational works.

Mrs. Helen Lewis Cassell, landscape artist from Hollywood, and her small daughter, Margaret Jean, have been spending the summer at their home on Terry road and Bartlett place.

Donald Vivrette was bitten by a dog owned by E. M. Schener, of 640 Williams street, Los Angeles, Sunday, as he emerged from the surf while swimming. Though the wound was not dangerous, the dog is held for observation for 14 days.

Helen Ware, famous as an actress of a generation ago, now employed in pictures, was a visitor here Sunday.

George K. Bingham, principal of the schools, curtailed his vacation and hurried home in order to be here in time to vote. He wanted to give his support to W. T. Lambert for auditor especially, he told Brayton S. Norton.

GOOSE CAUSES ROW

FORT MORGAN, Colo., Aug. 29.—(UP)—If a goose had known which side of the road it wanted to take, Judge A. V. S. Saunders would not have been called upon to mete out justice. Because of its uncertainty, the goose was struck and killed by an automobile. Thomas Durand, Fred Coca and Manuel Duran went back to settle with F. A. Patterson, owner of the bird. A fight followed and Paterson filed assault and battery charges. Judge Saunders found the boys not guilty.

NEW BOOKS IN PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY VERNA RAMSEY

We hear many discussions about world unity. Numerous plans are made, conferences are held, and we read many articles on the subject in magazines and newspapers. Yet has anyone really analyzed the subject? How much do we know of the true problems in connection with the unification of the world?

In "The Unity of the World," Guglielmo Ferrero discusses the problems thoughtfully. Having surveyed the pageant of ancient Rome, he turns a calm eye to the transforming events of today. Whether he speaks of China, or Europe, or the United States, he speaks without bitterness, without insinuations of contempt or pride. If he prefers some of the loveliness of the Old World to the efficiency of the New, he knows why and at what price. He is well aware of the revolutionary effect of the machine and understands its limitations. But, he does not complain or take on airs. With a great serenity he watches the changes of history shaking out vast new patterns beyond the comprehension of little men and women. He records, penetrates, offers explanations, and accepts, but does not quarrel.

The result of this survey of the process that unifies and divides the world is a firm confidence in the substance of things. It is a confidence that makes room for liberty, for universal suffrage, for the despised masses of mankind, a confidence that finds the world more than a battleground where men trample themselves in the mire and die. It makes a volume that while making us hopeful, also makes us think. We are too much inclined to accept catch words and theories of others as a substitute for thought. The problems connected with world unity are not to be casually settled in a day. It may be part of a historical process that will take centuries. A thoughtful study of the situation today may indicate ways in which the process may be helped to a satisfactory conclusion.

We are made aware of one of the great changes of our day by the existence of such a volume as "The Air Tourists Guide to Europe" by Norman Macmillan.

This book is designed as a very practical guide to air traveling conditions. The map of the complete European Air Lines shows the traveler in one comprehensive page the complete airway system of all Europe with every air-line port to call plotted and clearly readable. When planning travel in Europe by air, reference may first be made to this map to determine in what respect air services available meet the travel itinerary involved. From this map the tour can be worked out in the rough. The full details can then be found from the subsequent chapters and the section maps which accompany the chapters.

The chapters are arranged in countries or groups of countries, so that the air traveler can obtain complete local information which covers not only local air lines, but trunk lines radiating from the locality. Each chapter is prefaced with a map of the air lines of the countries forming the local group, from which the traveler can see at a glance what connections the local air services offer him. When engaged in the plotted of routs which run internationally and thus come under two or more chapters, reference to all the chapters concerned will rapidly make known the additional air services upon which the traveler can reckon in this tour.

For anyone planning an air tour of Europe, this information will be of great value. It is very clearly and concisely stated and arranged in a manner to enable the reader to make the most convenient use of it. Others of us who cannot make such a trip may bring our imaginary travels up to date by arranging them according to the most modern methods.

How many of us have dreamed of sailing the South Seas. Romantic, colorful dreams that have not come true. Gifford Pinchot had such a dream, but his did come true. We may read of his voyage in his own yacht in "To the South Seas."

The marvels which he found in his travels to the Galapagos, the Marquesas, the Tuamotu Islands, and Tahiti surpass even our dreams as they did his. We go with him into the San Blas Villages which have few visitors. The little houses of the Indians, cane-sided and thatch-roofed, are set so closely together that in many streets it is necessary to bow the head below the eaves and turn the shoulders sideways to get through.

Through the magic words of this author, we are conducted to "the enchanted Islands" of Galapagos. We have read fairy tales in which wild things — bears, wolves, and frogs come to play with boys and girls. There are no bears, wolves, or frogs in the Galapagos, but there are sea lions which will come to play with you. At home bats are found in the air, but in these miraculous islands the commonest bats are sea bats. Instead of a few inches across the wings, they spread 15, 20, or perhaps nearly 30 feet, and the weight of the largest is measured in tons. These islands harbor the most friendly, cordial, confident, and fearless birds and beasts, which perhaps the world has to show. Here is the nearest approach to the Garden of Eden that remains to this wearied earth.

These are only a very few of the wonders to be found between the covers of this book. Following its pages, we are carried to a most marvelous world which will live and mingle with our dreams of romance and beauty.

Register Artist Announces Prize Letter Contest

LIKENESSES OF WINNERS TO BE SKETCHED FREE

Why is Orange county a wonderful place to live?

The writer of the three most interesting letters on this subject will be sketched by a nationally known portrait artist, Simeon Petrikovitch, whose daily feature in the Register, "Orange County Personalities," is attracting wide attention. The sketches will be life size likenesses.

Petrikovitch announced that the best of the three letters will win for its writer a drawing of himself or herself in pastel.

The Register will co-operate with the artist in the contest and will publish the three best letters selected by the judges, who are George Raymer, secretary of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce; Herbert N. Alleman, president of the Santa Ana Realty board, and Mary Burke King, of the Register. Their decision will be final.

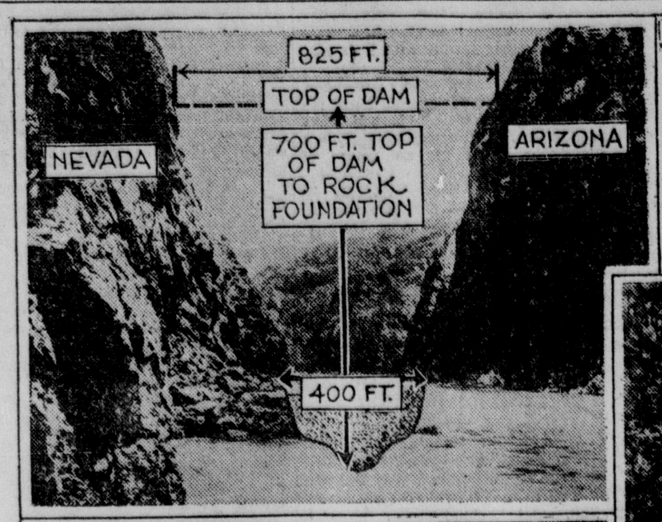

All letters must be addressed to Simeon Petrikovitch, care of the Register, and must be mailed before September 15. Announcement of the winners will be made shortly after September 15.

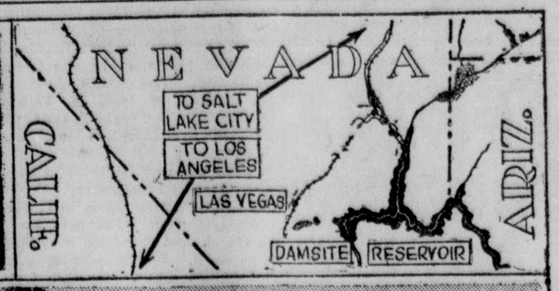

Petrikovitch, who has been in Orange county for the past several weeks sketching leading citizens for his daily feature in the Register, has characterized this section as truly a "God's Country" where the real joy of living abounds. Although a young man, he has traveled through many foreign countries and through most of the states in this country. And to his many friends he wishes to tell the marvelous things about Orange county.

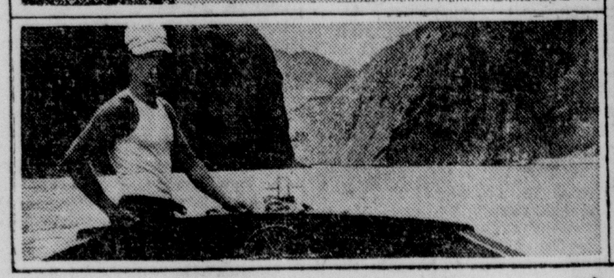

Many expressions of approval have come to him about his daily Register feature, "Orange County Personalities," and for this reason he has authorized the Register to announce that he will draw life size likenesses of the writers of the three best letters telling why Orange county is a wonderful place to live.

WHERE SOUTHWEST LOOKS FOR WATER

BOULDER DAM WORK TO START OCTOBER 1 WITH LAUNCHING OF RAILROAD CONSTRUCTION

By NEA Service

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Aug. 29.—After years of discussion and planning, Uncle Sam's biggest construction job since Muscle Shoals and one of the biggest since the Panama Canal is soon to get under way.

On or about October 1, actual work on the $165,000,000 Boulder dam project will be started, when the Union Pacific railroad begins building a spur track from Bracken, Nev., just south of Las Vegas, to a point near the dam site on the Colorado river. Following this will come construction of the great dam with its accompanying huge locks and hydro-electric plants, a task that will require years.

Las Vegas is only 30 miles away and, of course, will benefit by this great development but about the last thing the city's leading business men want is for it to become a hectic boom town, with the resultant unstable prosperity that goes with boom towns. They are more careful and far-seeing.

Warn Against "Sharks"

In fact, they warn that the Union Pacific will not employ more than 300 men in building the railroad and that work on Boulder dam itself will not start before next spring. They also warn against wild speculation in real estate, like that experienced at Muscle Shoals, explaining to investors that much of the adjacent land is at too high an altitude to be irrigated, even after the great development is completed. A number of companies to sell lots in the area have already been formed.

They want prosperity and they intend to get it, but they want the solid kind.

The Union Pacific trackage to a point called Summit—22 miles of grading, culvert and trestle construction—will cost approximately $2,500,000. From Summit, it is 7.13 miles to the dam site. This link will be built by the Union Pacific for the government on a basis of cost, plus 10 per cent. Because of the mountainous country it represents unusually difficult engineering problems.

Elevators for Workers

The dam will be built at the mouth of the Black canyon on the roaring Colorado river. On the mesas above the stream—several hundred feet from the bottom of the canyon—a city will be built to accommodate workers. Elevators will take the men to and from their work on the canyon floor.

Before the dam foundations can be laid it will be necessary to "dry up" this flow of water. To accomplish this, four ditches will be dug; the river temporarily dammed upstream and the water to be diverted around the dam site via these ditches.

When completed, Boulder dam will impound 26,000,000 acre-feet of water into a great lake. This will develop a million horsepower of energy as it passes out for irrigation purposes. Flood control works around the Imperial valley of California, and the construction of an all-American canal from the Colorado river to the fertile Imperial valley are also provided in the project. At present, the valley gets its water from a canal that runs mostly through Mexico.

The power generated will be distributed over several western states and to cities as far away as Los Angeles.

PASTORS RETURN AFTER VACATION

The Rev. and Mrs. Wilfred C. Parham, pastors of the Four Square Gospel church, at Fairview and Sycamore streets, had returned today from their two weeks' vacation, which they spent at Catalina and San Diego. They will be in charge of the Four Square service Friday night.

While on their vacation they visited Mrs. Aimee McPherson in her home at Malibu Beach, where she is convalescing from a nervous breakdown, and where they witnessed her serious condition. They will report on her condition during the Sunday services.

Mrs. Parham will preach at both the Sunday services. In the morning her message will be, "Why Doesn't God Kill the Devil?" Sunday evening the sermon will be, "The Meanest Man in Santa Ana." All are invited to these meetings.

Monday, being Labor Day, the Four Square church and Sunday school will have a picnic at Irvine park, to which the public is invited.

YOUNGSTER IN RED WAGON IS CRASH VICTIM

Harry De Hazo, three-year-old youth, residing near Sixth and Artesia streets, was seriously injured at 6:25 o'clock last night when an automobile crashed into a little red wagon, in which he was riding. The accident occurred near his home.

The boy was taken to the Orange County hospital, where it is not believed that his injuries will prove fatal.

According to witnesses, the baby was being pushed along the sidewalk in the wagon. Suddenly the wagon ran down a drive way and the boy was taken to the center of the street, directly in front of a car being driven by S. L. Chavez, an employe of the Colis ranch, on Lacy street.

Witnesses who saw the accident reported that the driver of the machine was not to blame for the accident, according to a police report.

Deputies In Paris Vote By Machine

PARIS, Aug. 29.—(INS)—Voting by electrisity is the latest introduction in the chamber of deputies here. This follows a long series of verbal combats staged after each voting session in the chamber, when numerous deputies changed their minds and voting tickets before, during and after casting their ballots. This was discovered to waste so much valuable time that the price of an intricate new-fangled electrical machine could better be afforded. Reactionary members of the chamber protest against the installation of this representation of the machine age, complaining that not even voting remains an individual matter any longer.

H. H. TARTSON IS INJURED BY CAR

H. H. Tartson, of 827 South Sycamore street, suffered a fracture of the left leg and cuts and bruises last night when he was run down at Fourth and Birch street, by an automobile driven by Mrs. Anna Walkinshaw, of 1021 West Second street, according to a report made to the Santa Ana police department.

He was taken to the St. Joseph's hospital at Orange, by Bascom Rush, of 512 North Parton street.

Mrs. Walkinshaw made a report of the accident at the city police station.

Fox Broadway To Show Preview Of Pathe Production

Pathe's latest all-talking feature will be shown here as a studio preview at the Fox Broadway theater at 8 o'clock tonight, according to an announcement made today by Francis Glaab, manager of the theater.

The picture is still in the "rough," and uncut in many places, but will be an added attraction to theater goers. The first showing of "Call of the Flesh," with Ramon Novarro, also will be presented at the theater tonight.

Santa Anans, who view "Lillion," as a preview here Wednesday night, were highly pleased with the class of previews now being brought to Santa Ana by the Fox theaters.

Police News

Police were called to 814 West Third street last night at 11 o'clock to "quiet" a phonograph, which, according to a complaint, was making too much noise in a garage, where it was being played.

Charged with being drunk, George Miller, 48, of 1301 West Palmyra, Orange, was arrested at Fourth and French streets last night by Officer Foster. He was lodged in the county jail.

R. D. Goetz, of Delhi, was arrested on a warrant yesterday afternoon, charging drunkenness. He was allowed bail of $50 and will be given a trial in the Santa Ana police court today.

W. F. Boggs, 67, Santa Ana, was arrested at Fourth and French streets last night by Officer Paul Cozad, on a drunk charge, according to a report at the police department.

A bill authorizing a new $4,500,000 metal-clad airship has been introduced in congress. It will have a gas volume of 3758,000 cubic feet.

10 famous California cooking authorities agree—

"This is it — the ideal shortening"

We showed them Parfay—the new blended shortening. We invited them to test it, critically, and not to spare our feelings.

This group of experts didn't stop at "liking"! They acclaim Parfay as the ideal shortening, combining the special merits of all others!

Parfay is snowy white, absolutely pure and keeps indefinitely. It has no flavor. The smoke point is exceptionally high. Parfay creams and mixes quickly, makes light cakes. All these advantages plus old-fashioned flaky pie crust, too. And it comes in a pound package of new, convenient shape.

Be among the first to try it! If you are at all disappointed—your money is refunded. That shows how sure we are!

The MIXING BOWL by ANN MEREDITH

Something New in the Way of Dessert

What to have for dessert is the urning question with many a ousekeeper. It isn't so easy to hink about good desserts right aft- breakfast, yet that is the time he dinner menu must be planned nd the ordering done for the day. Don't overlook the possibilities the coffee left in the percolator. Frequently, I make an extra mount of coffee with dessert in ind, and I use the coffee in vari- us ways. It makes a baked cus- rd something it never aspired to e—just use half milk and half offee and the usual amount of gs and sugar, bake slowly, chill oroughly and serve with a spoon- l of whipped cream. The way I ke best to use it is in—

COFFEE MOUSSE

Take two cups of strong coffee, wo-thirds cup of sugar. Bring to oil and thicken it with corn- arch so that the mixture when ooked will drip off the tip of the poon in slow blobs. Add a good inch of salt—all whipped cream ixtures need salt—and let it cool. Whip a half-pint bottle of heavy ream very stiff, combine with the offee cornstarch and whip well. Chill on ice in the ordinary refrig- rator or partially freeze in the lectric refrigerator. A teaspoonful f vanilla improves the coffee fla- or. This recipe makes eight por- ions.

Just a word of caution: This des- ert is so rich in energy making oods it should follow a dinner low n these foods. This would be the inner of steaks or chops with two eafy vegetables and a crisp salad. Potatoes and bread and butter hould be taboo at the meal if veight is something one has to hink about.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Pork Chops Italienne

6 pork chops
1-2 cup canned corn
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 egg, well beaten

Buy nice loin chops, brown them f a hot dry skillet, transfer to a hallow casserole and cover with he "Italienne" mixture. This part s mixed this way: grind the pep- er and onion, scoop the two cups f crumbs from the soft part of a tale loaf and combine with the ground vegetables, corn, butter, salt and beaten egg.

Whip well, then pack, and work it down with a spoon, so that when it is placed on top of the chops it will stay put. Pour a little extra butter on hot water, one-third cup, around the chops to keep them moist and bake in a moderate oven until the chops are tender—about an hour.

The last half hour the casserole should be covered to keep the dressing from getting too dry and brown.

Serve with cream-beef gravy; this is made by blending butter, flour and two beef meat cubes together, and adding milk to cook to a smooth gravy. Season with celery salt.

One pork chop is allowed for each serving. The individual calory total, counting gravy, is around 450. Half of this amount is found in the energy-making units.

Pork chops and Spoon Bread hobnob beautifully, but spoon bread made according to the recipe given in the leaflet for the week is good enough to make the Sphinx sit up and show interest. And only a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the leaflet, this week, it is free.

Mrs. Higgins Is Hostess to S. O. A. Club in Orange

Members of the S. O. A. club were most pleasantly entertained Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. F. W. Higgins was hostess in her attractive home in Orange. Asters, those delicate blossoms which are finding so much favor this summer, adorned the card tables where luncheon was served early in the afternoon.

Mrs. George Merriman held high score in the bridge game of the afternoon, Mrs. William Batt, second, while Mrs. B. H. Bauman, a newly elected member, held low.

Those sharing Mrs. Higgins' hospitality were Mesdames Daisy McGee, D. H. Thompson, Leland Eubank, C. A. Sisson, W. F. Batt, George Merriman and B. H. Bauman.

New Home at Beach Is Setting For Club Meet

Choosing the new and lovely Newport Beach home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Russell, as the setting for the occasion, Mrs. Abbie Ulm was hostess to members of the Martha Washington club Wednesday afternoon.

The hours were, as usual, spent socially, and it was decided to hold a picnic at Irvine park September 10 at 6:30 p.m., with husbands of members as special guests. An appetizing refreshment course concluded the afternoon.

Those sharing the pleasant affair with Mrs. Abbie Ulm were Mesdames Docia Jaspar, Sadie House, May Curtis, Bess McDonald, Florence Somerville, May Covey, May Jackson and George Peters.

NOVARRO OPENS BROADWAY SHOW

Ramon Novarro's much heralded flair for opera singing will be put to screen use for the first time in his newest musical picture, "Call of the Flesh," which will open today at the Fox Broadway theater with a cast which includes Dorothy Jordan, Ernest Torrence, Nance O'Neil, Renee Adoree, Mathilde Comont and Russell Hopton.

The story, an original by Dorothy Farnum, provides Novarro with the role of a Spanish singer whose operatic success is tempered by the complications which result as the outcome of two love affairs. The star will sing "Ridi Pagliacci," one of the late Enrico Caruso's favorite arias, and "Questa o Quella" from "Rigoletto." In an attempt to keep the picture from being too "high-brow," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have also included three numbers composed by Herbert Stothart and Clifford Grey, who wrote the music for "Devil May Care" and "The Rogue Song." They are "Not Good Enough For Me," "Just For Today" and "Loving Thoughts of You."

Report has it that this picture tops all Novarro's previous talking and singing efforts, being equipped with a particularly entertaining plot, interesting characterizations and picturesque locales, which include interors of cathedrals, a reproduction of the Madrid Opera House and scenes of provincial Spanish towns. The final scenes are done in technicolor.

ITALIAN LABORERS WORRYING FRENCH

PARIS, Aug. 29.—(INS)Italian laborers in France have become so numerous and have yet remained so unassimilated that the French are waking up to the fact that this country has an immigration problem on its hands. While these laborers are in many ways desirable in districts of France where native laborers are scarce, they remain undesirables because of their intense patriotism. They stay only long enough to make a certain amount of money to take back to their own country, they buy their stores from their own countrymen, give their entire allegiance to Italy, and only use France as a provider of money. Italy itself has very rigid laws to protect itself from any foreign laborers from France or elsewhere. A movement is now being suggested to raise a similar barrier in France against Italians.

"ARIZONA KID" ENDS RUN HERE TODAY

"The Arizona Kid," with Warner Baxter, in the role that won for him the most coveted medal in screenland, will be seen and heard at the Fox West Coast theater today for the last times. The picture was returned here yesterday for a two-day engagement.

Thrilling story of adventure and romance in the life of a daring bandit and outlaw, the plot centers around the romance between the Cisco Kid and a girl who comes from the east to find her brother. A gold mine robbery and a murder play an important part in the plot.

Baxter was never better, while the entire story is both entertaining and unusual.

"All Quiet on the Western Front," famous war film which played a week here recently to crowded houses, will be returned to the Fox West Coast theater tomorrow and Sunday by popular demand.

"SHANGHAI SHIP" IS SEEN AT WALKER'S

"The Ship From Shanghai," first motion picture of which 90 per cent was filmed on the high seas, will be presented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer tonight at Walker's State.

A schooner, treated acoustically, was equipped with a complete recording outfit and the play filmed while on a cruise up and down the Pacific coast.

It tells the story of a group of society people becalmed at sea, and prisoners of a muttering ship's steward who is gone mad.

Louis Wolheim plays the mutineering steward. The cast includes Conrad Nagel, Kay Johnson, Carmel Myers, Holmes Herbert.

SMELTZER

SMELTZER, Aug. 29.—Mrs. J. O. Pyle and her sister, Mrs. John Kettler, were guests at a luncheon given Monday at Laguna Beach by Mrs. Roy Langley, of Santa Ana, who is spending a vacation in the art colony.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Applebury and family have returned from a vacation trip to Victorville. Mrs. Applebury and the children were away two weeks and while their relatives enjoyed a trip to Lake Arrowhead, another to Big Bear and picnics and fishing trips were of almost daily occurrence. Mr. Applebury joined his family for the last four days of their vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. George Applebury were in Los Angeles Monday and visited at the county hospital, their young granddaughter, Virginia Jackson, of Riverside, who is greatly improved following a lingering illness. A few weeks ago her life was entirely despaired of by physicians in attendance.

Mrs. Nellie Parr was a recent visitor at Corona, where she visited her sister, Mrs. Georgia Green. Mrs. Green is now convalescing from an illness of 20 months' duration.

The Arctic regions were explored as early as 1583 by John Davis, an Englishman.

BEADS FOR EVENING WEAR RETURN AGAIN

BY ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Beads are back again. Boleros and tiny casaquins for bridge and evening wear are embroidered in black bugles or colored sequins in all-over closely massed effects. Gold, silver and jet are all used in overlapping treatment and bring about brilliant results. Small, hexagonal sequins placed flat on the foundation are used in lovely, pastel tones.

The general trend seems towards bugles, but small steel and glass beads, as well as sequins will be used for many summer frocks and blouses and it is thought that winter evening gowns will very often be beaded.

Leufrol is showing very discreet use of strass on a charming model of taffeta with openwork decolletage outlined with it and the same on the little sash. Close black and white beading appears on the tight bodice of another new model and an evening gown in pink is entirely of beads used in scroll design and falling on the skirt in loose strands.

Long bugles placed in zig-zag formation give a smart finish to a black net evening gown. The beaded edges are deep and important but add no weight to the frock, exceedingly light ones being used.

Beautifully beaded in square flat glass beads, in an evening ensemble in pale green georgette and a white georgette has red bugles placed in zig-zag pattern.

Who doesn't Love Old-fashion Things

OLD-FASHION songs, old-fashion furniture (and some of us)—old-fashion girls. Steadfast honest quality is traditional of things our ancestors created. And typical of those by-gone periods was blue-checkered gingham. Typical too of that same honest quality which endears itself to the American housewife, is the BLUE GINGHAM DRESS that now clothes and protects WEBER'S BREAD. You'll reverence the goodness of this famous loaf just as you do the goodness of old-fashion things.

"As you like it"

You can buy Weber's Bread in the White or the Whole Wheat loaves, either sliced or unsliced. Weber's White Bread is Wrapped in the attractive gingham blue, and Weber's Whole Wheat in appetizing gingham brown. The word "sliced" appears prominently on the wrappers of the sliced loaves.

HOLLY SUGAR
Is Ideal for Canning and Preserving

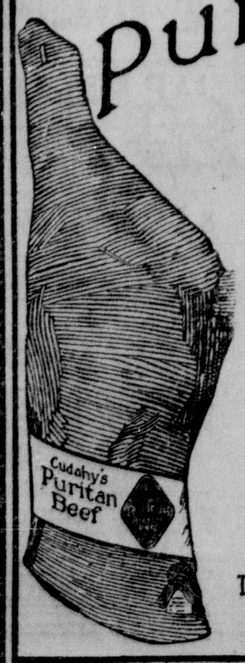

"Cane and Beet Sugar.—In numerous tests made by the Fruit Products Laboratory, beet sugar was found to give results equal to those of cane sugar. The prejudice against beet sugar is no longer warranted. It is identical chemically with cane sugar. Beet sugar is equally as good as cane sugar for jellies and preserves and is used by many canners and preservers."—(Extract from Circular 276 on Home Canning, of the U. of C. URGE DESIGNER OF CAPITAL FOR HALL OF TIME

WASHINGTON, August 29. — Charles Bulfinch, "the first American architect," and designer of the United States capitol, has been nominated to the Hall of Fame by the board of directors of the American Institute of Architects. Summaries of the achievements of the early American designer have been sent to each elector of the Hall of Fame by the Board.

"Few architects of today can boast of a list of such notable buildings as those designed by Bulfinch," says the board in its plea. It was stated that Bilfinch's record as a stateman during the formulative period of Boston should be sufficient to elect the architect to the Hall of Fame as a statesman, if not as an architect.

Bulfinch was born in Bowdoin Square, Boston, August 8, 1763. He died April 15, 1844.

A graduate of Harvard, Bulfinch became interested in designing work while attending to improvements on his father's and friend's houses. Later he was able to make an extensive tour of Europe, studying the types of architecture used in the old cities.

While serving as a selectman in Boston, Bulfinch inaugurated street lighting, the system of coeducation, establishment of a board of health, and a financial committee that brought about order and system in the method of collecting city taxes.

In 1817, after completing his second term on the board of selectmen, Bulfinch was appointed architect of the United States capitol in Washington.

Among the many buildings designed by the architect are: the Connecticut State House in Hartford in 1792, the first theatre in Boston, and five institutional buildings, 10 churches, three hospitals, seven schools, and seven commercial and bank buildings.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

The Camera Man was soon all set and then he said, "I'll shortly get a very lovely picture if you'll stand up good and straight. Don't let the wild wind blow your cap and wait until you hear me snap my camera before you move. You won't have long to wait."

The other Tinies stood around and realized that they had found a chance to tease poor Clowny and to make him laugh out loud. Wee Coppy made some faces quick. So did the others. 'Twas a trick to upset Clowny, who stood still to look proud.

"Aw, quit it," Clowny shortly said. "I'm not supposed to move my head. You're trying to make me giggle so the picture will look bad. If you'll behave till I get through, the man will snap each one of you. And, when you see your faces on a card, you'll all be glad."

Kind Carpy said, "That's fair to me. Now see how pretty you can be." In just about a moment Mister Camera Man said, "Fine! One picture is already done. Say, isn't this a heap of fun. I'll photograph the rest of you, if you will form in line."

So, one by one, the snaps were shot. Then Scouty cried, "As like as not we all will look real funny." "No you won't," the man replied. "You'll all look nice. I'm sure of that unless some pictures turned out flat." He took the pictures from the box and every Tiny sighed.

They turned out nice as they could be. The man then said, "Well, now pay me." The Travel Man exclaimed, "Why sure!" and handed him some money. Just then a man came down the street, and Scouty cried, "Gee, there's a treat." It was a queer Greek moving man, and, my, but he looked funny.

RULES

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to TIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE, TIN, PIE, PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters cannot be changed.

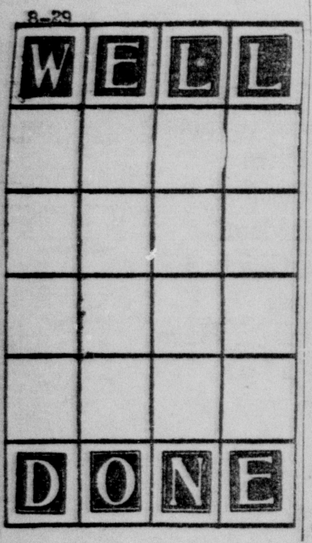

WELL to DONE—You can call your day's work WELL DONE if you can shoot this par four hole.

STARS, COLTON BEGIN SERIES HERE TONIGHT

summer. There have not been man yAnaheims, Whittiers, Olives and La Habras in the American circuit.

Santa Ana therefore has had the advantage of keen competition, where Colton was so much better than most of its league it could afford to loaf through many of its games . That may be aside from the point, however, as Colton did all that could be asked in winning all but two league games during the entire season. Santa Ana lost nine conference starts, seven of them in the first half of its split schedule.

In practice games with Anaheim, the Reds looked dangerous at the bat but just a little feeble at fielding bunts and anything but smart at running bases. While this may have been only a temporary situation ,such a weakness would strike where Santa Ana is strongest. The Stars are all adept at bunting, and they are great base runners.

Montgomery and Botts are rated on a par with Cornelius as pitchers. The series may prove otherwise. McDonnell and Johnson of Whittier were regarded as better than "Iron Man Joe" before the recent National league playoffs but Cornelius outpitched them both to win the flag in three straight games. Botts must be figured as Cornelius' equal in advance, however. He must have something to have stood the American leaguers on their heads all year.

Ray Price, a lanky slow-ball gunner, and "Bomo" Koral, who specializes with a raise-ball, are the second and third string moundsmen in the Stars' dugout.

Wilcox Shines Behind Plate

Santa Ana has a decided edge behind the plate. Wilcox is the finest catcher in night baseball. Bob Stone, the Colton receiver, is quite satisfactory himself but hardly measures up to Wilcox's standard.

Colton's infield was strengthened considerably by the addition of Stock, a brilliant second baseman from Pomona. He is said to have improved the Reds' infield tremendously. Jack Stone, first baseman, is the team's Babe Ruth, a right hand hitter who is a threat any time he steps to the post. The Santa Ana flychasers will have to play deep for him. Shaddox at third and Hanegan at short are good mechanical fielders and good throwers. Weiser is the team's reserve infielder.

Santa Ana matches these with Bill Cole, a big first baseman who fields well and is dangerous at bat. Leavitt Daley, the team's leading hitter, is at second base. He is a high class ball player in every respect. His acquisition this season made the Santa Ana club 50 per cent stronger, offensively and defensively. "Memphy" Hill, a smart little veteran with wads of color, is the shortpatcher. He is consistently good. Bill Hunter, third baseman, has one of the strongest throwing arms in the game. He is a steady ,hard-working chap, and improving at the bat as he begins to look at more and more good pitching.

Good Reserve Material

Scott, equally at home at third or second base, and Curt Youel, a smooth fielding southpaw first baseman, are Santa Ana's reserve infielders. Johnny Lutz also is a first sacker by trade but a substitute outfielder by convenience.

The Santa Ana outfield figures to have a slight edge over the Reds. Bell, Nelson and Merrill are marvelous defensive players, the first two seldom letting a game go by without coming up with some kind of a remarkable catch. Merrill, less sensational, fields everything wel lenough and is the most dangerous man on the club with runners on base. Nelson also is a great "come through" artist.

Earl Thoms, center fielder, is Colton's pride and joy. They rate him as the finest flychaser that ever broke into the American league. A southpaw, he is much like Orv Schuchardt in his manner of covering ground in the outer patrols. He is a sweet hitter also. Gilbert, Bowers and Noriega, who will roam the other pastures, are all dependable workmen, too. The Colton outfield will not be o utclassed by any means.

The second game of the series will be played at Colton next Tuesday. Then the teams return to the Bowl Friday. Three games are on the schedule for the following week.

club is great until it has won at least two championships."

Mr. Mack is not only lean and kindly, but he also knows how to shoot a barbed shaft of sarcasm right to the bull's-eye. The above words are meant to convey to the lads that Mr. Mack isn't paying them for coming out to the ball park and looking wise. Mr. Mack doesn't want any yawning. And over-confidence to Mr. Mack is most distasteful.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

CHICAGO BD OF TRADE

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Rumors that the preliminary figures of a local statstician revealed a corn crop of below 2,000,000,000 bushels spread over the Board of Trade today and caused a rush of buying that sent prices climbing upward. Shorts covered freely and seelers of offers were forced to protect themselves. Decembr wnte up more than 3 cents. While the best prices were not maintained, the market closed with sharp gains; wheat ascended with corn early but liqidation in September acted as a depressing factor. Oats also clunbed on the strength in corn. Profit taking and evening up for the triple holiday stemmed the rise.

At the close wheat was unchanged to 1c lower, corn was 2 to 2¼c higher and oats were ⅝ to 1⅜c higher. Provisions were unevenly lower to higher.

Miniature Golf Snaps
Why launch a new golf course when there are bargains to be had in ESTABLISHED, STABILIZED courses? For six months we have done nothing but design, build, operate and sell miniature golf. We are in touch with HUNDREDS OF COURSE OWNERS in four counties. We believe that THE GAME IS HERE TO STAY. Many misfits have rushed into the game. Many hurry-up partnerships were formed that failed to jell. This has produced a situation where fundamentally sound courses that are being mismanaged CAN BE PICKED UP RIGHT. We specialize in the sale of such properties. For instance—Established 18 hole course in nearby town. Netting about $400 month, Blvd. location. Low overhead. Stand most rigid investigation. About $2500 cash necessary. SEE US ABOUT THIS —No information over phone.

EVENING SALUTATION

—Former President Coolidge.

OUR FOREIGN CRITICS

Ever since the establishment of our government, with the adoption of the Constitution in 1789, our scheme of government and our industrial development have been of great interest to European students. Of these, the observations and studies of men and women like de Toqueville, Harriet Martineau, Mrs. Trollope, and Charles Dickens are often quoted. In recent years we have had an avalanche of books on the United States by foreigners. There seems to be almost as much interest in the development of these United States as in the Communistic experiment which is being worked out in Soviet Russia.

Among the more recent critiques of American life is one by a Frenchman, Georges Duhamel, who pictures for us a very dark future. He believes that our industrial civilization with its mass production and its material prosperity has been developed at the expense of our moral ideals, and that a continuation of the course will lead us on to decadence and doom. He sees nothing in the future but the passing of individuality. All that survives of our early idealism and culture are a few conventional phases and sentences. Despite the reputation for youth, we are already senile and decadent.

We wonder if it can be quite so bad. "Pertinax," the French journalist and correspondent, has been visiting the United States, and he fails to see the dire future pictured by Duhamel. He smiles at our youthful enthusiasms, our passion for bigness, and our emphasis upon machinery as the great thing to be desired. But to him these are the marks of youth, not senility and decadence. He seems to think that we shall outgrow these youthful pursuits, and, finding that they do not get us anywhere, we will find ourselves ultimately following the road of culture and idealism.

The closest observers among our own critics hold the views of "Pertinax." They are not blind to our faults and follies. But they too, see a people who have succeeded in gathering a good many material toys, and are playing with them very hard. By and by, with more years of national life, they expect us to tire of these petty things, and go in for the things much more worth while. We see that working itself out in the country at large. The thriving West smiles at the effete East. The culture of Harvard is spoken of with an amused smile. But down underneath, as we observe farther and farther West, there is a deep desire to get the educational advantages of the so-called effete East. The rich man of the middle West has a desire to send his boy and girl through an Eastern college, and the boy and girl usually go back swaggering with their Eastern accent and their Eastern manners.

A nation's life is very complex. There are forces at work which steady it amid all its wild pursuits. It is as Ferrero, the Italian historian once said, at the time of the Insurance scandals, which brought Charles E. Hughes into the limelight of publicity. Underneath all our corruption and our quest for material success, he said, the old Puritan moral leaven is still at work. The close observer of American life finds himself in accord with that belief. "Pertinax" is nearer to the point than Duhamel. We are young, but we are growing up. With age comes experience. What is a century and a half in the life of a people anyway? We are just beginning to find ourselves.

Those two Brooklyn men who propose to sail to Europe in a big rubber ball will find that even in their simple way it takes a roll to get across.

GIFFORD PINCHOT WINS OUT

The regulars in Pennsylvania have left no stone unturned to sidetrack Gifford Pinchot as the Republican nominee for governor of the state. Finding themselves handicapped by getting only a minority of the votes, they thought they might get him out of the race by questioning the legality of a certain number of ballots of which there were just enough to give the nomination to his nearest competitor, Shunk Brown.

The case was carried up to the Supreme court of the state, and that tribunal found that while the Luzerne county officials took some illegal measures in perforating the ballots used, there was no question but that the voters of that county intended to register their support of Mr. Pinchot. Therefore, the case was dismissed, and Gifford Pinchot continues to be the regular Republican nominee.

A poor loser is a poor sport, and the regulars of Pennsylvania have not helped their cause much by seeking a legal technicality to win out. The people in general believe in a fair game, and we shall be very much surprised if Mr. Pinchot does not come out at the November election with such a thumping majority that will make the opposition to him look very cheap indeed. The governorship in Pennsylvania carries with it a very large patronage, much more so than the senatorship which the regulars won, and of the two we suspect that the regulars would have preferred the governorship to the senatorship. Now their cake has turned to be dough on one side at least, and they are in a great quandary. They might prefer a Democrat to Mr. Pinchot, but they hardly dare to come out in the open for a Democrat.

ANOTHER IDOL FALLS

James Truslow Adams, who has recast so much of American history for us in his three volumes on New England, and whose more recent study of the lives of the Adams family, which has given two presidents to the United States, and many other men of note, including the present Secretary of the Navy, now comes out with an article on John Hancock in the September Harper's, which makes the first signer of the Declaration of Independence look like a very ordinary man indeed. The traditional John Hancock, whose name appears on the Declaration of Independence so large that even "old King George could see it without his spectacles on," goes with all the rest of the heroes who have been debunked. Only, as Mr. Adams says, there was no need of debunking, for he never had a place in American history except by name.

Mr. Adams heads his study of John Hancock under the very suggestive title of "The Portrait of an Empty Barrel." He makes the statement that there was never enough to his life to call out any kind of a biography. He was lucky in the receipt of a large fortune through a relative. His wealth and his social position gave him a place which his ability never would have given him. The astute Sam Adams remarked when he was elected as a representative to Congress that the town had done a wise thing in electing Hancock. "It has made the young man's fortune its own." It was not always certain whether he was on the patriot side or the tory side. When George Washington was appointed Commander of the Colonial army, Hancock was deeply disappointed. He felt that he was fitted for it himself. Though he offered himself to Washington "even as a private," the Commander-in-Chief courteously declined his request by saying that he had no position in the army equal to Col. Hancock's merit. When he resigned as President of the Continental Congress in 1777, a resolution of thanks and appreciation was voted only by the votes of the delegates outside of New Hampshire and Massachusetts where he was best known.

We have often wondered why a name conspicuous as that of Hancock should have attached to it so little of fact to make it stand out in American history. It just goes to show that a name attached to a great historic document like the Declaration of Independence may give fame to a man who achieved very little for the cause with which his name is immortally associated.

Helping the Police

Christian Science Monitor

While there is unmistakably an increasing appreciation for the useful protective activity of the police in American cities, there are occasional reports of interference with officers which indicate that many cities have yet to learn the full significance of the saying that "obedience to law is liberty." One such instance of a condition which demands a remedy is the recent case of a Cambridge (Mass.) man. After helping a policeman arrest a drunken disturber, he was set upon and fatally beaten by a gang of rowdies who had tried to interfere with the officer. Spontaneous support for enforcers of the law should be too strong to permit such a thing to occur.

The commission of crime is bad enough, but worse still are wanton attacks on those performing their duty. Only less reprehensible is the too frequent tendency to laugh at and belittle the efforts of police officers or to sympathize secretly with an escaping offender.

At these times it is the moral duty of every citizen to help to see that the law is respected. The police need and are rightfully entitled to the support of every man, woman and child. The law is not an abstract tyrant to be evaded. It represents the best crystallized and legalized thought of the community for conducting its affairs. While the preservation of law and order depends primarily upon the obedience of the citizens, protection of legitimate occupations and of the pursuit of happiness comes in large measure from the conscientious work of the police.

Children today, more than they did years ago, look upon the kindly policeman as a friend and guardian. Automobilists too have learned that much of their safety rests with the alert traffic officer. Conditions will improve as more persons come to the same realization. And, on the other hand, officers can help win public co-operation by adopting a more co-operative attitude, manifested in greater courtesy and consideration.

Instead of parroting the cry "there ought to be a law" against this or that, citizens of the United States will more quickly solve the crime problem by linking up readily and vigorously on the side of the policeman who is trying to do his duty.

Mechanization Can Be Carried a Bit Too Far

San Francisco Chronicle

Those who look on the machine as a menace to the higher side of our civilization will find support in the announcement that an automatic device has been perfected to supplant the doorman as an institution. We have long looked on the doorman in his gorgeous uniform as one of the saving elements of city life. His deliberate grace has stood out in the hurly burly as a model to be contemplated even if none could hope to emulate his ornamental excellence. And now he is marked to go, to be supplanted by an uninspiring machine.

Evidently the inventor does not understand the aesthetic and ethical values that he attacks with his new fangled contrivance. Had he ever seen Emil Jannings in "The Last Laugh" he would have understood the dignity and social influence of the doorman.

During the current discussion of uniforms for our diplomats abroad we have more than once though of suggesting something on the order of the doorman's trappings. But if those refulgent regalia are to succumb to an automatic device how can we point to them?

Hands off! The touch of glory the doorman gives is needed by the humdrum city street. Not even the movie usher can take his place. Besides, one usually has to buy a ticket before getting a glimpse of the usher's too juvenile grandeur.

EXPLAINING HALL CAINE

There are no "swear" words in the Manx language
The Isle of Manx! The Isle of Manx!
Where folks would look at you with wonder
And faint away if you should say:
"My Gosh!" or "Sugar!" or "Oh, Thunder!"
Where even any British tar
Emitting the most mild profanity,
Would be regarded near and far
As suffering from stark insanity.
In that lone island in the sea
How dull and listless life must be!

The Isle of Manx! The Isle of Manx!
The spot that gave the world Hall Caine,
And all his yarns, yet looks on "Darns!"
With shrugs and gestures of disdain.
Where, when a tourist stubs his toe,
And murmurs "Drat the Luck!" or "Gee!"
Men pale with fear from ear to ear,
Or faint or turn away and flee!
One curse would decimate the ranks
Of all the folk that dwell in Manx!"

The Isle of Manx! The Isle of Manx!
Oh what an Island to be in!
You'd break the law if you said "Pshaw!"
When you fell down and barked your shin.
How do the Manxmen get along?
How do they bear a sorry fate,
If, when they've struck bad runs of luck
They don't know how to imprecate?
No wonder that, from zone to zone
The Isle of Manx is little known!

The Farm Problem Again

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

The "farm problem" persists, largely because farmers persist in raising more produce than can be sold at satisfactory prices.

There is only one cure for this kind of over-production. That cure is the reduction of crop acreage.

How is this reduction to be brought about? The only economically sound way is through the operation of economic law. In the interests of common welfare, those farmers should reduce acreage who are farming at the greatest disadvantage. The high-cost producer should give away to the low-cost producer. Leave them alone, and that is what will happen.

It is happening every day. The most efficient makers of automobiles are putting the least efficient out of business. There is the same struggle for existence among producers of copper, kegs, cotton cloth, tin cans, wood pulp, and thousands of other commodities.

The law of supply and demand, functioning through price, so operates that supply is decreased by the elimination of those producers who are least fit to survive. They are what economists call "marginal producers."

To protect them from the operation of the law of supply and demand is to obstruct the forces which make for higher per capita production and higher standards of living.

Another way to reduce crop acreage is by direct governmental action. The United States is now trying that method. The Federal Farm Board recommends a reduction of at least 10 per cent in wheat acreage, but expresses the opinion that 20 per cent would be better. The Board also favors a reduction of cotton acreage. The Board makes this recommendation to all farmers, regardless of their efficiency.

The farmers, of course, will not accept this advice. And they should not. Those who are growing wheat at lowest cost should NOT cut down acreage. The reduction should come, as it will come, through the elimination of the marginal producer. This will take place without the advice of the Government.

And it will benefit everybody, including farmers.

The board of supervisors yesterday fixed the Orange county tax rate for this year at $1.95 per $100 of assessed valuation.

An exceedingly light vote is being cast throughout Orange county today in the primaries, with Santa Ana, the only place where a local election of supervisors is taking place, thus far recording only a few votes.

Little Miss Laurene Sauers, of Tustin, celebrated her birthday anniversary Saturday afternoon with a delightful little party.

Miss Mary Joe Grubb was the hostess at a house party last evening, with a barbeque concluding the pleasant afternoon events, and a theater party at the West End climaxing the evening.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THINGS TO COME

As economic America looks head into the next decade, here are some things that will, I suggest, have to come into the picture if she is to realize a stable and prosperous time.

The ghost of restricted consumption leers at the window as we try to look out across the fields into America's economic future, and yet, as I said yesterday, we are still far short of satisfying the legitimate demands a healthy and civilized folk should be making for goods and services.

The problem before America's economic leadership is to create purchasing power and to get that purchasing power into the hands of the masses so that they can make these demands that health and civilization indicate.

The moment we can begin to recreate purchasing power and to destribute it in the pay envelopes of the working millions, all the pre-market-slump standards of consumption will snap back into play. America is scared for the moment, and, in the light of the basic factors of the American scene, unduly scared. But once the curve starts upward ever so slightly, and keeps going up long enough to let us see it is not a forced flurry of activity, America will forget her market scare. This is a factor of very real hope.

And then, if we can bend our genius as a nation of advertising genius to the task of educating the nation to a maximum of civilized desires, we shall get our stride again.

We must be willing to look the tariff problem in the fact without our political blue goggles to color and distort the issue. There is a whole world outside our frontiers in which millions upon millions of men and women are living far below the consumption level that we have known and that health and civilized values dictate. Great statesmanship, here and abroad, would see to it that the level of civilized living in those under consuming areas was lifted, and that tariffs did not make the lifting more difficult than it is naturally.

Above all, the total economic life of America must be brought under the influence of a leadership that thinks in terms of the current rather the traditional situation.

I think I could pick six American business and industrial leaders who, acting as a directorate of economic America, could rectify and regularize our economic situation in a period of time, the shortness of which would astound us. We need to make epidemic a kind of business thinking that is now exceptional.

OUR CHILDREN

THE RESTLE SS CHILD

Grown-up people are anxious and concerned about many things. Their work is very important. They hate to have it interrupted. Sometimes indeed, it must not be interrupted. But what is the restless child to whom activity is the breath of life to do?

"Sit still. Don't you move again until I tell you to. You're enough to drive a person crazy. You haven't been quiet a minute since breakfast. Now you sit there and don't you move."

The poor children who are on a long train journey. Heedless grown ups packed their bags and never gave a thought of what was to be done for the active little body that was going along. Looking out of the window has its limitations, especially if there is no one to look with you and talk about things. Legs and back begin to ache and motion becomes imperative.

"Sit still. See all these people looking at you. No, you can't have another drink. You don't need a drink. Three drinks in ten minutes is silly. No. You can't race up and down the aisles. No. You can't stand up in the seat. Let the curtain alone. Goodness, what a child. Sit still, I tell you."

But the child cannot sit still. Nature is demanding that he be active, that he move about and do something. It is not possible to do much moving about in a train but if one carried a bag full of interesting things for the child to use during the trip, life would be brighter for everybody.

According to the age of the child you select the book, the toy, the game that is to help pass the long hours. Dolls, new ones of course are fine; a nest of boxes with a prize in the last; a funny folding paper favor; a puzzle; a drawing slate; a kaleidoschope; a picture book. It is best to have the things new so that interest in them is stronger.

Little children ought not to be taken to places where it is necessary that they sit still for any length of time. Church is no place for a restless child; a concert or a lecture, any place where the conditions demand silence is not the place for a little child. I have no fear that the child will not get training in sitting still. He gets more of that sort than of any other. The danger lies in getting too much sitting still and not enough activity.

It is necessary, too, to teach a child consideration of others. But making him sit still will not do that. It will make him hate the person who makes his suffer so, and it will make him hate the place that called out the punishing circumstances.

Provide for the child's need for activity, consider well the place and circumstances into which you plan taking him, and remember his need. Don't make him sit still for any length of time. It results in frayed and bad habits.

BATTLE OF BULL RUN

On August 29, 1862, the Confederate forces under General Robert E. Lee badly defeated the Union forces under General Pope in the Second Battle of Bull Run, called by historians one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil war.

Pope, because of his previous good service was put in command of a newly organized force, the "Army of Virginia," intended to operate against Richmond. He moved against Jackson, Confederate general, in the hope he would meet him before re-enforcements arrived. But Jackson had beaten him to it. In this predicament Pope himself asked for re-enforcements and additional supplies of ammunition, but failed to receive them in time.

Pope was severely beaten and his forces driven back. Just 13 months before this, the Army of the Potomac was defeated on the same battlefield. Pope now led his men back to the defense of Washington. The campaign had cost him at least 15,000 men. The Confederate loss was estimated as probably above 10,000. In spite of the Federal rout, General Longstreet, Confederate leader who took part in the battle, declared Pope "made a splendid fight."

Shuler Charges Fitts "Sold Out" In San Francisco

CLAIMS HE HAS INSIDE INFORMATION

Declares He Is Sure That At Least 25,000 Votes Were Cast in 'Frisco

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29.—(UP)—District Attorney Buron Fitts was "sold out" in San Francisco and the Republican gubernatorial nomination "was stolen from him there," the Rev. R. P. "Fighting Bob" Shuler charged here today.

Shuler, for long a political figure in Los Angeles and a staunch supporter of the Fitts for governor move, said his information came from a person "who has inside knowledge of the situation in the north."

"I talked yesterday with a prominent citizen who is a city official," Shuler said in a formal statement, "both told me that it was openly said in San Francisco that there was something strange about the election there.

"It seems certain that Fitts votes were turned to Rolph and that there was some manipulation of the machines.

"I am convinced that Fitts was sold out and the election stolen."

The pastor stated that he was certain that Fitts received 25,000 votes in San Francisco although the election tally showed nowhere near that number.

"On the very face of it, it is absurd that Fitts should have received less than 7,000 votes in San Francisco. He has more American Legion support than that in the city.

"I do not doubt but that more than 25,000 votes were cast for Fitts in San Francisco.

"That corruption was practiced in the tabulation of returns as well as in the election itself is denoted on the very face of the returns.

"Whether or not an investigation can be made that will bring out the facts is a question, but I am convinced and I think 90 per cent of the people are convinced that Fitts was sold out in San Francisco and the election stolen to boot."

King and Queen of England in Midst of Big Storm in Scotland Castle

LONDON, Aug. 29.—England, with a heat wave death toll of 36 in three days, faced increasingly high temperatures again today.

The thermometer registered two degrees higher than yesterday at corresponding hours, while swimming pools and ice cream venders did a big business.

Since stock brokers appeared in shirt sleeves and high hats because of the burning sun, conventionally clad business men and women have become a rarity. Even London dock workers went directly from pools to their desks, wearing light clothes over bathing suits.

The Peterboro brick factory ceased work and farming in various districts was suspended.

TEXTBOOK FOR CANDIDATE IS GIVEN PUBLIC

Long Promised Hoover Manual Made Public By G. O. P. Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(UP)—The long promised Hoover manual citing the accomplishments of the administration during its first 18 months was made public by the Republican national committee today in the midst of the interparty publicity war here.

Intended as a textbook for the congressional campaign, the manual seeks to show that the president has acted to fulfill 34 of the 35 platform promises of the convention which nominated him at Kansas City in 1928.

The single exception is plank 34 headed "The Negro" in which the party renewed its recommendation that congress enact at the earliest possible time a federal anti-lynching law.

In parallel columns, the book carries the platform planks adopted at Kansas City and the things Mr. Hoover and the Republican congress have done to fulfill their pledges. Opposite "The Negro" plank is a blank space.

The book sets forth the following major accomplishments:

Maintenance of economy at the Coolidge figure.

Accumulation of a first year surplus of $184,000,000.

Reduction of $1,160,000,000 in the public debt.

Reduction of income taxes by $160,000,000.

Enactment of the tariff and farm relief legislation.

Ratification of the French debt settlement.

Negotiation of the London naval treaty.

New policies toward Haiti and Nicaragua.

An enlarged program for inland waterways.

Better enforcement through the transfer of prohibition bureau to justice department.

"At no time in history has the personnel of the administration been of so high an average order as it is today."

The manual is intended for use by Republican campaign orators this fall. Government publicity bureaus have been working for weeks gathering the material for it.

TO DISCUSS CAMPAIGN TO BEAT ROLPH

C. C. Chapman of Fullerton Mentioned As Possibility As a Candidate

Second Meeting of Anti-wet Organizations May Be Called Next Tuesday

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29.—(UP)—With smoke cleared away from the gubernatorial battlefield, political interest in Southern California shifted today to a meeting here tomorrow of representatives from ten dry organizations, at which plans for entering a "bone dry" independent candidate in the November race will be discussed.

If the proposal to put a dry independent into competition with Mayor James Rolph jr., of San Francisco, Republican nominee by about 24,000 plurality, is found feasible, another meeting of the anti-wet contingent will be held next Tuesday.

At this session, it was said, plans would be laid for an all-state convention of dry forces and for an active campaign.

Tomorow's conclave was called by Mrs. Eva C. Wheeler, president of the state W. C. T. U., in her capacity as chairman of the "clearing house committee" composed of executives of various dry bodies.

While prohibition leaders in the south have refused to discuss possibilities for their proposed independent, William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of the U. S. treasury, is regarded as under consideration.

McAdoo, now practicing law in Los Angeles, has declared, however, that he is "out of politics for good."

Other outstanding drys who were said to be possibilities included C. C. Chapman, of Fullerton; Judge Harlan G. Palmer, of Hollywood, and Judge Benjamin Bledsoe.

Because of the difficulties involved in placing an independent's name on the November ballot, some dry leaders were said to favor supporting Milton K. Young, Democratic nominee, at the polls this fall.

It was reported a committee would be appointed from the prohibition bodies to discuss with Young his views upon the liquor issue.

Calvin Coolidge Says

By CALVIN COOLIDGE
Former President of the United States

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 29.—The allegations in the recent criticism of one of the English naval reactionaries that the limitation treaty leaves their navy in a distinctly second place, after being compared with the similar statements by some of our own reactionaries regarding the resulting inferiority of our own navy, may well be eliminated from further consideration. The chief motive for the treaty was to prevent competition in building. The secondary considerations were the saving of expense and the extension of the policy of parity to all ships. Because the needs of the British were felt to differ from the needs of the United States as to types of ships and calibre of guns, parity could only be approximate. Experts differ about it. But the main object of preventing present competition was fully secured.

Further discussion of parity is not only vain but is almost an exhibition of an unfriendly attitude. Representatives of three great and peaceful naval powers have reached a temporary agreement mutually advantageous. It will be best for all concerned to adopt it and abide by it. No good purpose will be served by constant discussion of the relative strength of the different navies.

FIVE YEAR OLD CHILD DIES OF HIS INJURIES

CHARLES J. BEISER, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Beiser, of 917 South Garney street, died at the Santa Ana Valley hospital early this morning of injuries received when he was knocked down by an Owl taxicab, driven by Art Williams, in front of his home at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

Death was due to a fractured skull, although the child also received severe internal injuries and a broken leg in two places.

The accident occurred while Charles and a number of other little boys were playing. Charles suddenly ran into the street to get away from another boy and ran directly into the taxicab, according to a report made at the police station.

The body of the boy was removed to the Harrell and Brown funeral parlors here and Coroner Charles D. Brown announced this morning that he would conduct an inquest at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Harrell and Brown funeral parlors.

BABY CHRISTENED

PASADENA, Aug. 29.—(UP)—The four months old daughter of John Barrymore and Dolores Costello Barrymore bore the official name of Dolores Ethel Mae Barrymore today. The infant was christened at a church ceremony late yesterday attended by her parents and her godfather, Lionel Barrymore. She was named for her aunt, Ethel Barrymore, her deceased grandmother, Mrs. Maurice Costella, and her mother.

MC ADOO REFUSES TO DISCUSS POLITICS

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 29.—(UP)—William Gibbs McAdoo is not "talking politics" he said here today when asked by the United Press about reports that he might become an independent "dry" candidate for governor of California.

"You may tell everybody," McAdoo said, "that I am on a little vacation with my friend, H. B. R. Briggs, that I am out of politics, and that I am not discussing politics. We are on our way to the Pendleton roundup, and that thought is uppermost in my mind at present."

PLANE FALL KILLS TWO GIRLS, PILOT

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Two girls and the pilot with whom they were riding received fatal injuries in an airplane crash here yesterday.

The dead were: Rose Zajac, 20, Pearl Jabczynska, 18, and Arthur Devlin, 33.

It was the first time the girls had ever flown. Devlin, member of the 106th Flying club, strapped them both in the passenger cockpit of one of the club's planes and started off early in the evening.

He banked steeply when circling the field to land after a short flight and the plane went into a tail spin at an altitude of about 500 feet.

Miss Zajac died within an hour after the accident. The other two victims lived for several hours, dying late last night.

INVESTIGATION OF TRAIN CRASH BEGUN

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif., Aug. 29.—(UP)—An investigation into the collision of two Southern Pacific limited trains, in which 21 passengers and a trainman were injured, was begun today by state and railway officials.

The rear-end crash early yesterday between the northbound Lark and Padre trains allegedly was caused when the Lark ran through signals set against it. The Padre, running ahead, had stopped here for repairs to a leaky steam hose coupling.

T. H. Williams, assistant general manager of the Southern Pacific, headed the board of inquiry, which also included representatives of the state railroad commission and citizens of San Luis Obispo. Aiding them was President Paul Shoup of the Southern Pacific, who was on the Padre at the time of the accident.

STUNT AVIATOR TO FLY OLD AIRPLANE

CURTISS WRIGHT AIRPORT, Chicago, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Al Wilson, movie stunt aviator, will fly his antique 1911 Pusher plane from Chicago to Los Angeles, he told the United Press today.

"I'm going to fly that old plane to the west coast just to prove that the old style pusher planes are practicable," said Wilson, one of the most famous of American stunt pilots.

"I'll probably be landing in corn fields and barn lots and all sorts of places and there's no telling how long it may take, but I'll get there. I'll follow the southern route, of course."

SINGER MUST PAY WIFE $250 WEEKLY

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29.—(UP) The protests of Cliff Edwards, otherwise "Ukelele Ike," as to his lack of ready cash, had availed him little today in his fight against temporary alimoney to his estranged wife, Mrs. Irene Edwards.

Superior Judge Myron Westover, deciding a claim of Mrs. Edwards for funds pending a divorce hearing, ordered the stage and screen performer to pay her $250 a week. Mrs. Edwards had testified she needed this sum to "maintain her social standing as the wife of Cliff Edwards."

"Social standing is something I don't claim," Edwards told the judge. "I'm just a plain singer and pretty 'broke' right now, and anyway I gave her a $150,000 settlement when we separated."

Counsellor Perotte, who discovered the robbery, said that numerous passports and a small sum of money had been stolen. He refused to confirm the theft of important documents.

FISHERMAN SAVED FROM KELP DEATH

SAN PEDRO, Aug. 29.—(UP)—The keen eyesight of Capt. M. S. Swiber of the tanker Lio saved Zotero Irra, a Mexican fisherman, from death in the kelp beds when his frail canoe was wrecked on a reef.

Irra watched several ships go by without seeing his frantic signals until Captain Swiber noticed his head and arms above the water. He was rescued and brought here.

The two men, carrying sandwiches and chocolate, expect to reach Tacoma in 50 hours, arriving at some time around 12 noon Sunday (P. S. T.) They plan to carry a gas supply of 1020 gallons estimated sufficient for between 55 and 60 hours of continuous flight.

A banquet for the American flyer and his pilot Harold Gatty was arranged for tonight by aviation enthusiasts. Bromley announced that he and Gatty would return to the flying field after the party to sleep.

The west-east flight, which was decided upon after an unsuccessful attempt to make a non-stop flight from Washington here, at first aroused objections from Japanese aviation authorities who declared the venture too dangerous. They finally consented to grant a license but warned the flyer that he could not expect aid from them if he was forced down after passing Iwate prefecture on his proposed journey. He was also forbidden to carry in his plane either explosives or a camera and to fly over Tokio.

Bromley declared his plane was in good condition. He was confident of a successful termination to the hazardous flight.

NEW YORK BONDS

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(UP—Severe breaks in Argentina securities, on fears of political disturbances in that country, unsettled the foreign list and gave the bond market a ragged appearance around noon today.

Nine Argentina issues lost a total of 14 points, heaviest recessions taking place in the 6½s of 1959, 6s B, 6s of September 1960 and 6s of October 1959, which ranged from two to nearly three points. Brazil 6½s were under pressure selling off more than a point, while a slightly smaller loss was recorded in Chile 6s, Sao Paulo 6½s sold off 1½ points. International Railway of Central America 6s broke 4⅛ points.

The exception to the trend in foreign obligations were Mexican Bonds, which continued their advance of yesterday, scoring gains ranging from ¾ to 1½ points. U. S. government loans were firm and fairly active.

Leading railroads drew support after an irregular opening, and gains were recorded by such issues as Missouri Pacific 5½s, Pere Marquette 4½s, Southern Pacific 4½s and Chicago Milwaukee St. Paul and Pacific 5s. Seaboard 6s eased ½ point.

Utilities and leading industrial bonds were comparatively quiet, generally moving fractionally higher. A few oil bonds drew attention, while Warner Brothers convertible 6s gained ½ point to feature activity in the amusement group.

Conductor Kills Former Employer, Takes Own Life

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Grief over the loss of his job after 23 years of service was believed today to have been the cause of John Donlin, conductor, killing his past employer, Byron Gunn, superintendent of the Market street railway, and then committing suicide.

Donlin had been discharged recently by Gun after repeated warnings that he was drinking too much.

Yesterday, Donlin, with a grim set jaw, entered the car barn, and ignoring the salutations of his former comrades, proceeded to Gunn's office.

On Gunn's refusal to give him back his job, Donlin whipped out a revolver and sent a bullet crashing into the superintendent's head. Without a word the former conductor walked out into the hall, calmly refilled the .38 caliber gun and shot himself in the head.

DAREDEVIL DYING FROM PLANE FALL

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Ted Steelman, Baltimore daredevil, was believed dying today from injuries he received when he plunged 2000 feet into the ocean from a plane in his "human cannonball" stunt. A parachute he wore failed to open until too late.

Only his presence of mind saved him from instant death. He assumed a position that broke some of the force of his fall.

Steelman took the place of Harvey Powers, who originated the stunt for the benefit of sightseers on a steel pier. Powers was killed August 1 in a similar accident. He was shot from a cannon on a plane, and plunged down when his parachute failed to open.

W. J. MORRISON ENDS 25 YEARS AS LETTERMAN

fellow workers ringing in his ears. His retirement follows orders from the postal authorities at Washington, as he has passed the age limit. He observed his 70th birthday anniversary last June.

The veteran, who has spent his entire span of a quarter of a century of postal service through the Santa Ana office, is widely known in the city, and served for many years as secretary of the Odd Fellows lodge. The presentation of the gift of the clerks and officials of the postoffice was made to "Jeff" by Postmaster Stephenson, following an appreciation of his work by Sam Vogt, president of the postal clerk's association. Vogt declared that Morrison had made an unusual record and expressed the good wishes of his fellow workers.

In the presentation speech the postmaster expressed his appreciation of the integrity and faithful service of the veteran carrier, referred to the thousands of miles he had traveled in postal service, mentioned the world of friends that the man had made through his service and character, declared that he represented the finest and best in the postal service, and assured him of the affection of all postal employes. Stephenson also pointed out that this was the first time that a member of the postal service in Santa Ana had reached the retirement age while in active service. The postmaster also spoke of how well Morrison was liked by his patrons and friends on the route he had traveled.

Stephenson announced today that Lloyd Tucker would be transferred to Morrison's old route, the advancement of M. W. Guynn for senior substitute carrier and special delivery carrier to appointment as a regular carrier, the transfer of Dawson B. Young from the substitute clerk list to the substitute carrier list to fill the vacancy there, and the appointment of Harry A. Polk, of Los Angeles, and Cecil E. Hamilton, of San Bernardino, as substitute clerks. Polk and Hamilton are moving with their families to Santa Ana.

There are now 26 carriers and 21 clerks working in the Santa Ana office, with six substitutes in each division. C. C. Langley is foreman of the postal carriers.

GOOD TASTE IN CLOTHES

—a service that costs you nothing here

Getting the cost down is the keynote of most businesses this year—both wholesale and retail.

Hart Schaffner & Marx, always aggressive leaders, are giving us more at wholesale, and we are straining every effort to pass on to you even more than the wholesale saving.

FOR EXAMPLE—Hart, Schaffner & Marx have created a new suit value at $27.50; with 2 trousers $35. They've put more tailoring, richer linings, refinements in Gordian Worsteds.

All through the line you find these evidences of more for your dollar. Buy your clothes now and save.

But neither we nor the makers will sacrifice good taste in style, in workmanship, in pattern, simply to meet a price. We insist on good taste in the selection and in the selling of everything in our store and we lower the costs, too.

DEATHS

No one can become better than he is unless and until he recognizes his need to be made better. No one who nurses the feeling of outrage against God and of resentment regarding what he has to endure is capable of receiving help from his Father or from his brethren.

You must make the venture of believing that God loves you and that He is ready and eager to give you power to go bravely on, and then seek strength and courage in communion with Him, if you hope to struggle up from the slough of despond and to realize your splendid manhood.

MODERN MUSIC IS PLAYED FOR SERVICE CLUBS

BY RUTH ANDREWS

The customary throng of several thousand appreciative music lovers was in attendance last evening at Santa Ana Municipal band's regular weekly concert program in Birch park, directed by D. C. Cianfoni, and dedicated on this occasion to members of local service clubs. Selections from modern composers were featured with special emphasis being given to works popular in nature.

Well defined military rhythms of Chambers' "Chicago Tribune" march prefaced a pleasing rendition of the Suppe overture, "Morning, Noon and Night in Vienna," expressive throughout of the vitality and fondness for motion outstandingly characteristic of the famous Belgian composer. Premiere local rendition of this interesting work was much enjoyed.

Delicate clarinet predominated in the opening theme, symbolic of dawn, read with restraint and contrasted by a more animated interchange of instrumentation in the succeeding movements, its staccato finale effectively drawn in presto tempo.

Luigini's melodious "Ballet Egyptien" with its five contrasting movements was much enjoyed. Characteristically accented Oriental dance rhythms and harmonic modulations allured with ever shifting eastern color, instrumentation throughout echoing the typical Oriental note, with its emphasis of native oboe, woodwinds, clashing cymbal, tambourine and tinkling triangle.

James Sewell, local baritone, took solo honors of the evening in a well contrasted song group, including "Rolling Down to Rio" (German), the favorite "Pale Moon" by Logan, with its hint of Indian romance. As encore, Sewell chose McGill's familiar "Duna," clarity of tone and diction outstanding in all his work. He was effectively accompanied by Miss Ruth Armstrong.

Announcement was made by Harry Hanson, president and manager of the band, in regard to the two remaining concerts of the summer series. Next week's concert will feature "Church Night," with a symphonic program, together with the appearance of the First Methodist church chorus choir and Mrs. F. W. Slabaugh, contralto soloist. The final concert of the series, scheduled for September 11, will be designated as "Santa Ana" night, with an all request program.

A succession of lilting themes from the graceful modern light opera "Maytime" by Sigmund Rombert was much liked, also the familiar old Tobani reverie, "Hearts and Flowers," long favored by band audiences because of its alluring melody.

The interesting descriptive fantasie, "A Vision of Salome," by J. Bodewalt Lampe was heard locally for the first time last night. This work, quite modern in treatment and of programmatic nature, opened with a characteristically Oriental dance form, rapidly succeeded by varying moods, and quite impressionistic throughout.

With definitely military note, Waldteufel's "Valse Militaire" made a vigorous finale, interwoven rifle shots startling, realistic and interestingly utilized in connection with the basic waltz theme.

CONTINUE HEARING ON FINE APPEALS

Hearings on the appeal of Robert W. Phillips and two other men from fines levied in justice courts for violation of provisions of the motor vehicle act, which were scheduled today before Judge James L. Allen, were continued for a period of four weeks when the matter was called in superior court today.

The cases are being appealed by the legal department of the Southern California Auto club on the grounds that arresting officers were not using cars painted white as provided in the act, at the time arrests were made which resulted in the fines. The Phillips case was appealed from the justice court of Charles Kinsler at Brea.

Mexican Sleeps Nine Days Under Deserted House

After he is asserted to have lain underneath a deserted old house at Stanton for the past nine days, Vicente Corona, 42, Stanton Mexican, was pulled out in a drunken stupor by Deputy Sheriff A. L. Stewart early this morning and taken to the county hospital in a critical condition.

Hospital attendants said that the man was suffering from a severe case of alcoholism.

Relatives of the man had been searching for him for the past week, it was reported. He was found this morning, and the sheriff's office was notified.

Hospital records show that an ambulance took Corona to the hospital on July 14 in much the same condition, after he had been found in a hole in the ground where he had slept for several days. The records also show that on June 23, he was brought to the hospital in a serious condition from alcohol, by members of his family.

A charge of drunkenness was lodged against Corona by Steward.

BARNHILL RESIGNS FROM STATE SQUAD

Vernon Barnhill, one of the oldest in point of service, of all motorcops in Orange county, has resigned from the Orange county state squad, because he is unable to ride a motorcycle any longer, it was made known today.

Barnhill, candidate for constable of the Santa Ana township, and one of the three high men in the run off in November, said today that his inability to continue riding a motor and the state's demand that all motorcops ride their iron steeds, caused him to tender his resignation, which has been accepted.

Captain Henry Meehan, state traffic officers' captain here said today that no plans have been made yet in appointing a new man to take Barnhill's place on the squad.

Barnhill said he would do nothing for the present, except campaign for the coming elections.

Rash is asking judgment for $41,194.35 as a result of injuries he sustained last November when he was struck by a heavy cable used in moving a house after the cable had been struck by a car driven by an employe of Edgar, according to the complaint. Motions for non-suit, which were made by the defendants at the close of the plaintiff's case, were denied by Judge Allen.

Rafael Lopez, who had been charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder and who was given a jury trial which resulted in a disagreement and setting of the case for re-trial, appeared before Judge G. K. Scovel yesterday and changed his plea from not guilty as charged, to guilty of simple assault. The time for the pronouncement of judgment was set for September 2. He was tried for an alleged attack on Ignacio Savala.

Goitre Is Caused By Germ Claimed

PARIS, Aug. 29. — (INS)—An American doctor, Dr. E. O. Houba, of Washington, D. C., caused scientists from all over the old world to sit up and take notice when he recently declared before the Microbiological Congress now in session at the Pasteur Institute, that goitre is caused by a germ.

Dr. Houba explained how he had discovered this fact purely by accident, having left a piece of goitre tissue lying on a culture medium and going away to forget it. When, a few days later ,he was about to throw it away, he noticed white blotches on the medium and found that he had bacteriological culture. With this he was able to inoculate animals and isolated the germ, thus assuring himself that goitre is not caused by a shortage of iodine in drinking water, as is generally believed.

VOTE CANVASS IS STILL UNDER WAY

The board of supervisors is continuing the canvass of returns from the primary election which was held last Tuesday and is anticipating completion of the arduous task by seven or eight o'clock tonight. Tally sheets are being checked against the reports made by the election boards to County Clerk J. M. Backs as soon as the count had been completed.

Some errors are being uncovered, it was reported by Supervisor Charles Chapman today, but he stated that it was not believed that the totals would be changed materially. The official count of the ballots by the board started at 1 p. m. yesterday. County Clerk Joe Backs and Deputy County Clerk B. J. Smith are assisting in the work.

Totals will not be available until next week, Backs announced today, as considerable time will be required to compute the total vote cast for the large number of candidates whose names appeared on the ballots.

FIRE AT CITY DUMP CAUSES SMOKE SCREEN

Even the city dump must have its share of publicity now and then.

Not satisfied with the meager "news breaks" accorded to it in the past, the depository of trash took the situation into its own control yesterday and threw a real scare into residents of this city by sending a cloud of smoke over the entire community.

Dozens of telephone calls reached The Register, asking where the forest fire was. The smoke was visible from the lookout station on Saddleback and the whole city appeared enveloped in haze from that point. The station called the Santa Ana fire department to learn if there was a fire in the valley.

Investigation by the fire department revealed the fact that the fire in the city dump, located to the southwest of the city near Buaro road, had been burning through material which probably was oil soaked and that a great volume of smoke had resulted from a very small blaze. No damage was done.

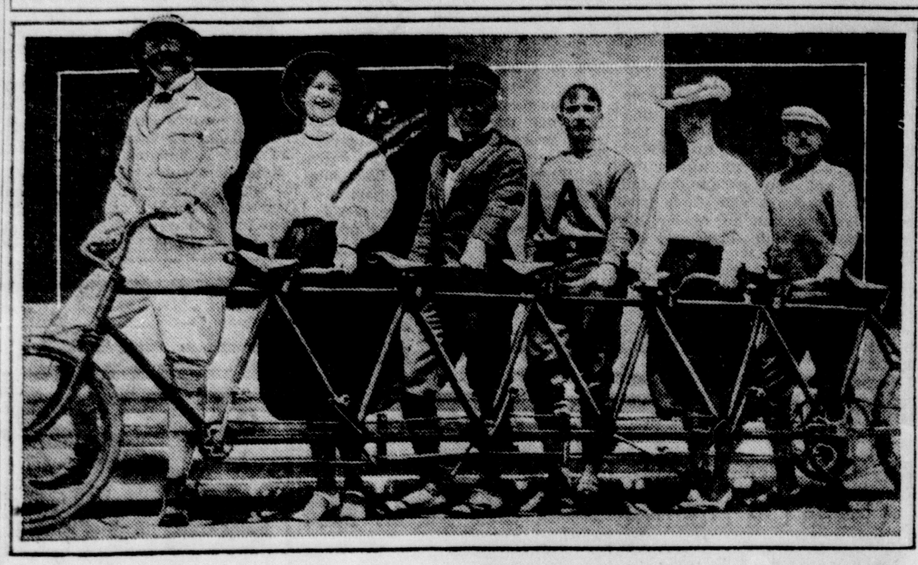

After its half hour of smoky glory the city dump lapsed back to its normal state.

A HEAVY BILL

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 29.—W. T. Scott, of Texarkana, bought a radio set here for $118. The dealer had the set packed for shipment to Scott's home and sent along a bill. Scott came into the store one day, apparently with a limp. The store keeper, thinking that Scott had come to pay his bill, got out a pen to receipt it. To his surprise, Scott dumped 11,800 pennies on the counter—$118 worth. They weighed 84 pounds.

HOW THEY ROLLED ALONG IN 1880

The group standing behind the bars in the picture below is not, as you might suppose, the Florodora sextet in disguise, but six smart guests at a fashionable Del Monte, Calif., hotel, who donned old-time togs to celebrate the hotel's 50th anniversary. Besides this six-place tandem there was lots of fun with parchesi, lotto and croquet as the calendar was turned back half a century. Left to right, the riders are: Robert Cooke Smith, Miss Mary Green, Gordon Nelson, Winsor Josselyn, Miss Harriett Snider and Talbert Josselyn.

FOX AUDIENCE SEES PREVIEW OF 'LILLION'

"Lillion," latest all talking picture by Fox, from the famous stage play by the same name, was previewed by a Santa Ana audience at the Fox Broadway theater Wednesday night, and from expressions heard the latest Frank Borgaze directed feature is destined to be one of the most pleasing picture entertainments that has been produced this year.

The preview was brought here by Norman Sprowl, Fox theater manager in Santa Ana, after Fox executives had been convinced that Santa Ana was not "preview worn" and from the response given, it was indicated that other big previews would be forthcoming in a short time.

"Lillion" is a story that makes an audience think. It is a story with a moral—the moral being that even should we be allowed to live again, we would not correct our faults in this life. The picture brings this out strongly and in such a manner that it can not be missed.

Charles Farrell has the lead in the film. He plays Lillion, a master of women who cares nothing for them. Eventually he falls in love with a girl and is married. They have a child. Then Lillion dies and he goes to heaven. The scenes showing his trip to heaven, to hell and to purgatory are rather unreal, in that he makes the trip by train, and is out of line with the rest of the picture, but the audience gets the idea anyway. Just the same, the train scenes are rather absurd in the film.

After 10 years, Lillion gets a chance to come back to earth on the same train, and he goes about slapping women as he did before. He promptly is jerked back to hell and the story is ended.

Whether an audience likes "Lillion" or not, it is the kind of a picture that will be remembered and talked about a great deal.

GOLF LINKS AT PARK WILL BE OPENED TODAY

Six o'clock today has been set as the hour for the opening of the Oaks miniature golf course at the entrance to Irvine park. The presentation of a grand prize for men and an equally desirable prize for the woman making low scores will be one of the highlights of the evening.

The course has many unusual features, double curves, single curves, the figure fours, the clover leaf, a shot through a cannon, a difficult play through four wells, an intriguing shot under a fountain and a long sand shot are to be found on the links, where the hazards are all natural formations on the links.

The course is on a hillside and during the day is shaded by lovely old live oaks. A few great sycamores are to be found at the entrance and the grounds are attractively landscaped with fountains, pools and shrubbery. The links were planned by Ed Dickinson, of Balboa.

There is no time restriction as to hours of playing and the time until which the links will be kept open, will be announced later. The course will be brilliantly lighted and Senator Nels Edwards of Orange, will make the initial shot.

The Oaks is owned by J. E. Bermann and J. A. King, with Bermann as the manager.

Petition Seeks Reorganization Of Farm Center

A business meeting of the Fullerton-Placentia Farm center was held at 7:30 p.m. yesterday in Placentia, where the proposed breaking up of the combined groups and forming them into separate centers was discussed.

Definite action was taken by the Placentia group when they circulated a petition among the members which will be presented to the directors of the Orange County Farm bureau at their meeting Thursday. This petition asks the Farm bureau to reorganize them as separate Farm centers.

There will be a temporary organization meeting next week, it was announced.

WESTMINSTER

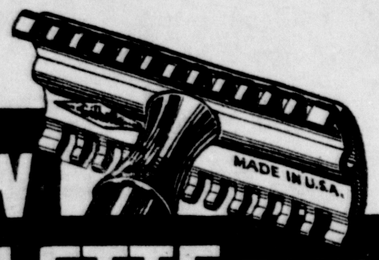

A long letter telling of the old home in England details of his trip over the interesting news of relatives, has been received from Thomas Trenery, who recently sailed from New York for Cornwall, England, which the Trenery brothers left many years ago.

Mr. Trenery is the first of the family to return and he mentions the fact that there are so many changes he can hardly find his way about to old landmarks. He notices especially the present practice of building bungalows of the same type as those popular here and which were unknown in their day in England. Many carnivals are held in the little seaport town near Truro, which was the family home and this is a decided change as it has grown to be a seaside resort, where previously it was a fishing village. Mr. Trenery has not been at all well since his arrival in England, suffering greatly from rheumatism which was unknown to him here. He is visiting with is two sisters and a number of nieces who live in the vicinity of the old home.

The first automobile constructed by Cugnot, in 1769, is still on view in the Paris Museum.

J. C. FRANKLIN. PIONEER HERE. DIES IN HOME

Jesse C. Franklin, 92, wealthy retired Santa Ana property owner, and one of the oldest residents of the county, died at his home at 716 North Main street last night.

A resident of Santa Ana for the past 49 years, he came to California in 1881, from Reno, Nev., where he had resided for 16 years, following his trade as a harness maker. He left his home in Indiana to come west during the Civil war.

An early property owner in Santa Ana, he had held property from a time when it was worth little until it developed into prominent down town business property and it had made him extremely wealthy.

The family is well known in Santa Ana. The family came here from Santa Rosa, California, and Mr. Franklin had lived in the state for 74 years.

He is survived by his widow, Ella D. Franklin. Three children, born of the union, have died here in years past.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow from the Smith and Tuthill funeral parlors.

Ortiz To Await Hearing In Jail

Jesus Ortiz, Placentia Mexican, who is charged with murdering Emma Chavez, 21, his paramour in a Placentia apartment, early on the morning of June 19, by cutting her throat from ear to ear with a razor and firing a shot into her body, was removed from the county hospital to the county jail late yesterday, where he will await trial.

Ortiz will face a jury with the story that the death of the woman was a suicide pact and that he did not murder her, it is understood.

Police in Boston are equipped with new type vision glasses enabling them to see both before and behind.

CONTINUE INN OPERATIONS TO LAST OF YEAR

Operation of St. Ann's Inn after its pending sale to Orange county, which is scheduled to take place Sept. 30, will be continued until some time in December, R. L. Bisby, manager of that well known hostelry, announced today. Possession of the building and grounds is to be given the county on January 1, he stated, and the present plan is to continue operation of the hotel as long as possible before that time.

Willard Smith, chairman of the board of supervisors, stated today that no plans had been made with reference to what offices would be moved into the new property or how the change would be effected, but he declared that the building would be remodeled for office purposes.

The Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce, which maintains offices in the south wing of the structure, expects to retain use of its quarters under the lease it now holds, for the next five years.

A statement issued by the board of directors of the St. Ann's Inn corporation, explained that the hotel, which had been built by funds secured through popular subscription after the close of the World war, had been a financial burden on its backers and that no satisfactory solution had been provided in the past. Consequently when the opportunity to sell the building and grounds to the county was presented, the board of directors agreed to sell, retaining, however, the furniture and fixtures, which are to be sold separately.

The statement expressed appreciation of the loyalty of a group of six service clubs and stockholders who have supported the hotel by their patronage, and also expressed sincere appreciation of the loyalty and efficient service of Bisby, who has managed the institution for the past six years.

BUILDING PERMITS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Building permits for this month showed an increase of $189,701 over those of August last year, it was revealed today by Building Inspector Sam Preble. There were 79 permits granted for a total valuation of $351,936, as against 85 permits valued at $162,235 in August of 1929.

The building work here this month showed a marked gain over July of 1930, when 61 permits valued at $239,877 were granted by the city building department.

Figures show that 556 permits, repesenting buildings worth $1,483,276, have been issued in Santa Ana since the first of the year, as against 585 permits and $1,180,379.50 for the same period last year.

The majority of the permits issued this month were for residences and alterations.

BROCK GIVES TALK ON PEST CONTROL

Members of the Santa Ana Realty board were interested listeners this noon, when A. A. Brock, Orange county horticultural commissioner, delivered a talk on post control.

Brock stated that the amount of money lost every year by the ravages of the different pests very nearly equalled the amount of money spent on insect control. He said $1,400,000 was spent on pest control last year.

A list of figures was read by the horticultural commissioner which represented the trend of citrus tree planting in the county, and the increase of acreage. One thousand to 3,000 acres of Valencia oranges have been planted every year for the past eight years the speaker said.

Carl Mock is to be program chairman for the next meeting, it was announced, and has secured for the members Harry Lewis, who has recently made a trip through South America and will give a talk on the economical and agricultural conditions of that country.

Convicts To Wear Pajamas, Slippers

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 29.—(UP)—There will be no steel bars, high walls or fences to confine inmates of an intermediate prison reformatory near here when it is completed, but the prisoners will be forced to wear pajamas and house slippers.

Only when the young convicts work in a factory or on the farm of the prison reservation will they have other raiment and this will be taken from them and substituted for the pajama uniforms when they return to the barracks. The plan is expected to deter escapes.

CONTINUE CASE OF GOODWIN TO SEPTEMBER 12

Due to the absence of Lester Slaback, member of the staff of official court reporters, who handled the record during the second trial of Philip A. Goodwin, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder, a motion to vacate and set aside the judgment in the case, which was to be heard today, was continued until September 12.

Goodwin's attorney, Ruel Wood, stated today that if the motion was granted it would automatically mean the granting of a new trial to the prisoner, who is now serving his sentence in Folsom prison and that he would seek a change of venue to get the case out of Orange county. He also asserted that if the motion was not granted he would appeal the matter to the fourth district appellate court.

Goodwin was sentenced to life imprisonment more than two years ago on a second trial, the first in 1926, resulting in a death verdict, which was successfully appealed. He was charged with the murder of a Los Angeles bond broker.

PROBATIO ASKED BY MRS. CAROTHERS

Mrs. Tressa Carothers, former assistant secretary of the Orange Building and Loan association, whose alleged peculations with accounts of that company resulted in a charge of grand theft being filed against her by the office of District Attorney Z. B. West, entered a plea of guilty to the charge when she was arraigned before Judge James L. Allen in superior court today.

The information on which she was arraigned charges theft of $255 on January 15, but an audit of accounts at the loan company which is being made indicates that the loss will reach $11,000 or $12,000. Chief Trial Deputy District Attorney W. F. Menton stated today.

After entering the plea of guilty the young woman entered oral application for probation through her attorney, Franklin B. West, and the court set September 12 as the time for hearing on the application. She is at liberty under $2500 bail.

LIBERTY LOAN POSTER STAYS IN ORANGE SHOP

ORANGE, Aug. 29.—Bringing back memories of the fight for funds to carry on the World war, a large Liberty loan poster displayed during the war now hangs on the wall of Meadows Print shop at 122 South Orange street.

Thousands of these posters were distributed over the country to carry the name of Clyde Forsythe, former Orange resident, the man who drew the picture. Forsythe has been gone from Orange about 30 years but attended school here in his youth. Mrs. Alice Armor of 363 South Orange street, was one of his teachers in the elementary school.

The poster is very striking, showing a typical doughboy returning from the battle line with his rifle on his shoulder and three German helmets in his hands. In the background are the ruins of war while a terse caption says, "And they thought we couldn't fight!" Many colors are used in the picture.

Charles Meadows, proprietor of the shop, received the poster during the drive for Victory Liberty loans and after the drive was over, left it in the shop. Several years ago, he procured a large frame for the poster and hung it on his wall. It measures 40 by 28 inches. Forsythe is now a prominent artist and painter and is nationally known.

Besides this poster, Meadows has many other pictures and signs which have been in the shop a long time. When he came to Orange 14 years ao, he hung up several pictures which still remain. The head and hat of a girl in the shape of an artist's pallette hangs over his desk while a wind whipped American flag hangs on another wall. This flag was in front of the shop for many years but was taken in some time ago.

INGLEWOOD, Aug. 29.—The officer thought Lady Godiva was doing her stuff again.

Strolling down the avenue here, the guardian of the law saw a pair of women's shoes reposing on a hydrant. He stopped short and started searching for other garments. None was apparent. Neither was the occupant of the shoes.

So the officer sighed regretfully, stuck the shoes under his uniform and turned them in at the station.

NEW FIXTURES INSTALLED ON STREET LIGHTS

ORANGE, Aug. 29.—Residents and business men on West Chapman and Cypress streets were gazing this afternoon on a new set of globes for the street lights following the installation of the new fixtures by the Orange Electric company under the supervision of C. C. Bonebrake, city engineer.

Work on the street standards started yesterday morning and was expected to be completed this afternoon. The new fixtures are rather long and were formerly around the plaza but when the plaza was relighted with new fixtures, the old ones were stored. At the last meeting of the city council, Bonebrake was given permission to exchange the stored lights for the round ones on West Chapman avenue.

When Bonebrake investigated, he found 15 fixtures, so the lights could only be exchanged as far as Cypress avenue. The round globes formerly on the lights will be used for replacement purposes throughout the city, especially in the eastern section, Bonebrake stated. The new globes are very similar to the General Electric fixtures now in use on North Orange street and are said to combine the latest ideas in scientific lighting with beauty.

ORANGE, Aug. 29.—Arthur H. Crites, district governor of the second district of Rotary clubs, was a prominent guest at the weekly meeting of the Orange Rotary club yesterday in accordance with the custom of having the district head visit each club at least once each year.

All the local Rotary committees met with Crites at 11 a. m. in the American Legion hall on South Lemon street to discuss ways and means of bettering the Rotary movement. Crites outlined the duties of the various committees and showed the members how they could efficiently and successfully carry out the program for the year.

KEEP BICYCLES OFF HIGHWAYS, AIM IN STATE

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Bicycles must be barred from California highways.

With this slogan, persons interested in bettering motoring conditions in this state are preparing a bill for submission to the next legislature which will clear state roads of this menace.

In its semi-annual report the division of motor vehicles reported a growing number of accidents caused directly by bicycles on highways.

"Innumerable crashes can be attributed to motorists endeavoring to avoid hitting careless bicycle riders," said one official of the division.

"We would welcome a law removing these menaces from state highways. In these days of fast moving traffic the bicycle is an anachronism. It is a relic of the past century and has no place in modern traffic."

It is understood the law would not include horse-drawn vehicles. Inclusion of this item might render the whole act unconstitutional, it was said. These vehicles are probably as much of a menace to safe driving as bicycles, but they still constitute a legitimate means of transportation, backers of the bill said. Any attempt to legislate them off highways would probably be declared unconstitutional by the courts.

The attorney general's office unofficially declared that bicycles could be forbidden on state highways by law, although impossibility of extension of the act to horse-drawn vehicles was concurred in.

Active support of insurance companies and automobile associations was anticipated by proponents of the act.

The last legislature enacted a law providing that pedestrians on highways must proceed so that they face oncoming traffic, as a means of preventing injury to themselves and possible accidents to motorists. The proposed law, according to state officials, would be acceptable as a further step toward making automobile travel as safe as humanly possible.

LION TAMER AND BRIDE WE DIN ZOO

Eugene Scott, of Dayton, Ohio, noted as a trainer of lions and other wild animals, thought so much of three Bengal tigers that he invited them to serve as witnesses at his wedding. The ceremony was performed in their cage at a park zoo, while many wedding guests looked on—from the other side of the bars. Here you see Mr. and Mrs. Scott with one of the "best men."

Eight Lay Claim To Bandit Reward

LAMAR, Colo., Aug. 29.—The district court here will be called upon to determine which parties shall receive the $12,000 in rewards that were offered for the capture of the "wolf pack" that robbed the First National bank of Lamar, with resultant murder of four persons. ALLSTATE
Time and again the ALLSTATE tire has by test been proved superior to other "first line" tires . . . Early in the season Sears-Roebuck established the ALLSTATE price at an average of one-fourth lower. Today, one out of every ten tires bought for replacement is an ALLSTATE. This success prompts competing producers to advertise tires at the "same low price" you pay for the ALLSTATE. But—they neglect to tell you that those tires are "second-line" brands. Also—they fail to mention that the ALLSTATE . . . a "first line" tire built to specifications which provide unrivalled service and satisfaction . . . still sells one-fourth below comparable brands.

EXPLAIN WATER DISTRICT PLAN FOR SOUTHLAND

ANAHEIM, Aug. 29.—Emphasizing the need of co-operation of communities of Southern California in the problems facing this section in the future, officials concerned with the Metropolitan water district urged cities not now members of the district to become acquainted with the organization and the methods for bringing water to this section in the future, at a meeting of the Orange County Engineers' club and the Orange County League of Municipalities at the Elks club in Anaheim last night.

Legal and engineering phases of the project were brought to the attention of the representatives of the cities by George H. Hutton, one of the directors of the Metropolitan Water district who is one of the legal advisors, and Franklin Thomas of the California Institute of Technology and vice chairman of the board of directors of the district.

Thomas, who told of engineering problems with regard to the district, declared that the question before cities not members of the district is why they should join the district.

The speaker told of the history of the water situation in California, stating that the abundance of underground water in the past had made possible great development here in spite of the scarcity of rainfall. He pointed out that in the past there have been periods of dry weather followed successively by seasons of abundance of rain, and although there has been no major drouth within the past 30 years, a basis for predicting future problems cannot be made on this fact as past history has shown, he said. He compared conditions with those of other districts where although there are no underground channels of water, the abundance of rainfall annually and the great above ground reservoirs makes possible a large supply of water for all city uses.

The rapid development in the past two or three decades has been using up with great rapidity the water supply here with but one result possible, either the water will be used up or the level will become so low that salt water will pollute the present pure water, Thomas declared. He further pointed out that if the salt water does mix with the fresh water, it will take an enormous amount of pure water and many years to again purify the polluted water, with the result that the cities will suffer and the assessed valuation of the cities will be materially decreased. Assuming that the assessed valuation of the combined area in the Metropolitan was seven billion dollars and that through excessive shortage of water the assessed valuation was decreased by five per cent, Thomas declared that this loss would be much more than enough to carry out the Metropolitan water plan as now proposed. He declared that it would be poor business to run the risk of the great loss through a shortage of water when the plan that would meet all future needs could be built at less cost than this loss would be.

The matter of directors representing the various cities was discussed by Hutton, who declared that the city of Los Angeles, which contains approximately 82 per cent of the total assessed valuation of the district, will have 50 per cent of the voting power and never more than this amount. He pointed out that in this way the city of Los Angeles could never control the district, thus assuring the smaller cities a part in the management. He pointed out that the ratio is one vote for every ten million dollars of assessed valuation.

Necessity of eliminating any feeling of distrust between districts in Southern California and substituting a co-operative spirit was emphasized by S. C. Evans, Riverside, of the Boulder Dam association.

ANAHEIM ADOPTS WATER MEASURE

ANAHEIM, Aug. 29.—An important feature of the meeting of the Anaheim city council Wednesday night was the passing of a resolution relative to the requirements of the Metropolitan Water District act, levying a tax upon taxable property within the district including taxable property lying within Anaheim

Of the money to be derived from this district, Anaheim's proportion is estimated at $2502.62.

Ordinance No. 543 was passed amending sub-section 7 of section 10, an ordinance providing for the licensing of business, professions, shows, exhibitions and games conducted or carried on in the city of Anaheim, fixing the rate of license thereof, and fixing penalties for the violation thereof.

The amendment reduces the rate from $200 to $100 per year for selling at auction goods, wares and merchandise from a fixed place of business in the city.

Demands were drawn on the treasury to the amount of $9699.36 of which $9464.76 comes from the general fund, $205.35 from improvement and $29.25 from the redemption fund.

Carl A. Lemeke was appointed by Chief of Police James Boudin as deputy patrolman to serve without pay.

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Aug. 29.—Whether practice works out like theory will be tested in one of the events of the speedboat races scheduled here Sunday and Monday, Labor Day.

Theoretically, all boats in the "bang-and-go-back" race each day ought to finish in a dead heat. Here's how:

The boats will start from the Balboa ocean pier, racing toward the Newport pier. At a certain point, of which none of the racers will be apprised until a signal is given, each boat will start back for the point of beginning.

One of the rules is that the same speed must be kept up after the "go-back" signal as before, and an observer will be in each boat in this race to see that this rule is adhered to.

This means that the slowest boat going out will have the shortest distance to return, and boatmen declare that the winner should be the one that can turn around the fastest. Theoretically, all should get back at the same instant.

There will be three other events each day. At 10 a. m. there will be an event for boats 16 feet and under in length, at 10:30 one for boats between 16 and 33 feet in length, the bang and go back race will start at 11 each day and at 11:30 there will be a free-for-all.

Cups will be awarded for first, second and third in each of the four events, by the Newport Harbor Chamber of Commerce, provided there are five entries or more in each, the winners to be decided on the average showing for the two days.

The races will be plainly visible from the two piers and from all points between them, a distance of nearly two miles. Entry blanks may be obtained at the Chamber of Commerce office.

8 TROUBADOURS GIVE PROGRAM ON THURSDAY

ANAHEIM, Aug. 29.—Closing a series of eight colorful weekly concerts at the amphitheater in the city park through the courtesy of the city of Anaheim, a program of entirely Spanish music was presented last night to the largest crowd of the season. The amphitheater was filled to overflowing and a large crowd stood for the program.

Eight Spanish troubadours, headed by Raymundo Gonzalez, filled the air of the typical summer night with gay melodies of the Spanish countries, while Maria del Castillo, sparkling Argentine soprano, sang Especially brilliant were the dances by De Lara and Lolita, which added a touch of flashing color to the program. One change was made in the program in that instead of Louis Alverez, tenor, was Bernito Salinas, tenor, who won the approval of the large assemblage.

According to Dr. W. L. Bigham, program chairman, the summer series of free concerts is one of the most popular activities of the city and the response is very strong for a continuation next summer. Practically no criticism has been voiced in connection with the program, Dr. Bigham states, and it is likely that another year will bring a series of even better programs than those of the past two summers.

SEPARATE FARM CENTERS PLANNED

PLACENTIA, Aug. 29. — Directors of the Placentia-Fullerton Farm Center voted to dissolve that organization at a meeting held in the chambor of commerce hall, Placentia, last night, in order that the two communities might form separate centers.

The accumulated funds of the hyphenated center amount to nearly $300 and the money is to be turned over to the farm bureau with instructions that it is to be divided equally between the two centers if they are formed. Jack Prizer, chairman of the meeting, stated that Fullerton members felt they had been given a square deal and that the only satisfactory course was to divide the amount equally instead of on a membership basis.

Ralph McFadden introduced a plan to the effect that T. E. Pickerill, secretary of the chamber of commerce, be made secretary of the new farm center, and that a ground floor office be secured, the two organizations dividing the expense of the office between them. It was agreed that in an agricultural community this procedure works out well.

TOKIO, Aug. 29.—(UP)—For the first time since its establishment in Japan, Phi Beta Kappa will hold an initiation ceremony next November. There are 60 holders of the key in Tokyo and other members are scattered throughout Japan.

There are a number who have been elected to this honorary society of American universities but because of residence in Japan never have been initiated by their chapters in the United Stats.

HANSEN

HANSEN, Aug. 29.—Mr. Lathrop, of Pasadena, has purchased three acres of the rabbit farm including the large rabbit barn formerly managed by Mr. Stewert and expects to go into the rabbit business. Mr. Lathrop will occupy the house at the corner of Hansen and Clair roads. The 40-acre ranch was formerly owned by Mrs. Steinbauer, of Pasadena, a sister of Mr. Lathrop. Mr. Stewart managed and subdivided it for a few years.

Mrs. Carl Karstens, living southwest of town near the Hensen road, has purchased a new coupe. She had it insured by Alfred Hansen, who has insured 25 cars in the past two weeks.

RAILWAY CLERK RECALLS RIDING IN FIRST AUTO

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—A 70-year-old man who made a record for the first phonograph, rode in the first automobile, and hired the first vaudeville actor for a traveling circus, now is taking his first long vacation, a permanent retirement from government service.

He is Charles W. Ford, former railway mail clerk, who was placed on the retirement list on his 70th birthday. And now that his working days are over, Ford finds plenty of time in which to reminisce.

He recalls years ago when he was a page in the United States Senate. An obscure inventor had left a strange device in the Senate patent committee rooms pending granting of a patent. Young Charley Ford sneaked in there one day and delivered an old-fashioned "spell-binder" into the mouthpiece.

Ford had made a recording for the first phonograph and years later, Thomas A. Edison—not quite so obscure an inventor—presented him with the cylinder recording of his voice.

When the young page's father—who had been a Kentucky senator—left the political world and moved to Baraboo, Wis., Charley Ford joined the government mail service on the Chicago & Winona Railway postoffice division. It was here that he met the Ringling brothers before the day of mammoth circuses, and he persuaded the brothers to hire their first professional actor for a road show.

Later Ford became a reporter for the old Chicago Times. The fascination of railway mail work struck the young man again, and he re-entered government service. During the World's Fair of 1893 he was detailed to take part in the government exhibition, and to work in the temporary postoffice on the fair grounds.

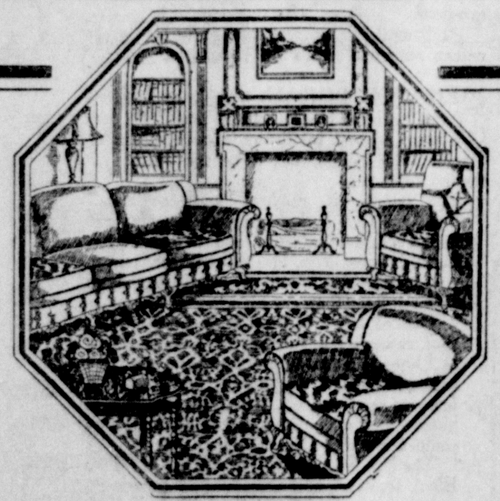

"One day I was working on the special mail car we had at the fair," Ford recalled, "when a gentleman handed me a card and said he had a horseless carriage he wanted me to ride in. Well, I took the ride, but it was not until after I had returned to the mail car that I found out that I had been riding with Elwood Haynes, inventor of the first motor car."

Ford took his first extended vacation, not because he wanted to stop working, but because there are such things as government rules. Ten years ago when he had completed 34 years of government service, he was eligible for a pension, but his interest in mail work caused him to get extensions of time until this year.

Hot and Bothered By the Mike

Sketches By GEORGE CLARK

Amusing stories of very famous men who have quaked with fear when made to stand before a microphone and broadcast to unseen audiences

This minister . . . representative of a nation noted for its stolid calm . . . held an elaborate sheaf of notes . . . but his hand trembled so nervously that he could not read his own words.

Prince Albert de Ligne of Belgium . . . had an enthusiastic listener in the form of a little daughter. . . . She wanted him to speak to her over the radio. . . . He did, told her to go to bed.

Will Rogers, audience-broke, was mediocre on the air . . . until they gave him an audience in the studio. . . . Then he became himself again.

STAGE FRIGHT is an old malady. And everyone has heard of folks who were camera shy. Complexes and phobias have become as common as measles with the popularity of the newer psychology.

But to date no name has been invented for the strange behavior to be observed in the big radio broadcasting rooms. It might be termed "microphone panic," or possibly just "mike madness."

And the bigger they are the harder they have often fallen.

World figures — diplomats, foreign celebrities, national statesmen and even professonal performers of the stage and screen have been known to behave most singularly once they were barricaded in the little broadcasting room with only a microphone and an announcer between them and "that great unseen public" that you hear so much about.

"That great unseen public" has many a laugh coming at the expense of men who are world figures.

For the average man, whatever his station in the world of affairs or of public entertainment, is still quite unused to "doing his stuff" in a theoretical vacuum. The reactions are widely varied. Men who have faced vast audiences and swayed them with a fiery phrase tremble like stage amateurs upon their first appearance. Others, accustomed to facing crowds, forget time and place while prancing about as though on a platform, ignoring the fact that the microphone must receive first consideration.

Thus, anyone who has ever watched Rudy Vallee perform, for instance, will have noticed that he seems to be caressing the little instrument of sound conveyance, with his head nestled against it as though relaxing on a comfortable pillow.

ON the other hand, I have it from the "inside history" of the Columbia station that one of the ranking foreign ambassadors, whose name is deleted because of the confidential nature of the occurrence, was called upon to speak at a Sunday afternoon "Conclave of Nations" program broadcast from Washington.

A number of other features preceded his appearance before the "mike" and, having been advised to arrive early, he had been sitting around for some 10 or 15 minutes waiting his turn. As the minutes went by he appeared to grow more and more restless, perching on the edge of his chair and glimpsing frequently at his notes.

A few moments before he was to begin, a studio assistant came to him and whispered that he would go on at a given signal. Suddenly the mike was shoved before his very nose and the first words the "unseen audience" heard from this world famous figure were "Well, is it my turn to talk now?"

So embarrassed was he at discovering that this had gone out to the listeners that he stuttered and stammered for several moments before swinging into his talk.

Will Rogers, with years and years behind him as a public performer and national clown, presents an interesting case of "audience psychology." When Rogers was first being broadcast, a station arrangement was hooked up in his western home because business affairs kept him there. And the story goes that the two maiden efforts, while fair enough, were not in the true Rogers style. They were so-so, and that was about all.

Not so many weeks ago he was brought on to New York. Some smart studio psychologist figured out that Rogers was accustomed to having an audience laughing with and at him while performing and that this greatly added to his inventive ability as well as to his method of delivery.

An invited audience of some 600 persons packed the broadcasting room to the doors. Many of his old cronies from the days when he appeared in Ziegfeld shows were brought around for a reunion.

Rogers went on in high good humor. When he spun his funny lines, the 600 laughed and frequently applauded. Within a couple of seconds the "trouper" that is in all good theatrical folk had made its appearance. It was one of Rogers' most successful broadcasting performances, and he has been at ease ever since.

Prince Alfonso of Spain . . . wanted to shout over the "mike" . . . when told that the hook-up was nation-wide.

President Hoover . . . had to be broken of finger-tapping . . . which sounded like hoof-beats over the "mike."

CHARMINGLY human little moments often creep into broadcasts of famous people and the novelty of the "voice on the air" has its home as well as its public connotations. A wife or father or sister may be so accustomed to having a husband, son or brother appear in the public eye that it gets to be a monotonous commonplace. Having heard speeches time and again, they might not turn out to listen were a talk given in a public hall or theater. But they all tune in to hear "how he sounds on the air."

And this is the story of something that happened the first time that Prince Albert de Ligne, ambassador of Belgium, talked to that "great unseen public."

"Daddy, say something to me," she pleaded.

And so he promised that somewhere in his speech she would get a message.

Half an hour later a celebrated foreigner was making a typically dignified address. Suddenly just before he closed he made a brief apology to the public.

"Now," said he, "I hope you will all pardon a personal word. I made a promise to my little daughter who is listening in on her daddy over at the embassy. I said I would have a message for her and here it is, 'It's time for you to go to bed now.'"

Admiral Byrd, who faced the terrors of the Polar region with a smile and a slap on the back to his fellows, grows most serious-visaged and self-conscious in the face of so harmless an instrument as the "mike."

Anyone who observed him speaking into it in the introductory scenes of the remarkable film record of his exploits must have noticed how he dodged from looking into the camera lens and how uncomfortable he frequently appeared, often rocking up and down on the balls of his feet, though presumably at the wheel of a ship. News reels also caught something of this in scenes from his public broadcasting on the occasion of his welcome.

The young men who have control of the National Radio Forum at Washington will tell you, on the side, that Senator Hiram Johnson of California puts on a most amusing show when faced with a "mike."

Senator Johnson, as most of the nation knows, has more than a passing reputation for table thumping and fist slapping. In the heat of a controversial argument he will swing wildly in the air and shake a menacing finger by way of emphasis.

GETTING warmed up to his subject, the gesturings began to appear. Quite oblivious of the fact that a very senstive instrument was in front of him, he began to shake his finger at the "mike." Once or twice he tapped it—a slight matter which might possibly sound like an approaching hurricane.

But when he doubled up his fist and began to swing wildly, there was more than slight anxiety about the place. Suppose he should, by accident, hit it and knock it over! But fortunately all the swings were misses, and a sigh of relief passed across the room. The senator mopped his perspiring brow and left the room, quite unaware of what had almost happened.

Alister MacDonald . . . had to walk up 12 flights before broadcasting. . . . He deprecated skyscrapers in his talk.

A favorite story of "amateur broadcasting":

THE Prince Alfonso of Spain, the first cousin of the king, it will be recalled, was a passenger on the recent Graf Zeppelin flight. Arrangement had been made for a broadcast from the Spanish embassy.

Just before he went before the "mike," Harry Butcher of the Columbia forces took him aside.

"You realize, of course," explained Butcher to the royal novice, "that we have the entire country linked. When you make your address it will carry over the entire nation. It will be carried 3000 miles out to the Pacific Coast."

The prince tried for a moment to grasp the extraordinary distance covered.

"In that case," remarked the prince, "I presume I shall have to shout, shall I not?"

During the winter, a minister from one of the more stolid countries whose reputation for calm unexcitability is considerable was called in on the Conclave of Nations series. He arrived with an elaborate sheaf of notes in his hand. But when he stood up to read them, his hand was trembling so nervously that he could not read his own words. He filled in time for a moment with trivialities and sat down on the trembling hand, transferring his speech to the other. Soon this hand was shaking as badly as the first.

In his perplexity the speaker looked wildly about for a second. Then he laid the papers flat upon a desk before him and sat on both his hands.

Naturally, the office staff had to keep a straight face while he presented this ludicrous picture of sitting there before the "mike," both of his hands tucked solidly under his legs so that they could no longer shake. He finished, almost prostrate from nervousness and embarrassment.

And, until this moment, no one in his "great unseen audience" knew the difference.

SENATOR BORAH, though he initiated the National Radio Forums and has a profound respect for the radio as a means of reaching the public, has a hearty dislike for the microphone.

The senator is another "audience man." The "mike" provides him with little inspiration. While admittedly one of the better radio speechmakers, his dislike in speaking to a funny-looking piece of metal has been shown in more than one speech.

One of the broadcasting surprises of the year came when James J. Davis, secretary of Labor, suddenly burst into song during a talk and showed the country that he had a first-rate tenor voice. It was the first time in history that a cabinet officer had gone into competition with the songsters of the air.

The late team of Moran and Mack, "Two Black Crows," had a method of broadcasting that always attracted studio attention. Having a "team act," with their lines typewritten before them, they kept thinking up devices for being comfortable and at the same time close together.

Finally they perfected a plush-covered stand with two large grooves. Each stood in a groove, with the typewritten lines in front of them. And most comical they appeared.

Alister MacDonald, son of the British premier, caused more than a little comment when he made his initial broadcast. Those who tuned in on the visiting celebrity may have wondered at his antagonistic commentaries on skyscrapers and metropolitan life.

But just behind the scenes one could find an explanation. It so happened that young MacDonald was scheduled to talk on a Sunday. The elevators, for one reason or another, happened not to be running. So he had to climb some 12 stories to get to the broadcasting room. He arrived out of breath and in ill humor. All of which he reflected in his speech.

President Herbert Hoover had to be cured of a habit of tapping his fingers on a desk while he made his speeches. Reading from a script in front of him, the president did not realize that the sensitive "mike" magnified this tapping to the sound of hoof beats on a race track.

The Other Bullet

"I don't know much, really," Aline said slowly. "That seems queer, doesn't it? It sounds silly to talk about a man's charm, but I don't know how else to express it. It made you forget all about commonplace tangible facts. He lived so avidly in the present, as if he were snatching at it. And then some shadow would seem to come over him and he'd rush off, as if he were running away from something he was trying to forget, and had been forced to remember."

"This is bound to be pretty painful for you—like a dentist's drill," Peter said whimsically, to cover his genuine pity. "But you'll have to recall everything you can. I don't suppose he sat down and told you the history of his life, but there must have been plenty of little things to indicate who he was and where he came from. By the way, it's funny that with all this publicity, none of his relatives turned up."

"He never spoke of having any. And no, it isn't painful to look back. It's something that happened a long time ago. When—when Marjorie told me what she did, it was like being caught in an explosion. There are things you just can't endure—the humiliation and the shock of it. But I don't feel that way any more. I don't even hate him.

"As for what went before, it's simply—vanished, like a light that's gone out. I've found out that you can do terrible things because you can't help it. If all that Marjorie said was true, then I suppose he couldn't help it, any more than I could when I ran down the path with Max's pistol. And being humiliated just doesn't seem frightfully important any more. Perhaps it's lucky that I haven't any feeling left. It ought to help me to think clearly—to see him as he was. Only there's so little that seems to explain anything."

"You never can tell," Peter said encouragingly. "To begin with, he was an unusual type to be a ranch manager. Where did he come from?"

"He showed Max references from Australia, where he'd spent some years on a sheep station. He really knew a great deal about sheep—he had plans for weeding out the culls and breeding the sheep here for quality, the way they've done there. And yet this really expert knowledge of sheep seemed just one of the things he'd picked up along the way. He didn't care about it, the way Max cares about engineering, for example."

"And he never mentioned his people—his home?"

"He mentioned lots of places, casually; but I don't think there was a place in all the world that he recognized as home. He used all sorts of odd slang—Cockney, and pigeon English, and South African Dutch, and Malay. But it always gave the impression of being in quotation marks, as if he'd picked it up for fun. He'd read everything under the sun. But—why, I never thought of that before!"

"Of what?" Peter prodded as she lapsed into thoughtful silence.

"I was about to say that he was highly educated. But it suddenly occurred to me that he must have educated himself through his own reading, rather than by going to college or having much ordinary formal instruction. There were the queerest gaps in his knowledge—things that any high school graduate would know. For instance I said once that something was 'an unknown quantity—like X,' and he said, 'What do you mean by that?'

"'Why, in algebra, you know,' I said, surprised that he needed to have it explained.

"'I never studied algebra,' he said in the queerest voice. And that was one of the things that set him off."

"Set him off?" Peter reiterated the words with a sudden accession of interest.

"Yes, with all that sense he gave of hurling himself into the present moment, he would have fits of melancholy, when he went off by himself and sometimes walked about all night long."

"'Hexing' Schnitzler's fields," Peter suggested.

"What?" Aline turned sharply in her seat, as if she feared that he had suddenly taken leave of his senses.

"Oh, there's an old man that thinks Mortison dealt in witchcraft," Peter explained absently. "But go on. What else would 'set him off?'"

"I don't remember—they were such queer, inconsequential things. Once it was about hit-and-run drivers. There'd been a case like that on the highway—just a tramp. The man who did it was never found—I don't suppose they looked for him very hard. But I couldn't help wondering what it would be like to know that you had struck a man, and then had gone on and left him. Don didn't seem specially interested—but he went up into the hill pastures and didn't come back for three days. I don't know why that came into my head just now—it's such a silly thing to remember. He'd have those periods of melancholy, and then he'd throw them off as if by main force of will, and plunge into the maddest sort of high spirits. I think that was part of his compelling charm—his shift of mood, always one extreme or the other. And the touch of mystery added to it."

"Well, it may have added to his charm, but it certainly adds to our difficulties," Peter said cynically. "It's all very well for a man to be bumped off when you know all about him and the only unknown factor is the murderer. But when anybody takes pains to conceal his past while he's alive, it certainly adds to the problem of discovering who killed him. He's helped to cover the murderer's tracks in advance. The mystery of his life complicates the mystery of his death. It adds infinitely to the possibilities of injecting a lot of perfectly unknown quantities. We may not have to look back of Mortison's arrival in Hangtown to explain his murder. And then again we may—that's the devil of it!"

Peter whirled around the steep edge of an overhanging cliff in silence. Then he added with a sigh: "All we can do is to begin with what we've got. Who do you suppose would want to take those letters? And why by all that's holy did you write them in the first place, and not see that they were destroyed in the second?"

"I don't know who took them—that's the worst of it! And you don't need to tell me that I was a fool to write them, only of course you never think of those things beforehand. I wasn't being sensible. I was completely swept off my feet. They were really just notes that I tucked under the door for him to find when he came back from the farther pastures. He used to go up to see for himself the effect of different sorts of feed, and examine the sheep with the idea of scientific grading. Somehow one never thinks of one's letters causing trouble. That seems to belong to other people, whom one never knows but just reads about in the newspapers."

"Those other people probably felt the same way about it—till it happened," Peter grunted. "And you didn't even have the sense to warn him to destroy them?" His tone was one of indignant disgust.

"I tell you, I didn't think! I was in love with him! I knew, somewhere outside myself, that it wouldn't last, but while it lasted I couldn't look beyond it. In fact, he told me once that he was saving them—to recall these days to him, he said, sometime long afterwards when he would be far away. All the time I seemed to know that he would go away. Perhaps that was why I let myself go—until there was no stopping."

"Yes," Peter mused, "he did have a way of keeping things—an odd habit, for a man who moved about so much. It's lucky for us he did; that is, it may be lucky, if we can find out what his collection of symbols meant. I can't for the life of me figure out what became of your letters, though. I guess we'll just have to drop that for the time being, and turn to something else. We may get a line on the letters later. By the way, did you ever see this?"

Peter maneuvered Bossy to the edge of the road, and stopped. He drew the Florentine picture frame from his pocket and passed it to Aline. She took it wonderingly, bending low to examine it by the tiny bulb on the dash-board light.

"No," she said slowly, "I've never seen it before."

"Then that's a washout and I was counting on it quite a lot." Peter's voice revealed the depth of his discouragement. "Every time we start, we run up against a blank wall," he said gloomily.

But Aline was still gazing intently at the dim and faded face of the photograph.

"There's something very like Don in this," she said. "The shape of the mouth—and across the eyes—From the dress, it must have been taken about thirty years ago." Her fingers trembled with eagerness as she closed the case and held the cover close to her eyes, straining to distinguish the intricate lines of the half obliterated design in its center.

"I think," she said solemnly as she returned the case to Peter, "that the woman in that photograph is Don's mother."

"But why are the other faces cut out?"

"I haven't the ghost of an idea. But at the time that picture was taken, Don would have been just about the age of one of those little boys."

"Are you sure? We can't afford to get side tracked on a wild goose chase. The picture's so dim—mightn't it be just a chance resemblance, strengthened in your mind because you're looking for it? Things like that do happen, you know."

Aline shook her head.

"It isn't reasonable that a man would carry a picture about with him for thirty years unless it meant something," she said. "Don had deliberately cut himself off from his past—that's clear. But he couldn't quite let it go completely, for all that. I suppose nobody can, unless they're too stupid to care. It would be like destroying one's own identity; and somehow we do cling to ourselves, even when we don't want any one else to know. There's an 'I' that we can't quite will to lose altogether."

"I suppose you're right—but it doesn't help much. Suppose the woman in the picture is Don's mother. We still don't know who she is, nor who he is, either." Like all mercurial temperaments, Peter sank to depths of discouragement commensurate with his heights of enthusiasm.

Aline turned on him furiously. He caught her outstretched arm just in time, as she lifted it to fling the photograph over the edge of the car into the canyon below.

"Oh!" she exclaimed tempestuously. "If you're going to act that way about it, I won't tell you any more. Of course it's only a little thing, but it's something. If you treat your first bit of luck like that, you don't deserve to have any more."

In the darkness, Peter's face was slit by its widest grin.

"I won't act that way again," he said with exaggerated meekness. "It isn't much of a clue, but it's the only one we've got, so we'll treat it with respect. Of course, we may not be any forwarder, even if we can trace the picture, and God only knows how that can be done."

"I'm sure I don't know how to go about it, but you've got to find out. That's what you're here for." There was invincible determination in Aline's voice. She was no longer the broken woman of the courtroom, clinging for self-protection to the shreds of her defiance.

Peter chortled aloud at this version of his reason for existence. But Aline disregarded his levity.

"Of course the picture may not lead us to Don's murderer," she admitted. "But the first step is to find out who he really was, even if it leads us back where we were at the beginning. It's the only way we can sort out the possibilities, although we may have to eliminate them afterwards."

There was a puzzled look in Peter's eyes, but he thrust aside the question that obtruded on his rising spirits. He had tested the calibre of his ally, and was ready to trust his luck. He had guessed that Aline had intelligence and now he found that she had persistence as well. With that combination on his side, he might get somewhere!

"That 'first step' is a pretty long one—but we'll see how far we can go," he said cautiously. "You threatened not to tell me anything more. There is a 'more,' then?"

"There's this." Aline closed the leather cover of the photograph case and held it towards him. "Did you look closely at the design on the back?"

"Yes," Peter said, "but I couldn't make it out. It's too full of curlicues, and it is almost rubbed out anyway."

"I know," Aline admitted. "But I know what it is. I've seen it before, or at least the same design. I saw it on the day I saw the Chinese box!"

HERE'S THE DOPE

Gallant Fox lost a race the other day to a 100 to 1 shot. It was the first time the Fox tasted defeat as a 3-year-old. After the battle of the mud, the experts dragged out the mud-pot and started flinging a bit themselves. It seems Gallant Fox had been slipped some knockout drops with his mash.

Mr. Woodward, owner of the champion and Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, trainer, laughed at the rumors that the Fox's feed had been tampered with. To begin with, there was not a chance to dope the Fox. Six men watch the horse constantly, and they are men Fitz can depend upon. Not only these men, but a half-savage dog keeps strangers away from the Fox's boudoir. You couldn't get in there with a search warrant.

Where these "dope" stories originate it is sometimes hard to determine. Unless the creators of the fiction are experts, taking an easy way to keep their forecasts unsullied, the people who start such tales are anonymous.

This isn't the first story of that nature. We can remember as far back as 20 years, reading a tale of the same sort after Jim Jeffries was beaten at Reno by Jack Johnson. It was whispered that Jeff had been given something with his oats, too. The truth was that age and nerves beat Jeff. All night before that July Fourth debacle, Jeff had been sleepless.

The advance stories from Jeff's training camp had painted him as in perfect physical condition. There were glowing reports about his stamina and power. It was discovered when he fought Johnson that he was merely a "shell" of his former self. The experts had been fooled, and the drug story was broadcast and given credence in a number of places. You still hear it occasionally.

Dempsey was given something in Philadelphia. Some churl had slipped something into his cheesecakes. He didn't seem to be the man that damp night there under the lights that he had been expected to be. It was hard to realize that the Dempsey of Toledo had become the Dempsey of Philadelphia. But it was true. Tunney's punches were the only dope handed the Mauler.

It was heard recently again, a new version of the same old tale, when Sammy Mandell lost to Al Singer. Some Borgia had put snuff in Sammy's soup. We hate to suspect the "experts" of petty chicanery such as this. But if not the scribes, then who?

CANNY CONNIE

The boys are saying the Athletics are "in." But that isn't what's worrying Connie Mack, the man who is generally known as "the lean, kindly leader of the A's." The 1930 American league pennant seems to be cinched for the team, but Connie Mack isn't holding any celebration over that just yet.

"We may have a great club," said Mr. Mack the other day, "I don't know. We can't be rated as a great club on what we did last year. No

EIGHT CLUBS TO PARTICIPATE IN PENNANT CHASE

Sunday baseball, once the district's most popular sport, is due for an immediate rejuvenation with all athletic centers in Orange county co-operating.

Plans were well under way today toward the organization of an Orange County league, operating along much the same lines as the old Harbor league that developed a number of fine players.

Representatives of seven teams started the ball rolling at a meeting here last night at the Victor Walker sporting goods store, 219 West Fourth street.

They were Santa Ana, Huntington Beach, Laguna Beach, Seal Beach, Cypress, Anaheim and Brea-Olinda. The other franchiseholder probably will be Anapauma Rancho. D. Eyman Huff, sponsor of the Anapauma club, was in Sacramento and unable to attend the session.

Final plans and preparations will be taken next Thursday night when team managers gather again to adopt a schedule, set a date for the opening of the race and arrange other business details.

Sponsors present were Ben Smith of Santa Ana, Jim W. Culver of Huntington Beach, E. W. Elliott of Laguna Beach, Clark Williams of Seal Beach, Steve Luther of Cypress, George ("Rube") Hall of Anaheim and Walt Cullen of Brea-Olinda. All these cities have parks except Santa Ana and Seal Beach which plan to play as traveling teams.

Manager Smith expects to recruit a well balanced aggregation of Santa Ana players by signing a number of the members of the Santa Ana Stars, crack night baseball team.

Each team will pay an entry of $25 of which $10 will be returned if its schedule is completed. The other $15 will go into a fund which will be divided by the one-two-three teams at the finish of the race.

The season will be a split one and the clubs will play three or four times around, depending on the size of the membership.

EXPULSIONS FOLLOW CAMPBELL TRAGEDY

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—(INS)—As the aftermath of the death of Frankie Campbell, San Francisco heavyweight, the state athletic commission today had dealt out wholesale suspensions.

The licenses of the following were ordered suspended:

Max Baer, Campbell's opponent; Toby Irwin, referee of the bout; J. Hamilton Lorimer, Baer's manager; C. E. Working, Campbell's manager; and the seconds of both Baer and Campbell.

Meanwhile, Baer, who was arrested on a manslaughter charge, is at liberty under $10,000 bond.

Campbell was buried yesterday.

by DENNY SHUTE

Golf teachers and critics are almost unanimous in declaring that the pivot is the whole secret in golf.

It is not a swinging around of the shoulders by a twisting movement at the waist, nor getting up on the big toe of the left foot in the backswing and upon the big toe of the right foot in the downswing, nor dipping low with first one shoulder and then the other. You can't say that one certain part of the body is responsible for the pivot.

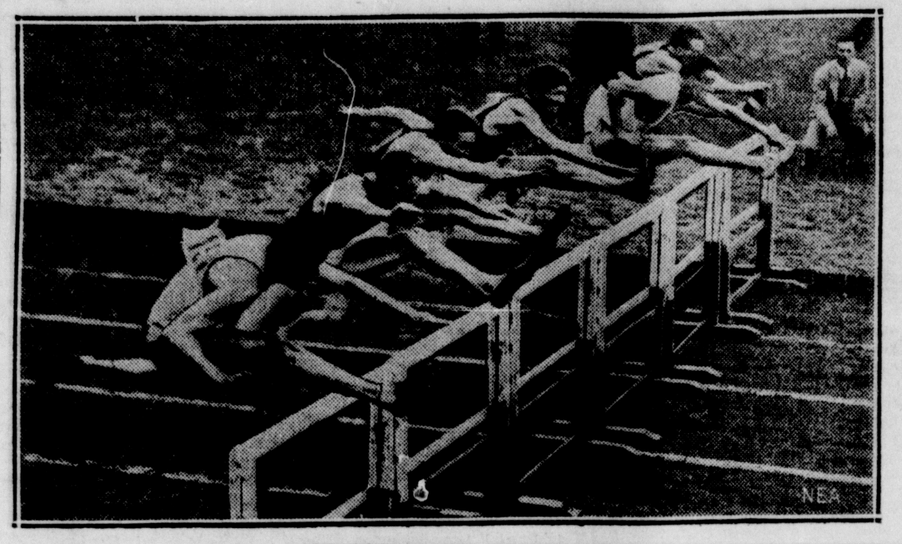

In a full swing, pivoting is a co-ordinated twisting of the body in which the ankles, knees, hips and shoulders respond to the swing of the arms. For short shots where little effort is required (chip shots and putts), the swing of the arms may not be sufficient to cause the body to twist.

There is but one way to obtain the smooth functioning of all these parts in a pivot. It cannot be accomplished by giving thought to the ankles, knees, hips and shoulders. Concentrate on your swing; permit the body to respond freely to the swing of your arms. And the result is the correct pivot.

EVEN STEPHEN—BUT STEPHEN WAS FIRST

HEAVYWEIGHTS BORE FANS AT RING PROGRAM

There must be something to this mind-over-matter stuff.

The "beeg, strong fellers" of boxing have been reading up on what happened to poor Frankie Campbell, and you realized it today if you chanced to be one of the unfortunate few out at the Orange County Athletic club here last night.

Promoter Henry T. Foust tried his best to bolster a feeble lineup of heavyweights by an extra length card, one totaling 34 rounds, but quantity was a poor substitute for quality and increased bulk only accentuated the weakness, of the program.

The card was full of heavies and near-heavies, and there is nothing quite as awful as big men who won't—or can't—fight. Numerous substitutions also detracted from the appeal. All in all it was the poorest show the fans have seen at Delhi since the good "Doctor" Foust took charge of fistic operations on the southside.

Haywood Beats Rudzinski

Jack Haywood, colored, and Frank Rudzinski, the latter shoved up from the scheduled semi-wind-up, met in the main event, Haywood winning as he pleased. The bout went the six-round limit but Haywood could have stopped the big Russian on a moment's notice.

Referee Bob White kept urging Haywood to bring up his heavy artillery, but the big black boy was thinking about Campbell and Baer and was content to earn a decision. He won every round. Rudzinski came in with a pan that looked like he had just had a quarrel with an electric fan.

The main spot was positively terrible, and most of the fans were on their way home before it came to a close.

Leroy Haynes, another black giant, was not quite as timid as Haywood. He knocked out Glen Thompson in five rounds. Haynes weighed 190, but Thompson didn't look to scale more than 165. Thompson was plenty game and fought back the best he could. Promoter Foust is seldom guilty of mismatching but the jovial promoter slipped up when he yoked these two.

Smith Easy For Cadena

The special event between "Red Feather" Cadena and Bert Smith was an easy mark for the Indian who won every frame. It was too one sided to be interesting.

"Wild Man" O'Hannigan, clown fighter of the "Society Red" Millet type, beat Benny Stinson, La Habra youngster, three of four rounds but White gave him a draw. O'Hannigan throws gloves from all angles, laughs, makes faces, jumps on the ropes and all that sort of thing. He is a pretty fair boxer, too.

The only real fight of the whole show was between Jack Dunseith and "Bud" Coogan, another sub. White called it a draw and everyone was satisfied. Coogan swings wildly and takes 'em on the chin to land 'em in the pantry, but he is a willing mixer.

Vic McNeal, colored, kayoed Max Hernandez in the third round. McNeal had his own way in this spot.

Eddie Reinhart, formerly known as O'Day, won all the way from Getsell Hood in the opener.

Urban Hernandez and Jimmy Fox head next Thursday's card.

DOEG, LOTT OPPOSE ALLISON, VAN RYN FOR DOUBLES CROWN

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 29.—(INS)—It will be Johnny Doeg and George Lott, the defending champions, against Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, the Wimbledon title-holders, in the final round of the national men's doubles tennis champions, tomorrow at the Longwood Cricket club.

Doeg and Lott came through after a blistering five-set match with "Big Bill" Tilden and Frank Hunter in the semi-final round winning 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 9-11, 6-2.

Allison and Van Ryn defeated Berkeley Bell and George Mangin, 6-8, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

Joe Ochoa, Anaheim's "big shot" hurler, had a tough time winning his first game in the Santa Ana City league last night, but finally slipped through to a 5-4 victory over the slipping Pacific Telephone company, and succeeded in pitching the Eastern Oil company into first place.

"Bomo" Koral used to be the team's ace flinger but when he was declared ineligible last week the Oilers obtained the services of Ochoa.

The fast-ball moundsman was touched up rather freely in the early innings but was blazing them past the Pole-Climbers toward the end. Jerry Heard, Garden Grove first sacker for the season just closed, was on the initial hassock for the 'Phonemen so they will have a tough time protesting the presence of Ochoa in the Oilers' lineup.

Max Castro gave the league-leaders all the trouble they wanted, allowing only seven hits himself. Successive bingles by Miller and Wooster broke up the game for him in the last of the seventh. The score:

CARNERA READY FOR HIS FINAL 'SOFT TOUCH'

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Down in Atlantic City tomorrow night, they again are going to slip the log chains off Primo Carnera, the beeg caribou, and let him ramp and stamp and champ in the good, old medicine show routine — perhaps for the last time before he breaks in with the championship flight, perhaps for the last time anywhere.

He will dally with an experimental guinea pig called Riccardo Bertazolla, who is doubtless no better than his name implies, and what Carnera may do and how he does it will be of considerable import. The man either is very good or very bad; therefore, his next time out may always be his last or the beginning of a very useful life.

Some Compromise

The department of immigration itself was a bit nonplussed by this matter not more than a few weeks ago. It even went so far as to order the fellow to leave the country but a compromise was effected whereby he promised to stay almost indefinitely. It was all very simple. The department told Primo to go but he said he would be glad to stay, so everything was fixed up nicely.

However, even though he finds it inconvenient to leave the country just now, he wants to do the right thing by the government and will begin tomorrow night by leaving Atlantic City. It is only a coincidence that about $100,000 is liable to leave with him. They tell me this fight can't miss.

Soft For Primo

The arena, according to estimates, will seat 40,000 and, with a million people at the resort over the holidays, it ought to be like selling tickets at a subway station.

This Bertazolla has nothing but size and a resolute chin. He has never been knocked out, they say, but neither have I, so that's all even. The answer means about the same in both cases, namely, it isn't always the chin that counts but the fist that hits it.

Considering that Bertazolla himself can't hit hard enough to knock your hat well back on your ears, the foregoing would seem to place all of the proof on Primo's hitting. Assuming that the other chump will be in there trying, then it ought to narrow down to a question of which will succumb first, Primo's hands or the chump's face.

WESTMINSTER AND ONTARIO IN GAME

Westminster, champion of the Orange County "B" league, and Ontario, winner of the American "B" league, tonight begin their two-out-of three game series for the Southern California minor league title.

Tonight's game will be played at Ontario.

Daley Leads Stars; Reds Raise Tariff

Leavitt Daley and "Rosy" Merrill are still battling for the honor of leading the Santa Ana Stars with the willow for the entire season. Daley topped the roster for league games, but dropped a few points to the Rose in the recent series with Whittier.

Bill Cole is second, Randolph Bell third and Wayne Nelson fourth. They are all over .300.

The averages follow:

Merrill	142	35	58	8	3	2	.408

Games in Santa Ana will cost 35 and 25 cents, but Colton will collect a tariff of 50 cents.. Officials here are trying to keep night ball out of the "big money" racket.

Here's a red hot tip. If you are planning to see the second game of the series at Colton Tuesday get your reserved seat tickets tomorrow. Remember that Monday, Labor day, is a holiday. The ducats may be purchased at Baker's bakery or the El Corral service station. Santa Ana's allotment is about 600.

Cornelius tonight goes after his twenty-fourth victory since joining the Stars. He has won nine straight games.

Win, lose or draw, the Stars will turn in their monkey-suits at the termination of the Colton series. They have played 41 games since the season opened April 1, winning 32 and losing 9. They have scored 272 runs as against 121 by their opponents.

Santa Ana is no newcomer to the Southern California championship series. The Stars got their first taste of it in 1927 in a three-cornered playoff with Arlington and Long Beach. The Acorns won. Santa Ana beat Riverside and Long Beach for the flag in another three-way playoff in 1928.

The umpires will be "Shorty" Smith of Fullerton, W. B. Wents of Garden Grove, Fred Smith of Riverside and "Biff" Wilson of Redlands. "Smorty" Smith and Wentz are from the National league, Fred Smith and Wilson from the American.

While Santa Ana was playing Whittier for the National league bunting, Colton kept in trim for the Southern California series by engaging in several exhibition games. The Reds suffered defeat at Riverside, Wednesday, 4-3. Botts was knocked out of the box in three innings.

When Santa Ana won the Whittier series in three successive games it proved the honesty of night baseball. The Stars would like to take Colton four straight but this is hardly probable. A long, hard series is in prospect.

To show the home crew their heart is in the right place, Vieira and Wilson, barbers at 108 East Fourth street, have hung up a number of prizes for the Stars to shoot at during the series. The first Santa Anan to score a run will get a haircut and a shave. Every Star who hits a home run receives a haircut, shave and shampoo. The "capital prize" will be $5 worth of barber work for the player voted as the most valuable to his team during the series. The players themselves will vote to decide this.

Approximately 250 or the 660 tickets sent to Colton and Riverside were returned here today. These will be put on sale early this evening at the main gate at the Bowl.

HUNTERS WARNED TO KEEP OFF BIG RANCH

With the opening of dove season scheduled Monday, and the opening of deer season due September 16, Bob Reed, deputy sheriff in charge of patroling the vast Irvine ranch, today again called the attention of hunters that the Irvine acreage is positively closed to all because of the fire hazard and that all trespassers would be prosecuted vigorously.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS BEGIN TITLE SERIES; ADD SEATS TO HANDLE RECORD CROWD

Saving the best for the last and the last for the best, Santa Ana's Stars and Colton's Reds meet here tonight in the first game of night baseball's "little world series," crowning event of Southern California's summer sports phenomena.

With every reserved seat sold two days in advance and hundreds of fans still clamoring for seating space in the unreserved areas, the greatest crowd in the history of short diamond baseball is more than possible. It is certain.

To accommodate the throng that will push its way into the Bowl, 500 additional "circus seats" were ordered into the Sixth and Olive streets park today.

This will give the Bowl accommodations for approximately 3500 persons, and every vantage point will be taken. In addition it would not be surprising to find the enclosure overrun with folk satisfied with mere standing room. Fandom is all "hot and bothered" about this series.

As for the teams themselves, they were proclaimed in tip top shape today by Manager Herb Salveson of Santa Ana and Hubert Finlay of Colton.

Cripples Return To Lineup

Each side has a cripple, but cripples have a habit of getting well miraculously just before game-time. It is safe to say that both Wayne Nelson, the Santa Ana hospital representative, and Hank Hanegan, Colton's injured ace, will be in the starting lineup.

Nelson, center fielder, has been on the "fritz" since Sunday when he threw out his trick shoulder. Hanegan, a shortstop, suffered a severely sprained thumb in a practice scrimmage with Riverside Wednesday night, a game incidentally that Colton lost, 4-3.

The starting pitchers will be Joe Cornelius for Santa Ana and Venn Botts for Colton. The catchers will be "Eeny" Wilcox for the Stars and Bob Stone for the Reds.

Manager Finlay may pull a Connie Mack on the boys and come on with Rudy Montgomery, a tempermental right hander who has pitched almost as well as Botts in certain spots this semester. This strategy is not probable, however. This is an important series, and the managers are more likely to do their experimenting later in the four-out-of-seven series. There is a lot of satisfaction in drawing first blood. Then a manager can AFFORD to gamble.

Although some pretty wise baseball men think Colton has a superior pitching staff, and therefore an edge in the series, the consensus is that Santa Ana has a bit the better of the dope.

The Stars are more experienced. This "little world series" stuff is nothing new to Wilcox, Bill Cole, "Memphy" Hill, Bill Hunter, Nelson, Randolph Bell and Darwin Scott—all of whom were on the Santa Ana squad that won the Southern California streamer in 1928. They are not likely to lose their equilibrium in a money series.

The Stars have been "through the mill" this year, too. They have not played for nothing 36 games against such competition as the National Night league offered this

Why Pure Athletes Turn Pro

Martha Norelius, airing the grievances of the amateurs against the A. A. U., gives you this inside view of some petty squabbling that keeps unpaid sports stars in constant trouble

By MARTHA NORELIUS

AMATEUR athletics today are not as lily-white as some of its officials would have you believe, nor as slushy or slimy as some of its barred contestants paint it.

What corruption exists is natural and will always remain because of the unbalanced rules and regulations prevailing. Until the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States revises some of its present laws and, likewise, changes some of its decisions of the past, professionalism, to some extent, will prevail.

I'll grant you, that, while an amateur, I saw many of my competitors accept pecuniary rewards in one way or another. Such a thing is being done every day in the year, but I don't blame the athletes for it one bit.

Under present conditions an athlete can spend three or four years of his life competing, without receiving a dime in remuneration, at the same time filling the pockets of promoters, only to be barred from further competition by these same high officials when a technicality arises. Men and women vie for medals because they enjoy the competition of their own particular sport, but it annoys them to see a member of their clan thrown out on one of the many foolish rulings, with the majority feeling that they, too, may meet with the same fate some day. And for this reason more and more amateur athletes are beginning to realize that it pays to take what you can, when you can, instead of waiting, lest the fame fade.

PLENTY of clubs and individuals are only too glad to pay well-known amateurs to enter their athletic meets. The value of a "big name" as a box-office drawing power or as a means of giving an organization a social standing is universally recognized. Therefore, it can be readily seen that quite a bit of money can be made, if one wants to take the chance.

How payments are made to so-called simon-pures for their services is interesting. Of course, a committeeman on a meet never makes an announcement that after the race he is going to give the star performer a $50 bill, or whatever the sum might be. It usually is given to him privately in the guise of "expense money," although sometimes promoters, ironically enough, fold the bill neatly under the cardboard in the box containing the medal. Too, athletes oftentimes receive money in the form of sweaters or other wearing apparel, supposedly presented to them as a gift, but which is soon converted into money at the nearest sporting goods store. The same thing is done with tickets for the event, which the athlete is given to sell at a certain commission. Friends of the promoter graciously buy enough from the athlete to pay him for competing.

After the 1928 Olympics, the swimming team representing this country, of which I was a member, made a tour of the continent. As is customary, the men traveled alone, while the women were required to have chaperons. Consequently, I can swear that none of the ladies accepted any money throughout the entire trip, but I am just as emphatic in claiming that some of the others did receive monetary considerations.

In fact, I overheard a very well-known swimmer, among the men, talk by long distance phone to the chairman of a meet we were going to enter the following week. Though the expenses to the races amounted only to $50, this athlete demanded that $200 "expense money" be sent him before he would leave for the competition. His name was such that the money was promptly forwarded.

While you can easily understand why I don't care to divulge this swimmer's name, it is only fair for me to add that it wasn't George Kojac. To my mind, he, above everybody else, is a true amateur athlete.

I HAVE cited this case, not to get any athlete into trouble, but simply to illustrate the results of some of the present amateur statutes. Yes, there's sort of a revolution brewing amidst the amateurs.

On the whole, amateur rules today are fair enough, but there are the idiotic conflicting ones, scattered here and there, which should be erased quickly before they jeopardize the standing of any more athletes and, in turn, intensify the antagonism in the ranks. For instance, take the clause which permits amateurs to give instructions, providing they are not getting paid for it, and compare it with the clause which absolutely forbids amateurs from writing instructions, even if they're not receiving any compensation for it.

Puzzling indeed are these laws, but even more mystifying is the reason an amateur legislator will give you for the stand the A. A. U. takes on the writing of instructions. It is the association's opinion that, if an athlete writes for a paper or magazine, the readers wouldn't believe that he or she is not getting paid for it. I suppose they figure that anyone, who may witness an amateur giving instructions, has a different mental capacity and will not entertain such evil thoughts as to suspect that that athlete is accepting money.

Incidentally, amateurs are not forbidden to write articles, but the features mustn't be of an instructional nature, and—tie this—they mustn't bring the author more than regular space rates. Now, why do you suppose a line is drawn between instructional and other types of articles? I have yet to learn.

Considering that these are but a few of the rules existing at present, do you wonder why amateur athletes oppose the suspension of other athletes on alleged infringement of these laws? And do you wonder why they are forced to disobey the more sensible decrees, feeling that they might be declared ineligible anyway on some foolish charge?

To top these instances, the association has recently registered many decisions which have had the tendency to further harass amateurs. Those that concerned Olympic champions, such as Ray Barbuti, the runner, Helen Meany, the diver, and myself, broke into daily print, with the press taking sides against the A. A. U., and thus strengthening the athletes' enmity against certain rules with public sentiment.

THE case of Helen Meany and myself, which you may recall, is a perfect example of what I mean. Helen and I were suspended in January of 1929 for supposedly giving an exhibition with professional swimmers.

What really happened was that, while spending the winter in Miami, Fla., we dropped into the Roman Pool for a swim one day, paying the regular admission price, mind you, and met Johnny Weismuller and his swimming partner, Stubby Kruger, both of whom were making their living by giving instructions and appearances there. As was only natural, being old friends, we swam around together, but no announcement was made of any kind, which would make our actions appear as an exhibition. In some way, however, possibly through the ingenuity of a press agent, who wanted to exploit his client, the Miami papers got the impression that we had given an exhibition and reported so in their sporting columns. It wasn't long before the A. A. U. heard about the incident and suspended us without a hearing or opportunity to tell our side of the affair.

In the meantime, the Women's Swimming Association of New York, for whom Helen and I were competing at the time, asked the A. A. U. for evidence of the charges made against us, but was refused. The indoor national swimming championships were to be held in Chicago the following month and through the work of Leib Dayo, chairman of the swimming committee, the ban was raised temporarily and I was allowed to swim in the title meet.

Immediately after the championships, I was asked to go to Bermuda with Helen to pose for educational motion pictures, which we did with the consent of Mrs. Johnson, manager of the W. S. A. team, who accompanied us. All arrangements were made by Mrs. Johnson and she handled the expense money given by the movie people. No other payments were made. But the A. A. U. charged us once again with a violation of the eligibility rules and we were declared definitely disqualified from further amateur competition.

Now, witness the grounds upon which we were thrown out of the association we had helped to build. Officials admit that they believe we had not received any money.

BUT it seems that what we did was unconventional and, consequently, we must suffer the consequences.

First, by appearing in the same pool with professional swimmers, we allegedly had broken the amateur code. It didn't matter whether we paid to get into the pool and that no announcement was made—we had swum in the same body of water with professionals and that was against the rules. It's a wonder the A. A. U. didn't ban me years before it did, for I confess that I swam at Long Beach and that on the same day some professional athlete was also swimming in the Atlantic Ocean, off Lisbon, Spain. 'Twas in the same body of water, you know.

Then, by posing for the motion pictures we were supposed to have registered another breach of the law, which cooked our goose. It made no difference that the W. S. A. had on a previous occasion consulted William Prout, who held the presidency of the National Amateur Athletic Union when the question of educational motion pictures first cropped up, and that the club was told that the A. A. U. had absolutely no jurisdiction over such matters, provided the athlete received no remuneration, and that other club members, as a result, often appeared in the movies without the slightest interruptions—we had posed for pictures for a private organization, and that was an infringement of the rulings.

On this basis, why isn't every amateur who poses for the news reels ineligible, for our pictures were taken by a news reel company, only it was released as a feature instead of a news happening?

Unsound justice had been displayed before by the A. A. U., but I can think of no occasion on which two athletes were ostracized on such feeble charges.

GRAFT, I am glad to say, as a rule doesn't shadow amateur activities. I am convinced that the majority of the association's officials are honest. However, there was one man, high up in metropolitan amateur circles, who used to make a practice of wielding his power unlimitedly. Fortunately, he has since been dethroned.

It is known that this man hated the Women's Swimming Association, mainly because of its supremacy. When Helen and I were first brought up, he saw his opportunity to keep us out of the indoor championships and, when that failed, he used every means to bar us for the motion picture posing, which proved successful. But he still wasn't content, for the W. S. A. had won the team trophy at the indoors, so he went on and had all my victories revoked, giving the second place club the cup on disqualification charges.

Of course, you can imagine how the other members of the W. S. A. team felt and what their reactions would be later, if they were ever given the chance to make a little money on the side. However, Miss Charlotte Epstein and other heads of the club fought to uphold their rights, but they knew they were beaten and would continue to be beaten as long as this man reigned, and so they turned their efforts to defeat him in the next election, which they did.

I have nothing against those in command of the A. A. U. at present. Often I wonder whether Avery Brundage, its president, and Daniel Ferris, its secretary, really have the power the majority of us think they have. To be sure, they receive plenty of criticism, but in answer to it they seem to stand with hands tied. Who is really the ruler of the organization?

WHOEVER he is, it might interest him to know that, while the association spends so much time squabbling over alleged infractions of minor regulations, its more sensible ones are being violated left and right, and nothing is being done about it. Plentifully so is this going on in swimming circles. I repeat that it is not my intention to be, in the parlance of the underworld, "a stool pigeon," but I think by disclosing the practice, without mentioning names, the A. A. U. might get onto themselves and revise things to the benefit of all concerned.

Because of the Canadian Marathon, which will be contested this year August 22 and 27 at Toronto under auspices of the Canadian National Exhibition, and the large purse it offered as the Wrigley Marathon, more amateur swimmers have been turning professional each year. Of course, hardly any of them ever finish the long, tiresome grinds. Those who do, aside from the prizes, make additional money giving appearances and thus firmly establish themselves in pro ranks. Those who don't, however, have nothing else to do except to wait and try again in the big swim the following year. But the lust for competition soon gets them. They have to keep in trim, so they get out their amateur card, which still hasn't expired, and re-enter amateur races, usually without anybody being the wiser.

ORANGE COUNTY HOSPITAL AIDS MANY MOTHERS

By ELWOOD SQUIRES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Special to The Register)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 29.—California's county hospitals have become a haven for "poor middle class" mothers of the state.

Last year Orange county reported 130 births in its county hospital, with the state total showing 6,467 births in these hospitals.

Hailing the increased popularity of county hospitals for maternity cases as the first definite step in halting the alarming maternal mortality rate in the United States, the state department of welfare pointed out that those formerly "too rich" or "not poor" enough to enter county hospitals have at last found a place for themselves.

"It is an encouraging thing to see county hospitals offering their services to the general community, instead of only those who are too poor to pay for service," said Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, director of the social welfare department.

"County hospitals have an important place in the field of maternal hygiene. The United States has the largest percentage of deaths of mothers in child birth of any civilized nation in the world.

"How to reduce the toll of deaths is one of our foremost medical problems. The well-baby clinics have been the chief factor in reducing infant mortality in the past 20 years.

"Adequate hospital care would undoubtedly greatly help to meet the problem of the death of mothers. Some of our county hospitals have already gone a long way in this direction and their experience should be made available to all communities."

Great variation exists in the service rendered by county hospitals in California, according to Mrs. Saylor. Sacramento and San Joaquin counties show the largest percentage of births taking place at county hospitals. Fresno, Kern, Kings, Madera, Merced and Stanislaus counties all show more than ten per cent of all births taking place in their county hospitals.

A number of the smaller mountain counties offer no maternal service at all.

Laguna Beach

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Burbank, who have just completed and moved into their new home on Terry road, coming here from Sierra Madre, were visited Sunday by their former townsfolk, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Corlett. Mr. Burbank is a retired publisher of educational works.

Mrs. Helen Lewis Cassell, landscape artist from Hollywood, and her small daughter, Margaret Jean, have been spending the summer at their home on Terry road and Bartlett place.

Donald Vivrette was bitten by a dog owned by E. M. Schener, of 640 Williams street, Los Angeles, Sunday, as he emerged from the surf while swimming. Though the wound was not dangerous, the dog is held for observation for 14 days.

Helen Ware, famous as an actress of a generation ago, now employed in pictures, was a visitor here Sunday.

George K. Bingham, principal of the schools, curtailed his vacation and hurried home in order to be here in time to vote. He wanted to give his support to W. T. Lambert for auditor especially, he told Brayton S. Norton.

GOOSE CAUSES ROW

FORT MORGAN, Colo., Aug. 29.—(UP)—If a goose had known which side of the road it wanted to take, Judge A. V. S. Saunders would not have been called upon to mete out justice. Because of its uncertainty, the goose was struck and killed by an automobile. Thomas Durand, Fred Coca and Manuel Duran went back to settle with F. A. Patterson, owner of the bird. A fight followed and Paterson filed assault and battery charges. Judge Saunders found the boys not guilty.

NEW BOOKS IN PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY VERNA RAMSEY

We hear many discussions about world unity. Numerous plans are made, conferences are held, and we read many articles on the subject in magazines and newspapers. Yet has anyone really analyzed the subject? How much do we know of the true problems in connection with the unification of the world?

In "The Unity of the World," Guglielmo Ferrero discusses the problems thoughtfully. Having surveyed the pageant of ancient Rome, he turns a calm eye to the transforming events of today. Whether he speaks of China, or Europe, or the United States, he speaks without bitterness, without insinuations of contempt or pride. If he prefers some of the loveliness of the Old World to the efficiency of the New, he knows why and at what price. He is well aware of the revolutionary effect of the machine and understands its limitations. But, he does not complain or take on airs. With a great serenity he watches the changes of history shaking out vast new patterns beyond the comprehension of little men and women. He records, penetrates, offers explanations, and accepts, but does not quarrel.

The result of this survey of the process that unifies and divides the world is a firm confidence in the substance of things. It is a confidence that makes room for liberty, for universal suffrage, for the despised masses of mankind, a confidence that finds the world more than a battleground where men trample themselves in the mire and die. It makes a volume that while making us hopeful, also makes us think. We are too much inclined to accept catch words and theories of others as a substitute for thought. The problems connected with world unity are not to be casually settled in a day. It may be part of a historical process that will take centuries. A thoughtful study of the situation today may indicate ways in which the process may be helped to a satisfactory conclusion.

We are made aware of one of the great changes of our day by the existence of such a volume as "The Air Tourists Guide to Europe" by Norman Macmillan.

This book is designed as a very practical guide to air traveling conditions. The map of the complete European Air Lines shows the traveler in one comprehensive page the complete airway system of all Europe with every air-line port to call plotted and clearly readable. When planning travel in Europe by air, reference may first be made to this map to determine in what respect air services available meet the travel itinerary involved. From this map the tour can be worked out in the rough. The full details can then be found from the subsequent chapters and the section maps which accompany the chapters.

The chapters are arranged in countries or groups of countries, so that the air traveler can obtain complete local information which covers not only local air lines, but trunk lines radiating from the locality. Each chapter is prefaced with a map of the air lines of the countries forming the local group, from which the traveler can see at a glance what connections the local air services offer him. When engaged in the plotted of routs which run internationally and thus come under two or more chapters, reference to all the chapters concerned will rapidly make known the additional air services upon which the traveler can reckon in this tour.

For anyone plahning an air tour of Europe, this information will be of great value. It is very clearly and concisely stated and arranged in a manner to enable the reader to make the most convenient use of it. Others of us who cannot make such a trip may bring our imaginary travels up to date by arranging them according to the most modern methods.

How many of us have dreamed of sailing the South Seas. Romantic, colorful dreams that have not come true. Gifford Pinchot had such a dream, but his did come true. We may read of his voyage in his own yacht in "To the South Seas."

The marvels which he found in his travels to the Galapagos, the Marquesas, the Tuamotu Islands, and Tahiti surpass even our dreams as they did his. We go with him into the San Blas Villages which have few visitors. The little houses of the Indians, cane-sided and thatch-roofed, are set so closely together that in many streets it is necessary to how the head below the eaves and turn the shoulders sideways to get through.

Through the magic words of this author, we are conducted to "the enchanted Islands" of Galapagos. We have read fairy tales in which wild things — bears, wolves, and frogs come to play with boys and girls. There are no bears, wolves, or frogs in the Galapagos, but there are sea lions which will come to play with you. At home bats are found in the air, but in these miraculous islands the commonest bats are sea bats. Instead of a few inches across the wings, they spread 15, 20, or perhaps nearly 30 feet, and the weight of the largest is measured in tons. These islands harbor the most friendly, cordial, confident, and fearless birds and beasts, which perhaps the world has to show. Here is the nearest approach to the Garden of Eden that remains to this wearied earth.

These are only a very few of the wonders to be found between the covers of this book. Following its pages, we are carried to a most marvelous world which will live and mingle with our dreams of romance and beauty.

PEOPLE'S PAPER FOR ALL ORANGE COUNTY — DAILY EVENING

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

SECTION TWO — SANTA ANA, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, AUGUST 29, 1930 — PAGES FIFTEEN TO TWENTY-EIGHT

Register Artist Announces Prize Letter Contest

LIKENESSES OF WINNERS TO BE SKETCHED FREE

Why is Orange county a wonderful place to live?

The writer of the three most interesting letters on this subject will be sketched by a nationally known portrait artist, Simeon Petrikovitch, whose daily feature in the Register, "Orange County Personalities," is attracting wide attention. The sketches will be life size likenesses.

Petrikovitch announced that the best of the three letters will win for its writer a drawing of himself or herself in pastel.

The Register will co-operate with the artist in the contest and will publish the three best letters selected by the judges, who are George Raymer, secretary of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce; Herbert N. Alleman, president of the Santa Ana Realty board, and Mary Burke King, of the Register. Their decision will be final.

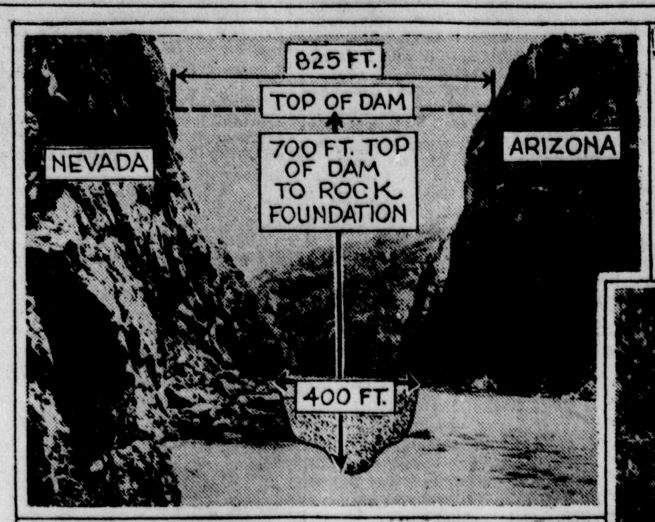

All letters must be addressed to Simeon Petrikovitch, care of the Register, and must be mailed before September 15. Announcement of the winners will be made shortly after September 15.

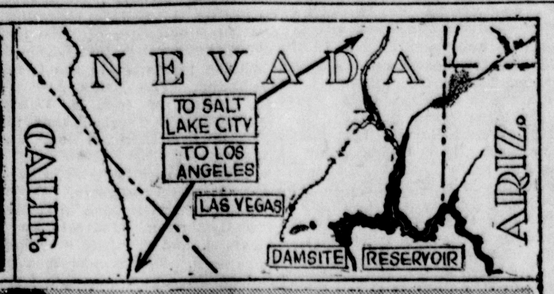

Petrikovitch, who has been in Orange county for the past several weeks sketching leading citizens for his daily feature in the Register, has characterized this section as truly a "God's Country" where the real joy of living abounds. Although a young man, he has traveled through many foreign countries and through most of the states in this country. And to his many friends he wishes to tell the marvelous things about Orange county.

Many expressions of approval have come to him about his daily Register feature, "Orange County Personalities," and for this reason he has authorized the Register to announce that he will draw life size likenesses of the writers of the three best letters telling why Orange county is a wonderful place to live.

BOULDER DAM WORK TO START OCTOBER 1 WITH LAUNCHING OF RAILROAD CONSTRUCTION

By NEA Service

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Aug. 29.—After years of discussion and planning, Uncle Sam's biggest construction job since Muscle Shoals and one of the biggest since the Panama Canal is soon to get under way.

On or about October 1, actual work on the $165,000,000 Boulder dam project will be started, when the Union Pacific railroad begins building a spur track from Bracken, Nev., just south of Las Vegas, to a point near the dam site on the Colorado river. Following this will come construction of the great dam with its accompanying huge locks and hydro-electric plants, a task that will require years.

Las Vegas is only 30 miles away and, of course, will benefit by this great development but about the last thing the city's leading business men want is for it to become a hectic boom town, with the resultant unstable prosperity that goes with boom towns. They are more careful and far-seeing.

Warn Against "Sharks"

In fact, they warn that the Union Pacific will not employ more than 300 men in building the railroad and that work on Boulder dam itself will not start before next spring. They also warn against wild speculation in real estate, like that experienced at Muscle Shoals, explaining to investors that much of the adjacent land is at too high an altitude to be irrigated, even after the great development is completed. A number of companies to sell lots in the area have already been formed.

They want prosperity and they intend to get it, but they want the solid kind.

The Union Pacific trackage to a point called Summit—22 miles of grading, culvert and trestle construction—will cost approximately $2,500,000. From Summit, it is 7.13 miles to the dam site. This link will be built by the Union Pacific for the government on a basis of cost, plus 10 per cent. Because of the mountainous country it represents unusually difficult engineering problems.

Elevators for Workers

The dam will be built at the mouth of the Black canyon on the roaring Colorado river. On the mesas above the stream—several hundred feet from the bottom of the canyon—a city will be built to accommodate workers. Elevators will take the men to and from their work on the canyon floor.

Before the dam foundations can be laid it will be necessary to "dry up" this flow of water. To accomplish this, four ditches will be dug; the river temporarily dammed upstream and the water to be diverted around the dam site via these ditches.

When completed, Boulder dam will impound 26,000,000 acre-feet of water into a great lake. This will develop a million horsepower of energy as it passes out for irrigation purposes. Flood control works around the Imperial valley of California, and the construction of an all-American canal from the Colorado river to the fertile Imperial valley are also provided in the project. At present, the valley gets its water from a canal that runs mostly through Mexico.

The power generated will be distributed over several western states and to cities as far away as Los Angeles.

PASTORS RETURN AFTER VACATION

The Rev. and Mrs. Wilfred C. Parham, pastors of the Four Square Gospel church, at Fairview and Sycamore streets, had returned today from their two weeks' vacation, which they spent at Catalina and San Diego. They will be in charge of the Four Square service Friday night.

While on their vacation they visited Mrs. Aimee McPherson in her home at Malibu Beach, where she is convalescing from a nervous breakdown, and where they witnessed her serious condition. They will report on her condition during the Sunday services.

Mrs. Parham will preach at both the Sunday services. In the morning her message will be, "Why Doesn't God Kill the Devil?" Sunday evening the sermon will be, "The Meanest Man in Santa Ana." All are invited to these meetings.

Monday, being Labor Day, the Four Square church and Sunday school will have a picnic at Irvine park, to which the public is invited.

YOUNGSTER IN RED WAGON IS CRASH VICTIM

Harry De Hazo, three-year-old youth, residing near Sixth and Artesia streets, was seriously injured at 6:25 o'clock last night when an automobile crashed into a little red wagon, in which he was riding. The accident occurred near his home.

The boy was taken to the Orange County hospital, where it is not believed that his injuries will prove fatal.

According to witnesses, the baby was being pushed along the sidewalk in the wagon. Suddenly the wagon ran down a drive way and the boy was taken to the center of the street, directly in front of a car being driven by S. L. Chavez, an employe of the Colis ranch, on Lacy street.

Witnesses who saw the accident reported that the driver of the machine was not to blame for the accident, according to a police report.

Deputies In Paris Vote By Machine

PARIS, Aug. 29.—(INS)—Voting by electrisity is the latest introduction in the chamber of deputies here. This follows a long series of verbal combats staged after each voting session in the chamber, when numerous deputies changed their minds and voting tickets before, during and after casting their ballots. This was discovered to waste so much valuable time that the price of an intricate new-fangled electrical machine could better be afforded. Reactionary members of the chamber protest against the installation of this representation of the machine age, complaining that not even voting remains an individual matter any longer.

H. H. TARTSON IS INJURED BY CAR

H. H. Tartson, of 827 South Sycamore street, suffered a fracture of the left leg and cuts and bruises last night when he was run down at Fourth and Birch street, by an automobile driven by Mrs. Anna Walkinshaw, of 1021 West Second street, according to a report made to the Santa Ana police department.

He was taken to the St. Joseph's hospital at Orange, by Bascom Rush, of 512 North Parton street.

Mrs. Walkinshaw made a report of the accident at the city police station.

Fox Broadway To Show Preview Of Pathe Production

Pathe's latest all-talking feature will be shown here as a studio preview at the Fox Broadway theater at 8 o'clock tonight, according to an announcement made today by Francis Glaab, manager of the theater.

The picture is still in the "rough," and uncut in many places, but will be an added attraction to theater goers. The first showing of "Call of the Flesh," with Ramon Novarro, also will be presented at the theater tonight.

Santa Anans, who view "Lillion," as a preview here Wednesday night, were highly pleased with the class of previews now being brought to Santa Ana by the Fox theaters.

Police News

Police were called to 814 West Third street last night at 11 o'clock to "quiet" a phonograph, which, according to a complaint, was making too much noise in a garage, where it was being played.

Charged with being drunk, George Miller, 48, of 1301 West Palmyra, Orange, was arrested at Fourth and French streets last night by Officer Foster. He was lodged in the county jail.

R. D. Goetz, of Delhi, was arrested on a warrant yesterday afternoon, charging drunkenness. He was allowed bail of $50 and will be given a trial in the Santa Ana police court today.

W. F. Boggs, 67, Santa Ana, was arrested at Fourth and French streets last night by Officer Paul Cozad, on a drunk charge, according to a report at the police department.

A bill authorizing a new $4,500,000 metal-clad airship has been introduced in congress. It will have a gas volume of 3758,000 cubic feet.

Santa Ana Teacher To Sail For Europe On September 2

Friends of Miss Rose K. Clausen, former teacher of home economics in the Santa Ana high school, will be interested to know that she is sailing from New York City on September 2 on the S. S. "Vulcania" for Europe.

Miss Clausen will have as a companion on the trip Lady Elnore of Staten Island, N. Y., who is leaving to spend a year in Europe where she will study with the most noted psychologists of the continent. Lady Elnore and the Santa Ana teacher have mutual interests in that both are intensely interested in psychology and mental hygiene. Miss Clausen was recently a delegate to the First International congress of mental hygiene which was held in Washington, D. C. in May of the present year.

During the past summer Miss Clausen has been attending the school of speech department at the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., and has spent the greater part of the past year in study and travel. From September of last year until January of this year she attended lectures at the Columbia university and from January until May she was secretary of the Psychology service bureau. The summer of 1929 she spent at the summer school of psychology at Lookout Mountain, Ala.

The psychology service bureau took Miss Clausen to Florida where Dr. Thomson of Michigan gave a series of lectures and where she joined a group of Florida people on a seven days' trip to Havana, Cuba. She ermained in Miami for three weeks.

Traveling from New York to Italy by way of the Mediterranean sea, Miss Clausen will stay two weeks in that country and will take the next boat on to Trieste by way of the Adriatic sea. From 1922 until 1928, Miss Clausen was the proprietor of the Clausen Furniture company of this city. She expects to remain in Europe for about three months.

Following the golf game, the group returned to the home, where a delectable refreshment course was served at the dining table, laid with white linens, and centered with a bowl of pink and yellow tinted gladioluses. Clover place cards were hand-made sketches of the guests. The color motif was again noted in the refreshment course which included pink ices.

"This is it — the ideal shortening"

We showed them Parfay—the new blended shortening. We invited them to test it, critically, and not to spare our feelings.

This group of experts didn't stop at "liking"! They acclaim Parfay as the ideal shortening, combining the special merits of all others!

Parfay is snowy white, absolutely pure and keeps indefinitely. It has no flavor. The smoke point is exceptionally high. Parfay creams and mixes quickly, makes light cakes. All these advantages plus old-fashioned flaky pie crust, too. And it comes in a pound package of new, convenient shape.

Be among the first to try it! If you are at all disappointed—your money is refunded. That shows how sure we are!

Something New in the Way of Dessert

What to have for dessert is the urning question with many a ousekeeper. It isn't so easy to ink about good desserts right aft- breakfast, yet that is the time e dinner menu must be planned d the ordering done for the day. Don't overlook the possibilities the coffee left in the percolator. Frequently, I make an extra nount of coffee with dessert in ind, and I use the coffee in vari- s ways. It makes a baked cus- rd something it never aspired to —just use half milk and half ffee and the usual amount of gs and sugar, bake slowly, chill oroughly and serve with a spoon- l of whipped cream. The way I e best to use it is in—

COFFEE MOUSSE

Take two cups of strong coffee, wo-thirds cup of sugar. Bring to oil and thicken it with corn- ch so that the mixture when ooked will drip off the tip of the poon in slow blobs. Add a good inch of salt—all whipped cream ixtures need salt—and let it cool. Whip a half-pint bottle of heavy ream very stiff, combine with the offee cornstarch and whip well. Chill on ice in the ordinary refrig- rator or partially freeze in the lectric refrigerator. A teaspoonful f vanilla improves the coffee fla- or. This recipe makes eight por- ions.

Just a word of caution: This des- ert is so rich in energy making oods it should follow a dinner low n these foods. This would be the inner of steaks or chops with two afy vegetables and a crisp salad. otatoes and bread and butter hould be taboo at the meal if veight is something one has to hink about.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Pork Chops Italienne

6 pork chops
1-2 cup canned corn
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 egg, well beaten

uy nice loin chops, brown them a hot dry skillet, transfer to a hallow casserole and cover with he "Italienne" mixture. This part s mixed this way: grind the pep- er and onion, scoop the two cups f crumbs from the soft part of a tale loaf and combine with the ground vegetables, corn, butter, salt and beaten egg.

Whip well, then pack, and work it down with a spoon, so that when it is placed on top of the chops it will stay put. Pour a little extra butter on hot water, one-third cup, around the chops to keep them moist and bake in a moderate oven until the chops are tender—about an hour.

The last half hour the casserole should be covered to keep the dressing from getting too dry and brown.

Serve with cream-beef gravy; this is made by blending butter, flour and two beef meat cubes together, and adding milk to cook to a smooth gravy. Season with celery salt.

One pork chop is allowed for each serving. The individual calory total, counting gravy, is around 450. Half of this amount is found in the energy-making units.

Pork chops and Spoon Bread hobnob beautifully, but spoon bread made according to the recipe given in the leaflet for the week is good enough to make the Sphinx sit up and show interest. And only a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the leaflet, this week, it is free.

NOVARRO OPENS BROADWAY SHOW

Ramon Novarro's much heralded flair for opera singing will be put to screen use for the first time in his newest musical picture, "Call of the Flesh," which will open today at the Fox Broadway theater with a cast which includes Dorothy Jordan, Ernest Torrence, Nance O'Neil, Renee Adoree, Mathilde Comont and Russell Hopton.

The story, an original by Dorothy Farnum, provides Novarro with the role of a Spanish singer whose operatic success is tempered by the complications which result as the outcome of two love affairs. The star will sing "Ridi Pagliacci," one of the late Enrico Caruso's favorite arias, and "Questa o Quella" from "Rigoletto." In an attempt to keep the picture from being too "high-brow," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have also included three numbers composed by Herbert Stothart and Clifford Grey, who wrote the music for "Devil May Care" and "The Rogue Song." They are "Not Good Enough For Me," "Just For Today" and "Loving Thoughts of You."

Report has it that this picture tops all Novarro's previous talking and singing efforts, being equipped with a particularly entertaining plot, interesting characterizations and picturesque locales, which include interors of cathedrals, a reproduction of the Madrid Opera House and scenes of provincial Spanish towns. The final scenes are done in technicolor.

ITALIAN LABORERS WORRYING FRENCH

PARIS, Aug. 29.—(INS)Italian laborers in France have become so numerous and have yet remained so unassimilated that the French are waking up to the fact that this country has an immigration problem on its hands. While these laborers are in many ways desirable in districts of France where native laborers are scarce, they remain undesirables because of their intense patriotism. They stay only long enough to make a certain amount of money to take back to their own country, they buy their stores from their own countrymen, give their entire allegiance to Italy, and only use France as a provider of money. Italy itself has very rigid laws to protect itself from any foreign laborers from France or elsewhere. A movement is now being suggested to raise a similar barrier in France against Italians.

"ARIZONA KID" ENDS RUN HERE TODAY

"The Arizona Kid," with Warner Baxter, in the role that won for him the most coveted medal in screenland, will be seen and heard at the Fox West Coast theater today for the last times. The picture was returned here yesterday for a two-day engagement.

Thrilling story of adventure and romance in the life of a daring bandit and outlaw, the plot centers around the romance between the Cisco Kid and a girl who comes from the east to find her brother. A gold mine robbery and a murder play an important part in the plot.

Baxter was never better, while the entire story is both entertaining and unusual.

"All Quiet on the Western Front," famous war film which played a week here recently to crowded houses, will be returned to the Fox West Coast theater tomorrow and Sunday by popular demand.

"SHANGHAI SHIP" IS SEEN AT WALKER'S

"The Ship From Shanghai," first motion picture of which 90 per cent was filmed on the high seas, will be presented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer tonight at Walker's State.

A schooner, treated acoustically, was equipped with a complete recording outfit and the play filmed while on a cruise up and down the Pacific coast.

It tells the story of a group of society people becalmed at sea, and prisoners of a muttering ship's steward who is gone mad.

Louis Wolheim plays the mutineering steward. The cast includes Conrad Nagel, Kay Johnson, Carmel Myers, Holmes Herbert.

The all-important principle in making jelly is the same in roasting HILLS BROS COFFEE

ADD THE warm sugar to the hot fruit syrup a little at a time to be sure of perfect jelly. Hills Bros., by their patented, continuous process—Controlled Roasting—insure evenly roasted, full-flavored coffee because they roast only a few pounds at a time. No other coffee tastes like Hills Bros. because none is roasted the same way.

Fresh from the original vacuum pack. Easily opened with the key. Look for the Arab on the can.

UNWELCOME MUSIC

COLORADO SPRINGS, (UP)—There was music in the air when an accordion player and two vocalists started an impromptu program on the streets at 3 a. m. Their efforts fell on unappreciative ears and they were hailed into court and fined for disturbance of the peace.

Glassware and Silver Glisten and Gleam As Never Before

You will exclaim with delight at your first trial of B.B.—the new and different soap.

In hard water or soft, B.B. Granular Soap quickly develops an abundance of sparkling, bubbly, enduring suds that make grease and dirt disappear as if by magic.

B.B. does what no other soap can do, because it contains ingredients new to soap making. Not only does it not redden, coarsen or inflame the hands, but actually improves their appearance. Believe it or not, it's so. Try just one package of B.B. Granular Soap—you will not need further urging to buy it always.

Special Introductory Coupon—10c Value

Take this coupon to Schramm-Johnson Drug Co., 200 W. 4th St. pay 15c and receive regular 25c package of B.B. Granular Soap. Use it for every household purpose, and if you are not thoroughly well pleased ask for your money back.

BEADS FOR EVENING WEAR RETURN AGAIN

BY ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Beads are back again. Boleros and tiny casaquins for bridge and evening wear are embroidered in black bugles or colored sequins in all-over closely massed effects. Gold, silver and jet are all used in overlapping treatment and bring about brilliant results. Small, hexagonal sequins placed flat on the foundation are used in lovely, pastel tones.

The general trend seems towards bugles, but small steel and glass beads, as well as sequins will be used for many summer frocks and blouses and it is thought that winter evening gowns will very often be beaded.

Leufrol is showing very discreet use of strass on a charming model of taffeta with openwork decolletage outlined with it and the same on the little sash. Close black and white beading appears on the tight bodice of another new model and an evening gown in pink is entirely of beads used in scroll design and falling on the skirt in loose strands.

Long bugles placed in zig-zag formation give a smart finish to a black net evening gown. The beaded edges are deep and important but add no weight to the frock, exceedingly light ones being used.

Beautifully beaded in square flat glass beads, in an evening ensemble in pale green georgette and a white georgette has red bugles placed in zig-zag pattern.

WINTERSBURG

WINTERSBURG, Aug. 29.—C. E. Gilmore of the Texas company has been enjoying a two weeks vacation. The Gilmore family made several short trips among which was a three-day outing in Silverado canyon with several of their friends of Santa Ana.

George and Edwin Gothard are on a few days' fishing trip at Catalina.

Geraldine Weir, of Santa Ana, was a guest in the Roy Fox home for a few days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. McIntish of the Oceanview cafe have installed a large gas refrigerator.

Mrs. C. E. Gilmore, the incoming P.-T. A. president, held an executive board meeting and the following committee heads were appointed: Finance, Mrs. Pearl Worthy and Mrs. Daisy Fox; program, Mrs. Harold Tracy; hospitality, Mrs. T. J. Holt; publicity, Mrs. Chas. Schuth; membership, Mrs. George Gothard; publication, Mrs. J. N. Holt, and Mrs. Clinton Brush, clinic.

George Warmer jr., of Santa Ana, filled the pulpit of the local church Sunday morning and Mr. Wagner of Alhambra was here in the evening. Mr. Wagner is Mrs. Matson's father.

Mrs. C. E. Pratt and her daughter, Thelma, were hostesses for a shower given Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Muriel Moore, who is to be married September 5 to Russel Harbin Hurst, of Los Angeles. Clever invitations of paper wedding bells tied with dainty ribbon were sent out. The afternoon was enjoyed with games appropriate for the occasion and a large basket of gifts was presented to the bride. Refreshments of pie and coffee were served by the hostesses and those enjoying the afternoon were Mrs. Lee Wentzell, Mrs. G. M. Roberson, Margaret Knighton, Mrs. Raymond Beem, Mrs. W. A. Matson, Mrs. Charles Graham, Mrs. L. E. Barry, Mrs. J. H. Pryor, Mrs. John Murdy, Mrs. Berry, Mrs. Peters, Mrs. A. Steffanzi, Mrs. Harry Letson, Mrs. Cowling, Mrs. E. Ray Moore, Mrs. A. Ruoff, Mrs. George Crane, Mrs. J. Letson, Mrs. William Slater, the honored guest, Miss Muriel Moore and the hostesses, Mrs. C. E. Pratt and daughter, Thelma.

Mrs. Agnes Powell and two children, of Colton, are here spending several days with her mother, Mrs. Ellen Gothard.

People in this vicinity will be interested to know there were 256 votes cast in this precinct Tuesday.

Ethel Sebastian, who was one who worked on the election board here Tuesday, returned to her work in Hemet Wednesday.

Earl Talley and son, James, made a trip to Catalina recently.

Ralph Huff and family spent Tuesday in Huntington Beach.

The condition of John Anderson, who is ill at St. Joseph's hospital, is unimproved. Mr. Anderson is a brother of Mrs. Ellen Gothard.

June Slater, who is in the Santa Ana Valley hospital as a result of an automobile accident, is improving nicely. She probably will be able to be brought to her home in about two weeks. The doctors report that she will be able to start to university this year but will have to be on crutches for a while.

A hotel is being constructed on the rim of the crater of Kilauea volcano in Hawaii, and will be heated by the steam of the volcano.

SPRINGDALE

SPRINGDALE, Aug. 29.—Mrs. L. S. Moore entertained in her home as week end guests, her daughter, Mrs. J. Haptonstall, and family, of Otay. Mrs. Moore returned home with her daughter to remain a week.

Miss Erma Debarr and Mrs. Mary McClusky, of Santa Ana, visited Mrs. G. M. Roberson on their return home from a family picnic at Bixby park in Long Beach.

Norman Ruoff and wife and little daughter, of Los Angeles, were guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Ruoff, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Barry and Mrs. Barry's sister, Margaret Knighton, and Mr. W. I. Clapp, of Huntington Beach, motored to Yucaipa Thursday.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 29.—Mexico is preparing for something, if not war, according to the reported intention of the War Department. It has been decided to double the number of modern fighting airplanes in service. Thirty planes are to be bought from the United States, and a second army air unit is to be organized.

Who doesn't Love Old-fashion Things

OLD-FASHION songs, old-fashion furniture (and some of us)—old-fashion girls. Steadfast honest quality is traditional of things our ancestors created. And typical of those by-gone periods was blue-checkered gingham. Typical too of that same honest quality which endears itself to the American housewife, is the BLUE GINGHAM DRESS that now clothes and protects WEBER'S BREAD. You'll reverence the goodness of this famous loaf just as you do the goodness of old-fashion things.

"As you like it"

You can buy Weber's Bread in the White or the Whole Wheat loaves, either sliced or unsliced. Weber's White Bread is Wrapped in the attractive gingham blue, and Weber's Whole Wheat in appetizing gingham brown. The word "sliced" appears prominently on the wrappers of the sliced loaves.

HOLLY SUGAR
Is Ideal for Canning and Preserving

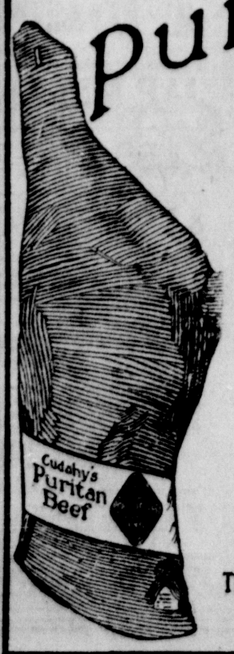

"Cane and Beet Sugar.—In numerous tests made by the Fruit Products Laboratory, beet sugar was found to give results equal to those of cane sugar. The prejudice against beet sugar is no longer warranted. It is identical chemically with cane sugar. Beet sugar is equally as good as cane sugar for jellies and preserves and is used by many canners and preservers."—(Extract from Circular 276 on Home Canning, of the U. of C. College of Agriculture, Berkeley, California.)

Packed in 5 lb., 10 lb., 25 lb. and 100 lb. Bags.

URGE DESIGNER OF CAPITAL FOR HALL OF TIME

WASHINGTON, August 29. — Charles Bulfinch, "the first American architect," and designer of the United States capitol, has been nominated to the Hall of Fame by the board of directors of the American Institute of Architects. Summaries of the achievements of the early American designer have been sent to each elector of the Hall of Fame by the Board.

"Few architects of today can boast of a list of such notable buildings as those designed by Bulfinch," says the board in its plea. It was stated that Bilfinch's record as a stateman during the formulative period of Boston should be sufficient to elect the architect to the Hall of Fame as a statesman, if not as an architect.

Bulfinch was born in Bowdoin Square, Boston, August 8, 1763. He died April 15, 1844.

A graduate of Harvard, Bulfinch became interested in designing work while attending to improvements on his father's and friend's houses. Later he was able to make an extensive tour of Europe, studying the types of architecture used in the old cities.

While serving as a selectman in Boston, Bulfinch inaugurated street lighting, the system of coeducation, establishment of a board of health, and a financial committee that brought about order and system in the method of collecting city taxes.

In 1817, after completing his second term on the board of selectmen, Bulfinch was appointed architect of the United States capitol in Washington.

Among the many buildings designed by the architect are: the Connecticut State House in Hartford in 1792, the first theatre in Boston, and five institutional buildings, 10 churches, three hospitals, seven schools, and seven commercial and bank buildings.

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KING

The Camera Man was soon all set and then he said, "I'll shortly get a very lovely picture if you'll stand up good and straight. Don't let the wild wind blow your cap and wait until you hear me snap my camera before you move. You won't have long to wait."

The other Tinies stood around and realized that they had found a chance to tease poor Clowny and to make him laugh out loud. Wee Coppy made some faces quick. So did the others. 'Twas a trick to upset Clowny, who stood still to look proud.

"Aw, quit it," Clowny shortly said. "I'm not supposed to move my head. You're trying to make me giggle so the picture will look bad. If you'll behave till I get through, the man will snap each one of you. And, when you see your faces on a card, you'll all be glad."

Kind Carpy said, "That's fair to me. Now see how pretty you can be." In just about a moment Mister Camera Man said, "Fine! One picture is already done. Say, isn't this a heap of fun. I'll photograph the rest of you, if you will form in line."

So, one by one, the snaps were shot. Then Scouty cried, "As like as not we all will look real funny." "No you won't," the man replied. "You'll all look nice. I'm sure of that unless some pictures turned out flat." He took the pictures from the box and every Tiny sighed.

They turned out nice as they could be. The man then said, "Well, now pay me." The Travel Man exclaimed, "Why sure!" and handed him some money. Just then a man came down the street, and Scouty cried, "Gee, there's a treat." It was a queer Greek moving man, and, my, but he looked funny.

RULES

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to TIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE, TIN, PIE, PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

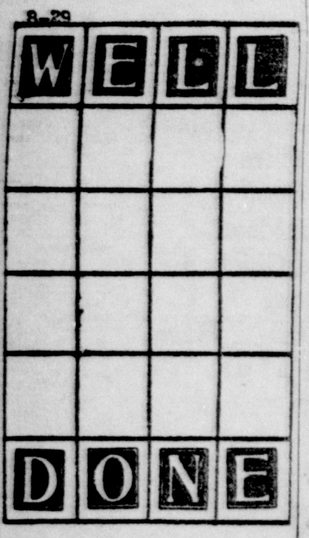

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters cannot be changed.

WELL to DONE—You can call your day's work WELL DONE if you can shoot this par four hole.

STARS, COLTON BEGIN SERIES HERE TONIGHT

summer. There have not been man yAnaheims, Whittiers, Olives and La Habras in the American circuit.

Santa Ana therefore has had the advantage of keen competition, where Colton was so much better than most of its league it could afford to loaf through many of its games . That may be aside from the point, however, as Colton did all that could be asked in winning all but two league games during the entire season. Santa Ana lost nine conference starts, seven of them in the first half of its split schedule.

In practice games with Anaheim, the Reds looked dangerous at the bat but just a little feeble at fielding bunts and anything but smart at running bases. While this may have been only a temporary situation ,such a weakness would strike where Santa Ana is strongest. The Stars are all adept at bunting, and they are great base runners.

Montgomery and Botts are rated on a par with Cornelius as pitchers. The series may prove otherwise. McDonnell and Johnson of Whittier were regarded as better than "Iron Man Joe" before the recent National league playoffs but Cornelius outpitched them both to win the flag in three straight games. Botts must be figured as Cornelius' equal in advance, however. He must have something to have stood the American leaguers on their heads all year.

Ray Price, a lanky slow-ball gunner, and "Bomo" Koral, who specializes with a raise-ball, are the second and third string moundsmen in the Stars' dugout.

Wilcox Shines Behind Plate

Santa Ana has a decided edge behind the plate. Wilcox is the finest catcher in night baseball. Bob Stone, the Colton receiver, is quite satisfactory himself but hardly measures up to Wilcox's standard.

Colton's infield was strengthened considerably by the addition of Stock, a brilliant second baseman from Pomona. He is said to have improved the Reds' infield tremendously. Jack Stone, first baseman, is the team's Babe Ruth, a right hand hitter who is a threat any time he steps to the post. The Santa Ana flychasers will have to play deep for him. Shaddox at third and Hanegan at short are good mechanical fielders and good throwers. Weiser is the team's reserve infielder.

Santa Ana matches these with Bill Cole, a big first baseman who fields well and is dangerous at bat. Leavitt Daley, the team's leading hitter, is at second base. He is a high class ball player in every respect. His acquisition this season made the Santa Ana club 50 per cent stronger, offensively and defensively. "Memphy" Hill, a smart little veteran with wads of color, is the shortpatcher. He is consistently good. Bill Hunter, third baseman, has one of the strongest throwing arms in the game. He is a steady ,hard-working chap, and improving at the bat as he begins to look at more and more good pitching.

Good Reserve Material

Scott, equally at home at third or second base, and Curt Youel, a smooth fielding southpaw first baseman, are Santa Ana's reserve infielders. Johnny Lutz also is a first sacker by trade but a substitute outfielder by convenience.

The Santa Ana outfield figures to have a slight edge over the Reds. Bell, Nelson and Merrill are marvelous defensive players, the first two seldom letting a game go by without coming up with some kind of a remarkable catch. Merrill, less sensational, fields everything wel lenough and is the most dangerous man on the club with runners on base. Nelson also is a great "come through" artist.

Earl Thoms, center fielder, is Colton's pride and joy. They rate him as the finest flychaser that ever broke into the American league. A southpaw, he is much like Orv Schuchardt in his manner of covering ground in the outer patrols. He is a sweet hitter also. Gilbert, Bowers and Noriega, who will roam the other pastures, are all dependable workmen, too. The Colton outfield will not be o utclassed by any means.

The second game of the series will be played at Colton next Tuesday. Then the teams return to the Bowl Friday. Three games are on the schedule for the following week.

club is great until it has won at least two championships."

Mr. Mack is not only lean and kindly, but he also knows how to shoot a barbed shaft of sarcasm right to the bull's-eye. The above words are meant to convey to the lads that Mr. Mack isn't paying them for coming out to the ball park and looking wise. Mr. Mack doesn't want any yawning. And over-confidence to Mr. Mack is most distasteful.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

CHICAGO BD OF TRADE

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(UP)—Rumors that the preliminary figures of a local statistician revealed a corn crop of below 2,000,000,000 bushels spread over the Board of Trade today and caused a rush of buying that sent prices climbing upward. Shorts covered freely and dealers of offers were forced to protect themselves. Decembr wnte up more than 3 cents. While the best prices were not maintained, the market closed with sharp gains; wheat ascended with corn early but liquidation in September acted as a depressing factor. Oats also clunbed on the strength in corn. Profit taking and evening up for the triple holiday stemmed the rise.

At the close wheat was unchanged to 1c lower, corn was 2 to 2¼c higher and oats were ⅝ to 1⅝c higher. Provisions were unevenly lower to higher.

Miniature Golf Snaps
Why launch a new golf course when there are bargains to be had in ESTABLISHED, STABILIZED courses? For six months we have done nothing but design, build, operate and sell miniature golf. We are in touch with HUNDREDS OF COURSE OWNERS in four counties. We believe that THE GAME IS HERE TO STAY. Many misfits have rushed into the game. Many hurry-up partnerships were formed that failed to jell. This has produced a situation where fundamentally sound courses that are being mismanaged CAN BE PICKED UP RIGHT. We specialize in the sale of such properties. For instance—Established 18 hole course in nearby town. Netting about $400 month. Blvd. location. Low overhead. Stand most rigid investigation. About $2500 cash necessary. SEE US ABOUT THIS —No information over phone.

OUR FOREIGN CRITICS

Ever since the establishment of our government, with the adoption of the Constitution in 1789, our scheme of government and our industrial development have been of great interest to European students. Of these, the observations and studies of men and women like de Toqueville, Harriet Martineau, Mrs. Trollope, and Charles Dickens are often quoted. In recent years we have had an avalanche of books on the United States by foreigners. There seems to be almost as much interest in the development of these United States as in the Communistic experiment which is being worked out in Soviet Russia.

Among the more recent critiques of American life is one by a Frenchman, Georges Duhamel, who pictures for us a very dark future. He believes that our industrial civilization with its mass production and its material prosperity has been developed at the expense of our moral ideals, and that a continuation of the course will lead us on to decadence and doom. He sees nothing in the future but the passing of individuality. All that survives of our early idealism and culture are a few conventional phases and sentences. Despite the reputation for youth, we are already senile and decadent.

We wonder if it can be quite so bad. "Pertinax," the French journalist and correspondent, has been visiting the United States, and he fails to see the dire future pictured by Duhamel. He smiles at our youthful enthusiasms, our passion for bigness, and our emphasis upon machinery as the great thing to be desired. But to him these are the marks of youth, not senility and decadence. He seems to think that we shall outgrow these youthful pursuits, and, finding that they do not get us anywhere, we will find ourselves ultimately following the road of culture and idealism.

The closest observers among our own critics hold the views of "Pertinax." They are not blind to our faults and follies. But they too, see a people who have succeeded in gathering a good many material toys, and are playing with them very hard. By and by, with more years of national life, they expect us to tire of these petty things, and go in for the things much more worth while. We see that working itself out in the country at large. The thriving West smiles at the effete East. The culture of Harvard is spoken of with an amused smile. But down underneath, as we observe farther and farther West, there is a deep desire to get the educational advantages of the so-called effete East. The rich man of the middle West has a desire to send his boy and girl through an Eastern college, and the boy and girl usually go back swaggering with their Eastern accent and their Eastern manners.

A nation's life is very complex. There are forces at work which steady it amid all its wild pursuits. It is as Ferrero, the Italian historian once said, at the time of the Insurance scandals, which brought Charles E. Hughes into the limelight of publicity. Underneath all our corruption and our quest for material success, he said, the old Puritan moral leaven is still at work. The close observer of American life finds himself in accord with that belief. "Pertinax" is nearer to the point than Duhamel. We are young, but we are growing up. With age comes experience. What is a century and a half in the life of a people anyway? We are just beginning to find ourselves.

Those two Brooklyn men who propose to sail to Europe in a big rubber ball will find that even in their simple way it takes a roll to get across.

GIFFORD PINCHOT WINS OUT

The regulars in Pennsylvania have left no stone unturned to sidetrack Gifford Pinchot as the Republican nominee for governor of the state. Finding themselves handicapped by getting only a minority of the votes, they thought they might get him out of the race by questioning the legality of a certain number of ballots of which there were just enough to give the nomination to his nearest competitor, Shunk Brown.

The case was carried up to the Supreme court of the state, and that tribunal found that while the Luzerne county officials took some illegal measures in perforating the ballots used, there was no question but that the voters of that county intended to register their support of Mr. Pinchot. Therefore, the case was dismissed, and Gifford Pinchot continues to be the regular Republican nominee.

A poor loser is a poor sport, and the regulars of Pennsylvania have not helped their cause much by seeking a legal technicality to win out. The people in general believe in a fair game, and we shall be very much surprised if Mr. Pinchot does not come out at the November election with such a thumping majority that will make the opposition to him look very cheap indeed. The governorship in Pennsylvania carries with it a very large patronage, much more so than the senatorship which the regulars won, and of the two we suspect that the regulars would have preferred the governorship to the senatorship. Now their cake has turned to be dough on one side at least, and they are in a great quandary. They might prefer a Democrat to Mr. Pinchot, but they hardly dare to come out in the open for a Democrat.

ANOTHER IDOL FALLS

James Truslow Adams, who has recast so much of American history for us in his three volumes on New England, and whose more recent study of the lives of the Adams family, which has given two presidents to the United States, and many other men of note, including the present Secretary of the Navy, now comes out with an article on John Hancock in the September Harper's, which makes the first signer of the Declaration of Independence look like a very ordinary man indeed. The traditional John Hancock, whose name appears on the Declaration of Independence so large that even "old King George could see it without his spectacles on," goes with all the rest of the heroes who have been debunked. Only, as Mr. Adams says, there was no need of debunking, for he never had a place in American history except by name.

Mr. Adams heads his study of John Hancock under the very suggestive title of "The Portrait of an Empty Barrel." He makes the statement that there was never enough to his life to call out any kind of a biography. He was lucky in the receipt of a large fortune through a relative. His wealth and his social position gave him a place which his ability never would have given him. The astute Sam Adams remarked when he was elected as a representative to Congress that the town had done a wise thing in electing Hancock. "It has made the young man's fortune its own." It was not always certain whether he was on the patriot side or the tory side. When George Washington was appointed Commander of the Colonial army, Hancock was deeply disappointed. He felt that he was fitted for it himself. Though he offered himself to Washington "even as a private," the Commander-in-Chief courteously declined his request by saying that he had no position in the army equal to Col. Hancock's merit. When he resigned as President of the Continental Congress in 1777, a resolution of thanks and appreciation was voted only by the votes of the delegates outside of New Hampshire and Massachusetts where he was best known.

We have often wondered why a name conspicuous as that of Hancock should have attached to it so little of fact to make it stand out in American history. It just goes to show that a name attached to a great historic document like the Declaration of Independence may give fame to a man who achieved very little for the cause with which his name is immortally associated.

Helping the Police

Christian Science Monitor

While there is unmistakably an increasing appreciation for the useful protective activity of the police in American cities, there are occasional reports of interference with officers which indicate that many cities have yet to learn the full significance of the saying that "obedience to law is liberty." One such instance of a condition which demands a remedy is the recent case of a Cambridge (Mass.) man. After helping a policeman arrest a drunken disturber, he was set upon and fatally beaten by a gang of rowdies who had tried to interfere with the officer. Spontaneous support for enforcers of the law should be too strong to permit such a thing to occur.

The commission of crime is bad enough, but worse still are wanton attacks on those performing their duty. Only less reprehensible is the too frequent tendency to laugh at and belittle the efforts of police officers or to sympathize secretly with an escaping offender.

At these times it is the moral duty of every citizen to help to see that the law is respected. The police need and are rightfully entitled to the support of every man, woman and child. The law is not an abstract tyrant to be evaded. It represents the best crystallized and legalized thought of the community for conducting its affairs. While the preservation of law and order depends primarily upon the obedience of the citizens, protection of legitimate occupations and of the pursuit of happiness comes in large measure from the conscientious work of the police.

Children today, more than they did years ago, look upon the kindly policeman as a friend and guardian. Automobilists too have learned that much of their safety rests with the alert traffic officer. Conditions will improve as more persons come to the same realization. And, on the other hand, officers can help win public co-operation by adopting a more co-operative attitude, manifested in greater courtesy and consideration.

Instead of parroting the cry "there ought to be a law" against this or that, citizens of the United States will more quickly solve the crime problem by linking up readily and vigorously on the side of the policeman who is trying to do his duty.

Mechanization Can Be Carried a Bit Too Far

San Francisco Chronicle

Those who look on the machine as a menace to the higher side of our civilization will find support in the announcement that an automatic device has been perfected to supplant the doorman as an institution. We have long looked on the doorman in his gorgeous uniform as one of the saving elements of city life. His deliberate grace has stood out in the hurly burly as a model to be contemplated even if none could hope to emulate his ornamental excellence. And now he is marked to go, to be supplanted by an uninspiring machine.

Evidently the inventor does not understand the aesthetic and ethical values that he attacks with his new fangled contrivance. Had he ever seen Emil Jannings in "The Last Laugh" he would have understood the dignity and social influence of the doorman.

During the current discussion of uniforms for our diplomats abroad we have more than once though of suggesting something on the order of the doorman's trappings. But if those refulgent regalia are to succumb to an automatic device how can we point to them?

Hands off! The touch of glory the doorman gives is needed by the humdrum city street. Not even the movie usher can take his place. Besides, one usually has to buy a ticket before getting a glimpse of the usher's too juvenile grandeur.

EXPLAINING HALL CAINE

There are no "swear" words in the Manx language

The Isle of Manx! The Isle of Manx!
Where folks would look at you with wonder
And faint away if you should say:
"My Gosh!" or "Sugar!" or "Oh, Thunder!"
Where even any British tar
Emitting the most mild profanity,
Would be regarded near and far
As suffering from stark insanity.
In that lone island in the sea
How dull and listless life must be!

The Isle of Manx! The Isle of Manx!
The spot that gave the world Hall Caine,
And all his yarns, yet looks on "Darns!"
With shrugs and gestures of disdain.
Where, when a tourist stubs his toe,
And murmurs "Drat the Luck!" or "Gee!"
Men pale with fear from ear to ear,
Or faint or turn away and flee!
One curse would decimate the ranks
Of all the folk that dwell in Manx!"

The Isle of Manx! The Isle of Manx!
Oh what an Island to be in!
You'd break the law if you said "Pshaw!"
When you fell down and barked your shin.
How do the Manxmen get along?
How do they bear a sorry fate,
If, when they've struck bad runs of luck
They don't know how to imprecate?
No wonder that, from zone to zone
The Isle of Manx is little known!

The Farm Problem Again

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

The "farm problem" persists, largely because farmers persist in raising more produce than can be sold at satisfactory prices.

There is only one cure for this kind of over-production. That cure is the reduction of crop acreage.

How is this reduction to be brought about? The only economically sound way is through the operation of economic law. In the interests of common welfare, those farmers should reduce acreage who are farming at the greatest disadvantage. The high-cost producer should give away to the low-cost producer. Leave them alone, and that is what will happen.

It is happening every day. The most efficient makers of automobiles are putting the least efficient out of business. There is the same struggle for existence among producers of copper, kegs, cotton cloth, tin cans, wood pulp, and thousands of other commodities.

The law of supply and demand, functioning through price, so operates that supply is decreased by the elimination of those producers who are least fit to survive. They are what economists call "marginal producers."

To protect them from the operation of the law of supply and demand is to obstruct the forces which make for higher per capita production and higher standards of living.

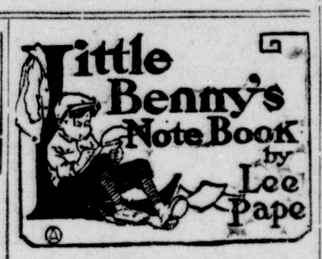

Another way to reduce crop acreage is by direct governmental action. The United States is now trying that method. The Federal Farm Board recommends a reduction of at least 10 per cent in wheat acreage, but expresses the opinion that 20 per cent would be better. The Board also favors a reduction of cotton acreage. The Board makes this recommendation to all farmers, regardless of their efficiency.

The farmers, of course, will not accept this advice. And they should not. Those who are growing wheat at lowest cost should NOT cut down acreage. The reduction should come, as it will come, through the elimination of the marginal producer. This will take place without the advice of the Government.

And it will benefit everybody, including farmers.

In the Long Ago

From The Register Files 14 Years Ago Today

AUGUST 29, 1926

The board of supervisors yesterday fixed the Orange county tax rate for this year at $1.95 per $100 of assessed valuation.

An exceedingly light vote is being cast throughout Orange county today in the primaries, with Santa Ana, the only place where a local election of supervisors is taking place, thus far recording only a few votes.

Little Miss Laurene Sauers, of Tustin, celebrated her birthday anniversary Saturday afternoon with a delightful little party.

Miss Mary Joe Grubb was the hostess at a house party last evening, with a barbeque concluding the pleasant afternoon events, and a theater party at the West End climaxing the evening.

F. W. Slabaugh, who returned a few weeks ago from Omaha, has decided to make Santa Ana his permanent home, and has purchased two lots on North Broadway, planning to begin erection of a lovely new home on one of the lots.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THINGS TO COME

As economic America looks head into the next decade, here are some things that will, I suggest, have to come into the picture if she is to realize a stable and prosperous time.

The ghost of restricted consumption leers at the window as we try to look out across the fields into America's economic future, and yet, as I said yesterday, we are still far short of satisfying the legitimate demands a healthy and civilized folk should be making for goods and services.

The problem before America's economic leadership is to create purchasing power and to get that purchasing power into the hands of the masses so that they can make these demands that health and civilization indicate.

The moment we can begin to recreate purchasing power and to destribute it in the pay envelopes of the working millions, all the pre-market-slump standards of consumption will snap back into play. America is scared for the moment, and, in the light of the basic factors of the American scene, unduly scared. But once the curve starts upward ever so slightly, and keeps going up long enough to let us see it is not a forced flurry of activity, America will forget her market scare. This is a factor of very real hope.

And then, if we can bend our genius as a nation of advertising genius to the task of educating the nation to a maximum of civilized desires, we shall get our stride again.

We must be willing to look the tariff problem in the fact without our political blue goggles to color and distort the issue. There is a whole world outside our frontiers in which millions upon millions of men and women are living far below the consumption level that we have known and that health and civilized values dictate. Great statesmanship, here and abroad, would see to it that the level of civilized living in those under consuming areas was lifted, and that tariffs did not make the lifting more difficult than it is naturally.

Above all, the total economic life of America must be brought under the influence of a leadership that thinks in terms of the current rather the traditional situation.

I think I could pick six American business and industrial leaders who, acting as a directorate of economic America, could rectify and regularize our economic situation in a period of time, the shortness of which would astound us. We need to make epidemic a kind of business thinking that is now exceptional.

OUR CHILDREN

THE RESTLESS CHILD

Grown-up people are anxious and concerned about many things. Their work is very important. They hate to have it interrupted. Sometimes indeed, it must not be interrupted. But what is the restless child to whom activity is the breath of life to do?

"Sit still. Don't you move again until I tell you to. You're enough to drive a person crazy. You haven't been quiet a minute since breakfast. Now you sit there and don't you move."

The poor children who are on a long train journey. Heedless grown ups packed their bags and never gave a thought of what was to be done for the active little body that was going along. Looking out of the window has its limitations, especially if there is no one to look with you and talk about things. Legs and back begin to ache and motion becomes imperative.

"Sit still. See all these people looking at you. No, you can't have another drink. You don't need a drink. Three drinks in ten minutes is silly. No. You can't race up and down the aisles. No. You can't stand up in the seat. Let the curtain alone. Goodness, what a child. Sit still, I tell you."

But the child cannot sit still. Nature is demanding that he be active, that he move about and do something. It is not possible to do much moving about in a train but if one carried a bag full of interesting things for the child to use during the trip, life would be brighter for everybody.

According to the age of the child you select the book, the toy, the game that is to help pass the long hours. Dolls, new ones of course are fine; a nest of boxes with a prize in the last; a funny folding paper favor; a puzzle; a drawing slate; a kaleidoschope; a picture book. It is best to have the things new so that interest in them is stronger.

Little children ought not to be taken to places where it is necessary that they sit still for any length of time. Church is no place for a restless child; a concert or a lecture, any place where the conditions demand silence is not the place for a little child. I have no fear that the child will not get training in sitting still. He gets more of that sort than of any other. The danger lies in getting too much sitting still and not enough activity.

It is necessary, too, to teach a child consideration of others. But making him sit still will not do that. It will make him hate the person who makes his suffer so, and it will make him hate the place that called out the punishing circumstances.

Provide for the child's need for activity, consider well the place and circumstances into which you plan taking him, and remember his need. Don't make him sit still for any length of time. It results in frayed and bad habits.

BATTLE OF BULL RUN

On August 29, 1862, the Confederate forces under General Robert E. Lee badly defeated the Union forces under General Pope in the Second Battle of Bull Run, called by historians one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil war.

Pope, because of his previous good service was put in command of a newly organized force, the "Army of Virginia," intended to operate against Richmond. He moved against Jackson, Confederate general, in the hope he would meet him before re-enforcements arrived. But Jackson had beaten him to it. In this predicament Pope himself asked for re-enforcements and additional supplies of ammunition, but failed to receive them in time.

Pope was severely beaten and his forces driven back. Just 13 months before this, the Army of the Potomac was defeated on the same battlefield. Pope now led his men back to the defense of Washington. The campaign had cost him at least 15,000 men. The Confederate loss was estimated as probably above 10,000. In spite of the Federal rout, General Longstreet, Confederate leader who took part in the battle, declared Pope "made a splendid fight."
